RHETA WYNEKOOP, found dead in the basement of her Chicago home. Police are holding her husband and mother-in-law for questioning.

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP).—Dr. Alice Wynekoop, 62-year-old physician, was ordered held by coroner's officials tonight in connection with the slaying of her attractive young daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rheta Wynekoop.

Detention of the prominent woman practitioner, in whose operating room the girl was found shot to death, was ordered after discovery that the victim apparently had been chloroformed, and other circumstances discribed by Police Captain John Stege as "significant."

These circumstances Capt. Stege listed as follows:

Establishment that the girl was at ease and in the presence of some one she trusted before she was slain.

That she, apparently, laid on the operating table as if ready for a medical examination.

That Dr. Wynekoop had previously given the girl medical examinations.

That no member of the family apparently was in the house at the time the slaying occurred, except Dr. Wynekoop.

That a $5,000 insurance policy had been taken out on the dead girl recently by Dr. Wynekoop, naming herself as beneficiary.

Announcement of finding of the chloroform contents "in sufficient quantities to anesthetize her completely" was made by coroner's physicians after an analysis of contents of the stomach, lungs and other vital organs.

Chloroform "Significant."

Discovery of chloroform in the vital organs of the dead woman, victim of an operating room, spurred on by investigators tonight while Earle Wynekoop, her husband, remained in a police station cell vehemently denying knowledge of the crime.

The presence of the anesthetic in the lungs, stomach and other organs was announced by Coroner Frank P. Walsh.

Wynekoop was placed in a cell

U.S. Makes New Insull Demand

Greece Reported to Have Received Threat of Reprisals.

Athens, Greece, Nov. 23 (AP).—The United States Government has notified Greece in strong terms, it was understood here today, that means must be found to deport Samuel Insull, former Chicago utilities magnate.

The notification from Washington was understood to threaten reprisal in the event the deportation of Insull, wanted on criminal charges in connection with the collapse of his utilities empire, is not effected.

The Greek government was consequently reported to be studying seriously how to fulfill the demand from the United States. Twice he has been declared not subject to deportation by court decision.

The government fears an offense to Greek public opinion if it agrees to deport the financier now.

Word reached here today that Insull's annuity of $21,000 from the utilities company had been canceled.

Milton Jameson Succumbs to Hunting Injury.

Shot by his own gun while duck hunting, Milton Jameson, 18, of Hill Top, Md., died several hours later at Providence Hospital last night.

Jameson's gun caught on his rowboat near La Plata, Md., and discharged into his stomach. The youth was taken to the hospital by Henry A. Penn, of La Plata.

New Treasury Aid Is Dropped By Morgenthau

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Accompanied by unusual circumstances, not fully explained, Dr. Harold M. Groves, University of Wisconsin, yesterday was replaced by Prof. Roswell Magill, Columbia University, as consulting tax expert to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The change was announced by Acting Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., who at the same time revealed that neither Prof. Magill nor any of the four appointees announced by him earlier in the week would be carried on the Treasury pay roll. Instead they will be paid out of funds charged to the extraordinary budget set up for the emergency, Mr. Morgenthau explained, although their duties will be chiefly devoted to the functions of the department.

Mr. Morgenthau, at his press conference, stated three of the four officials he named on Tuesday to take charge of the department would be paid by the Deposit Insurance Corporation and at that time he undertook to defend use of part of the funds, obtained by assessing the banks of the country, for this purpose.

Error, Gaston Says.

Subsequently Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the Deposit Insurance Corporation, denied his group was paying salaries and telephoned Mr. Morgenthau to that effect. Later Herbert Gaston, assistant to Mr. Morgenthau, explained his chief had been in error and that the salaries would be paid out of the $2,000,000 appropriation made by Congress last March to cover expenses caused by the National bank crisis.

As that situation stood at the end of the day, it was apparent that the new supervisory staff, which Mr. Morgenthau is bringing into the Treasury, was being paid out of funds other than those allocated to the department and that these salaries were in excess of those usually paid for similar work in the Government service. These facts were regarded as having a direct bearing on talk that the Federal budget is balanced.

Groves Action Is Surprise.

Mr. Morgenthau's rejection of Dr. Groves and his appointment of Prof. Magill caused surprise, since announcement of the former's selection was made only last week and he had not yet arrived in the city to assume his duties. Dr. Groves was known as a "progressive economist," an adherent of the La Follette faction in Wisconsin and an advocate of high income surtaxes.

During Gov. Philip La Follette's

Liquor Sale in Capitol Cafes Divides Leaders of Congress

Whether liquor should be sold in the Capitol Building after repeal yesterday became the subject of a lively difference of opinion among senators and representatives.

Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, chairman of the House District committee, emphatically favored the sale of spirits and wines at House restaurant tables.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District committee, said he was "frankly disposed against its sale in the Senate restaurant."

Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat, Missouri, ranking member of the House Accounts Committee, which eventually will decide the matter for the House, stated in no uncertain terms he is "against it."

There the issue hung. But it will flare up anew the first week in January when the House Accounts Committee and the Senate Rules Committee are asked to decide the question.

"The District control bill will permit liquor sales in other restaurants," Mrs. Norton reminded yesterday. "I don't see why congressmen should be discriminated against."

Senator King said he thought Congress should show consideration for the feeling of senators and representatives from dry States.

Douglas Tells Of Tax Rise If Credit Falls

Budget Chief, Hinting U. S. Pay Raise, Says He Won't Resign.

Boston, Nov. 23 (AP).—A good national budget, Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the United States Budget Bureau, declared today, "can counteract the bad effects" of whatever monetary policy the Government pursues.

In a speech before the New England conference he declared "the credit of the Government must be preserved" and warned that taxes may be increased.

Douglas smilingly declined to be drawn into an amplification of his statement to newspapermen to permit an expression of his own views on the gold program of the Roosevelt Administration, which recently led Prof. W. M. Sprague to quit as adviser to the United States Treasury.

He did say, however, he had no intention of following Sprague's path by resigning.

"Not Down My Alley."

Douglas, here to address the ninth conference, a semiofficial body representative of business interests in the six New England States, told newspapermen he felt the gold question and that of monetary policy were matters that were "not down my alley."

The budget, which he predicted would be balanced regardless of the extraordinary governmental expenditures, if he could possibly do so, "is the job President Roosevelt has given me and I am going to stick to it," he said.

He emphasized that what he thought of gold was of little importance compared with the job he had in hand, that of keeping Uncle Sam's books in balance.

Warns of More Taxes.

Later, in addressing the conference, he sounded a stern warning that if additional governmental obligations were incurred over and above those now contemplated, "the great middle class, which furnishes the vitality and vigor and moral tone to our body politic, must willingly carry the burden of saving itself from destruction, for continuous and prolonged budgetary inflation means its destruction."

Both in his interview before the address and in his formal remarks, Douglas asserted that the "unimpaired credit of the Government is the foundation of our economic system and must be preserved."

In the same connection, he announced the Government's aim to start retirement of the public debt in the next fiscal year.

"Even though but a small retirement can be effected," he said, "it will be the beginning of the end of the increase in the debt."

He declared it would be his endeavor to keep the recommended

Valparaiso, Chile, Nov. 23 (AP).—French discrimination against American vessels carrying freight cargo from Chile to France via New York was alleged today in official protests made through the American consulate.

Lindberghs To Fly Sea From Africa

Ponta Delgada, St. Michael Island, The Azores, Nov. 23 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh plan to fly over the South Atlantic, it was learned today, on the homeward leg of their five-months' aerial odyssey.

They will take off from Senegal, a French colony in the extreme western part of Africa, and presumably will follow the shortest route to Recife (Pernambuco), Brazil, a trail blazed by Capt. James A. Mollison, Bert Hinkler, Jean Mermoz and others.

The itinerary by which they will visit two more continents on their air survey before returning to the United States was announced unexpectedly by Col. Lindbergh just as the Americans started a short hop from Horta to this commercial center of the Azores.

"We contemplate reaching the American continent," he said, "by way of St. Michael Island, Madeira (Portuguese Islands, 500 miles southwest of Portugal), Lisbon and Cape Verde."

Cape Verde, in Senegal, is the westernmost projection of Africa on the Atlantic, and is a little less than 2,000 miles from Natal, Brazil.

Their Horta take-off was speedy. The colonel made a short run and rose, as effortlessly as a bird, as Mrs. Lindbergh waved in farewell to a cheering crowd.

Cabinet Falls In Paris; Third Budget Victim

Premier Sarraut Defeated on Minor Issue After Confidence Test.

Paris, Nov. 23. (AP).—Suddenly overthrown in a surprise vote after mounting to temporary victory in a test of confidence, the government of Premier Albert Sarraut fell tonight battling for a sound franc and a balanced budget.

After four weeks of life the government was defeated on a minor financial amendment. Deputies voted 321 against 247. A previous vital test gave M. Sarraut a majority of 89.

Concession Brings Defeat.

The center majority group in the Chamber deserted when the premier, after an impassioned burst of oratory, showed weakness by conceding a change he had refused.

Although admitting defeat was imminent, the premier fought his own battle on the floor in a passionate appeal to "save the franc from financial hemorrhage."

"This is November 23 and the budget is not even started," M. Sarraut pleaded. "Bonds are going down. Treasury bonds are not renewed."

His was the third cabinet in succession to fall attempting to save the imperiled franc. The ministry, whose downfall was forecast even before beginning its work, immediately drew up a formal resignation to present to President Lebrun.

Retained for Present.

The ministers received no applause when they walked out of the chamber. After spending 20 minutes drafting resignations they went to the Elysee Palace, where the president received them and asked them to continue for the present.

Immediately the president announced he would begin consultations concerning the formation of a new cabinet at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

Among those mentioned, prominently to succeed M. Sarraut was former Premier Camille Chautemps. present minister of the interior. Former Premier Edouard Herriot, however, always remains a dark horse, although it was still too near the anniversary of the fall of his government last December 15 to assure his selection.

Prisoner Accuses British Army Men

Convicted Officer Charges He Was 'Double-Crossed.'

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—The case of Lieut. Norman Baillie-Stewart, "the Tower of London officer," flared again today when the young Seaforth Highlander virtually accused British army council officials of "double-crossing" him.

Lieut. Baillie-Stewart's charges, contained in a letter to his father, brought a vigorous denial in the House of Commons.

From the prison where he is serving a five-year sentence for alleged violation of the official secrets act, he wrote his father that he invented a confession because he had been told the army council would consider his release if he did.

Johnson Hits NRA Critics; Claims Gain

Business Verging on New Surge Forward, He Tells Atlantans.

Atlanta, Nov. 23 (AP).—Hugh S. Johnson, addressing an NRA rally tonight, called the results obtained so far by the Roosevelt recovery program a "seventh wonder of the world," and assailed its denouncers as "leaders, guides and scouts of the old road to ruin."

Speaking not only of his own division, but the entire recovery enterprise, Johnson said the experiment already "has produced 25 per cent of the results expected of it," and he predicted that business was on the verge of another forward surge.

Foes Called Social Fossils.

This was Johnson's first address as NRA head in the Southeast, and part of his speech was directed specially at Southern problems, but most of it was given over to a new assault on the "tom-tom beaters," the "corporals of disaster" and "discredited leaders of an old economic system—social neanderthalers who are out to stop the recovery program."

He spoke in the Atlanta City Auditorium and the address was carried over a Nation-wide radio hookup.

Predicting a new upturn, he said: "I hold in my hand Dun & Bradstreet's review for November. You can not turn a page of that most intimate of reports without finding the signs of recovery. The full flood of the President's program had not yet struck the country by the end of November, but it will soon be here. Business is on the verge of another forward surge.

Confidence on Upturn.

"The self-serving attacks on NRA have failed. Confidence in it is growing as the industries get the full benefit of their codes. It has borne too hard on some small enterprises. That is being corrected. Using it as an excuse some prices have been raised too far. That is being corrected. Compliance has been too loosely enforced. A Nation-wide mechanism is being set up for that.

"The speed of the various moving parts of the President's whole machine is being equalized. Areas which have been slow in receiving benefits are beginning to feel them. Gains are being consolidated."

Then came his laim of 25 per cent recovery, the "seventh wonder of the world."

Majority Thankful.

"And 'for this relief much thanks' from 95 per cent of the American people," he continued, "but—from the leaders, guides and scouts of the old road to ruin—what? Strident clamoring—a few little men with loud voices, frantically waving puny red flags of false and futile warnings in the path of the resistless advance of a great people—125,000,000 strong—united by suffering in a common purpose, by mutual sacrifice and cooperation and under the inspiring leadership of a great captain of humanity, to march out of the deep dark valley of death and despond, into the sunshine of a new and better day which has already gilded their brows with the light of dawning confidence, faith and hope, for the first time in four years."

Stock Inquiry Cited.

Johnson singled out the "leaders of an old economic system" as gentlemen "adept at divorcing men from their own best interests," referred to the disclosures of the Senate stock market investigation, and said the assailants of the Roosevelt program were "the mouthpieces of the political theory that permitted such practices."

He took up charges of too great spending in the recovery program,

Movie Magnate Testifies He Even Asked Aid From Hoover.

Charging conspiracy against a host of prominent bankers and linking former President Hoover and other Republican leaders with his fight, William Fox—in a recital that outmovied his most extravagant screen production—told Senate investigators yesterday his version of how he had lost control of his huge film enterprises.

The bald, be-spectacled movie financier, a worried frown over his eyes, told his dramatic story with an oratorical flourish that made the day's hearing one of the liveliest in months. He used no figures, he used gestures. He used no technical banking terms, he used movie captions.

"I was forced out of my companies under duress," he said. "It was a conspiracy of those bankers."

Chronological Narrative.

With these words he opened his chronological narrative of all the steps that led to his final selling out of his interests in Fox Films Corporation and Fox Theaters Corporation.

The steps proceeded to the door of Claudius Huston, former chairman of the Republican national committee; of John Francis Burke, former secretary, and finally to the White House and former President Hoover.

Advised by the bankers to purchase 400,000 shares of Loew's Corporation stock, Fox testified that he was assailed by doubts as to the legality of the acquisition.

He said he consulted William J. Donovan, former Assistant Attorney General, asking for a ruling. Later he understood he had a right to make his contemplated purchase, although he had no ruling in writing.

Five days after he bought the Loew's stocks, Department of Justice officials informed him that it was illegal. So Fox said he searched about for some more "intermediaries."

Made Loan to Huston.

He said he found them in Huston and Burke. Burke he retained as attorney, Huston he identified as "a friend of a friend." He did not pay him anything, he asserted, although he loaned him some money for which he still holds his note.

"And I'd lend him some again, too," averred the witness.

But the intermediaries took too long, he said, so he went direct to the White House with his difficulties.

Over the luncheon table President Hoover listened "sympathetically" to Fox's story.

"Then he said I didn't have to talk to Burke or Huston. He said that if what I said was true, he was sure the Department of Justice would realize that an error had been made."

Fox then told the senators that

Johnson Grants NRA Workers Demands for Uniform Leave

One of the demands of the new NRA employes' union, presented to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson this week, was met yesterday when the recovery administrator, before leaving for Warm Springs to confer with President Roosevelt, ordered vacation leave for all his employes similar to that granted by permanent Government departments.

Hereafter NRA employes will be granted leave of 1¼ days for each month worked, or 15 days' vacation each year.

An executive office order said division chiefs might grant the days off at either Thanksgiving or Christmas. A majority of the NRA employes have worked four months, and are entitled to five days' leave during the holidays. Vacations may be taken later, however, if they wish.

Alvin Brown, NRA executive officer, also directed a half holiday November 29, the day before Thanksgiving.

When organization and the demands of the Blue Eagle Lodge, No. 91, American Federation of Government Employes, first came to his attention through exclusive stories in The Washington Post, Gen. Johnson issued a statement promising to remedy injustices caused by hasty organization of the NRA, without taking direct cognizance of his employes' union. The lodge's resolution asking for the leave was presented to him Tuesday.

Officers of the new union last night expressed satisfaction with the leave order, but called attention to their other demands for a 30-hour week, a 7-hour day, Saturday afternoons off and either time off for overtime or overtime compensation.

Total of Chest Now $707,278 As Givers Gain

Lagging $113,000 behind last year in cash, but with more than 4,000 additional givers at this point than in 1932's campaign, the workers of the Community Chest Campaign, at luncheon in the Willard yesterday, heard the general chairman, Frank J. Hogan, report the total to date this year as $707,278, with 29,541 donors signed and 33.3 per cent of the quota in hand

There was a "mystery" guest at the luncheon, a tiny lad of 4 by the name of Earle, who is sheltered from the woes of a parentless childhood at the Children's Country Home. Earle is looming large in Community Chest comment just now because he is the original of the appealing poster of the campaign, the one showing the lad on crutches saying, "I can take it, God, but it is the family I'm praping for."

Held high in the arms of Mr. Hogan and through the lips of the general chairman, Earle displayed the abiding grace of gratitude as he was quoted.

"It's the things of the heart that count. I would like to throw my arms around the neck of every one of you, for if it were not for you I do not know what would become of me."

Little Earle was neatly dressed in brown and his tiny crutches raised a lump in many a throat. But he was enjoying it all, the crowds, the smiles, the applause and—best of all—that cherry tart topped with whipped cream with which the meal was concluded.

By a coincidence, Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, was a U. S. Acts to Welcome Any Rule Holding Public Support.

By Leon Dure, jr.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 23.—President Roosevelt tonight moved toward recognition of any representative Cuban government in a friendly statement which announced the early replacement of Ambassador Sumner Welles by Jefferson Caffery, now Assistant Secretary of State.

The United States, he declared, "will welcome any provisional government in Cuba in which the Cuban people demonstrate their confidence." He added his hope that by "(peaceful agreement) such a government will be established.

Welles to Return.

Ambassador Welles, now in Washington, will return to Havana in a few days and then, completing his mission in the near future, will return to Washington to resume his former duties as Assistant Secretary of State. Mr. Caffery, who had previously been mentioned for the Cuba Ambassadorship, will go there in an exchange of positions.

The President's statement, issued close to midnight, was regarded as distinctly favorable to the Grau government in that it disclaimed prejudice "against any faction or individual in Cuba." Because of its support of the fallen De Cespedes government the United States had been considered by some Cuban factions as hostile to the present regime.

While no official protest was ever made against Ambassador Welles, his activity in behalf of the former government was thought to have placed this country in an awkward position with the Grau government. The appointment of Mr. Caffery as his successor will go far toward recognition, it was believed.

Agreeable to Welles.

Only last Sunday Ambassador Welles conferred with the President here, emerging from a five-hour conference with instructions to return to Havana after reporting at the State Department. It was known, however, that the Ambassador was extremely anxious to be relieved of the Cuban assignment, believing

$7,204,410 Tax Refund Given

Paramount Film Firm and Subsidiaries Found Overassessed.

One of the largest income tax overassessments on record was determined yesterday, when the Bureau of Internal Revenue ruled the Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation and 15 subsidiary theater chains had been overcharged $7,204,410 in 1929.

The bureau previously had considered the film-and-theater group had failed to pay sufficient taxes for that year. On examination of returns, it was determined too much had been assessed.

The predecessor of the company, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, also was found to have been overassessed $75,000.

The subsidiary groups included the A. H. Blank Circuits, the Connecticut Operating Co., the Imperial Theater Co., Mountain States Theater Corporation, Olympia Operating Co., Olympia Theaters, Inc., Publix Enterprises, Inc., Publix-Iowa, Publix-Nebraska, Publix-Ohio, Rhode Island Theaters, Inc., Southern Enterprises of Texas, Tennessee Enterprises and Toledo Paramount Corporation.

The overcharges, the bureau said, were caused by assessing taxes against the subsidiaries which also were collected from the parent company.

Morgenthau In Peace Move At Treasury

Holds Out Olive Branch to Douglas, Black in Policy Tilt.

The storm over Administration monetary policy abated slightly yesterday as Acting Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., held out an olive branch to Gov. Eugene Black, of the Federal Reserve Board, and Director of the Budget Lewis Douglas, and the dollar along with Government bonds rallied on fresh rumors of impending "stabilization."

Mr. Morgenthau left last night to visit President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., and talk over the next moves in the gold-buying, commodity price lifting experiments.

At a Treasury press conference, the Acting Secretary volunteered cordial and complimentary comments on Gov. Black and Douglas, whose views coincide with those of Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, James P. Warburg and Bernard M. Baruch, erstwhile Presidential advisers, who have openly taken to the war path against the present policy and the commodity dollar of Prof. George F. Warren.

Promises Cooperation.

Remarking that he had the highest regard for Douglas and felt this sentiment was reciprocated, Mr. Morgenthau added "I expect to work with him shoulder to shoulder in reducing Government expenditures." He said he did not mean this to imply that Douglas was to be excluded in the future from discussions on monetary matters. Douglas meanwhile was making an address in Boston asserting his "conviction that the credit of the Government must be preserved."

Asked if he expected Douglas to remain, despite rumors of impending resignation, the actual but not titular Treasury chief said: "I can not say what Mr. Douglas will do. All I can say is that I am looking forward to working in close cooperation with him."

Similarly volunteering commendation of Gov. Black, the Undersecretary and Acting Secretary said: "I have the greatest respect for the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and I think that is mutual."

Will Not Ask New Ruling.

Citing that, under the rulings of the Reserve Board's counsel and an Attorney General in a previous administration, the Undersecretary of the Treasury is not eligible to sit with the Federal Reserve Board, Mr. Morgenthau explained that he was entirely satisfied with the rulings and that he had no intention of asking Attorney General Cummings for a new ruling.

The note of conciliation, after the clash with Prof. Sprague and Mr. Warburg, both of whom quit as advisers in protest against monetary measures, seemed to betoken a changed attitude on the part of the Administration, as did the moderation of the Treasury "censorship" rules which had been imposed by Mr. Morgenthau, apparently at the instance of the President.

Added to these evidences of an effort to pour oil on waters, political and economic, that were becoming menacingly turbulent was the fresh intimation of early "stabilization," in the sense of revaluation of the dollar. New York banking firms were reported to be advising clients to cover sterling accounts with dollars, on the theory that the gold price raising is to be stopped immediately.

President Unchanged.

However, there is no evidence that the President is any less enthusiastic about Prof. Warren's commodity dollar. Just how the step can be made from the present stage of gold buying to actual devaluation of the dollar and an effort to regulate it by varying the gold content remains a puzzle which no official undertakes to explain.

There is still a belief among some of the dissenters that the President will not try to take the next and most difficult steps—that, in fact, it is impossible yet as commodity prices are still too far below his declared goal. Gov. Black remarked significantly yesterday, "I don't quit in the middle of a fight." And Douglas was quoted, in Boston, as saying he did not expect to resign.

Satisfactory Trend.

From the White House standpoint the general trend contiuues to be satisfactory, as reflected in the commodity price index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which shows an index number of 71.7 for the week ended November 18, compared with the low point of 59.6 for the week ended March 4 last.

Beer Gang Deposits Is Put at $2,192,250

"Waxey" Gordon Falls Asleep in Tax Trial.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—A mass of figures, records and ledger sheets was produced by the Federal Government today as it sought to prove that $2,192,250 went into bank accounts of "Waxey" Gordon, reputed beer baron, and his henchmen during the period in which he is accused of having evaded income tax payments.

Gordon sat back in his chair, yawned and fell asleep as witnesses described the strange disappearance of deposit slips of his alleged accounts in five New Jersey banks from March 12, 1930, to April 1, 1931.

Touhy Defense Move Fails.

St. Paul, Nov. 23 (AP).—Stalemated by Federal Judge M. M. Joyce's rulings, counsel for four Chicagoans charged with the William Hamm, jr., kidnaping failed today to impeach a Government witness' identification of Gustav Schafer, Roger Touhy and Eddie McFadden.

Budget Director Says Aim Is to Cut U. S. Debt Next Year, but Warns That Middle Classes Face New Tax Burden.

Boston, Nov. 23 (AP).—Following is the text of the address today of Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas before the ninth New England Conference:

Mr. President and members of the New England Conference:

It is with a sense of embarrassment that I appear here this afternoon. My embarrassment is due, in addition to my own lack of inclination to speak, to the fact that my remarks will be confined to an uninteresting subject. And yet, because of its implications, to a subject which has profound repercussions upon human values and the economic welfare of our country.

If I may, I should like to revert to March of this year. At that time, the deflationary forces whose energies had been dammed up by artificial methods, but whose outward expression had continued with great momentum, finally broke through the obstructions which had been created. The banking moratorium was the result. The credit of the Government had become impaired.

Damage Repaired.

The Administration, among the first of its acts, repaired the impairment of that credit. The actual expression of the repairment was the economy act. With the credit so repaired, the Government undertook certain expenditures which it considered to be socially and economically necessary, and it divided those expenditures into two categories; the first, over which the Bureau of the Budget had control, being those incident to operations of the permanent agencies of the Government; the second, over which the Bureau of the Budget had no control, being those having to do with the so-called emergency expenditures.

This division did not set up, as has been so commonly stated, two budgets, and as evidence of the veracity of this statement, I refer you to the Treasury daily statement, in which you will find but one deficit—a deficit arrived at by comparing total expenditures with total receipts. The division was made for the purpose of convenience both for the Government and for the public, so that both might have full knowledge of the purposes for which Government money was being expended.

Figures "Exaggerated."

"I have seen exaggerated statements of the cost of the Administration's emergency recovery program. They have ranged from 7 to 11 billions of dollars. In this connection, I should like to take a few minutes to analyze the purposes of these expenditures, the extent to which they increase the national debt and the amount of the increase in the National debt which can prudently be estimated to be on account of loans which will be repaid, based, of course, upon the assumption that there will be a recovery from the present depression.

The increase in the National debt is due, in some measure, to the expenditures for direct relief—the relief oi the unemployed and the destitute—relief to prevent cold and starvation.

No one with a sense of social responsibility can object to those expenditures in the light of a demonstratedly inadequate private and local mechanism.

Discusses Credit.

The second object of these expenditures was that of attempting to place our banking system in a strong position. This was important and still is important. Ninety per cent of the business of this country is done upon credit. It was, and is essential, eherefore, that the credit system be made strong. But, more than that, a substantial amount of the deposits of our citizens had become unavailable in closed banks. It seemed not only socially, but also economically wise and important that, to the extent to which it could prudently be done, a portion, at least, of these deposits be released to the depositors to whom they belonged. This, too, was, and is essential, therefore, that respect to which few will disagree.

The third purpose for which these expenditures were made was that of public works on the general theory that they would bring some relief to the heavy industries and consequently create some additional employment.

The final objective of these expenditures is the attempt to support the price of agricultural commodities during the period in which it was to be hoped the effects of recovery would become evident.

Predicts Debt Increase.

Predicated upon the present estimate of expenditures for these purposes and for the purposes of operating the normal agencies of the Government, the National debt in the fiscal year, 1934, will be substantially increased. Because of certain still undefined policies of the Government the amount of the increase in the National debt can not now honestly be stated. Of the increase, however, approximately 2½ billions of dollars will be paid by the liquidation through a period of years, of loans made by the Government.

At the present time, this is as accurate and as honest a statement of the budgetary position as can be made, at least insofar as the fiscal year 1934 is concerned.

With respect to the fiscal year 1935, it is the aim of the Bureau of the Budget to send to Congress estimates of expenditures and appropriations to meet them in the amount of less than $2,600,000,000, exclusive of sinking fund requirements.

Hints U. S. Pay Raise.

Because there is no present way to estimate what the cost of living will be during the fiscal year in question, these estimates assume the restoration of full pay to Federal employes.

I say exclusive of sinking fund requirement because in times like these, when National income is diminished, the test of a balanced budget is whether there is an increase in the National debt. Under these circumstances it is merely an accounting procedure to increase one's National debt so that one may reduce it by a corresponding amount.

It is for this reason that debt retirement is not included in the figure which I have just given, but which will be included in the budget statement; nor are payments under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration included, for the reason that processing taxes are assumed to be adequate to meet such payments. Interest on the public debt, however, and all other expenditures incident to the normal operation of the departments of the Government are included in it.

But the aim of the Bureau of the Budget is more than that of holding the expenditures of permanent operating agencies of the Government to the figure which I have just given you. The aim also is to begin to retire public debt in the fiscal year 1935. Even though but a small retirement can be effected, it will be the beginning of the end of the increase in the debt.

Three Billions Expected.

It is now hoped that the revenues for the fiscal year 1935, assuming a moderate recovery—which stated in more concrete figures assumes a 10 per cent increase in industrial activity over this year—will amount to $3,550,000,000, including revenues flowing from the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

May I interpolate that the recovery here assumed depends upon an increase in price incident to an increase in the volume of business and upon a free flow of capital into legitimate business enterprises. Both of these are important, the first, for obvious reasons; the latter because the heavy industries, in which approximately 62 per cent of our unemployed is now concentrated, depend upon a capital market.

As I have said, for the fiscal year 1935 the normal operating expenditures and the budget which the bureau will recommend will be approximately $2,600,000,000, while the anticipated revenues will be approximately $3,550,000,000. Subtracting one from the other, there remains approximately $1,000,000,000, with which obligations on account of emergency operations incurred this year, but which must be met and paid for in the fiscal year 1935, can be liquidated.

If, therefore, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation completes its task this year, and if no additional emergency obligations are undertaken, our objective can be attained. But if additional obligations are contracted, then (this is a sad subject) additional taxes must be imposed.

"Gaps Must Be Closed."

The gaps in the old tax law must be closed so that the wealthy may not escape. And, in addition, and I say this in all sincerity, the great middle class of this country which, after all, furnishes the vitality and the vigor and the moral tone to our body politic, for its own preservation, must be willing to subject itself to the taxes necessary to finance the additional emergency obligations incurred, if they are incurred. There are no other alternatives. Either no additional emergency expenditures can be made or the middle class must willingly carry the burden of saving itself from destruction, for continuous and prolonged budgetary inflation means its destruction.

Insofar as I personally am concerned, it is my conviction that the credit of the Government must be unimpaired. It must be preserved. I shall continue to this end.

Mr. President and members of the New England conference, it has always been my belief and is now, that a public official, to the extent to which the public welfare is not damaged, has imposed upon him the responsibility of disclosing the truth insofar as he knows it, and within the limitations of his ability. This I have today attempted to do.

Nation Faces New Tax, Douglas Says

expenditures for the fiscal year 1935 down to $2,600,000,000 and added that estimate assumed full restoration of pay to Federal employes. Douglas told the gathering that the amount of increase of the national debt in the present fiscal year "can not now honestly be stated."

His estimate for the fiscal year 1935 (starting July 1, 1934) was exclusive, he said, of sinking fund requirements and payments under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, but did include interest on the public debt.

Several times he emphasized what he said was the important part recovery would have to play in a balanced budget. His estimate of revenues for 1935, he asserted, "assumes a 10 per cent increase in industrial activity over this year" and would amount, he predicted, to $3,550,000,000, including revenues flowing from the repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

Depends on Price Rise.

"Recovery here assumed," he said, "depends upon an increase in prices incident to an increase in the volume of business and upon a free flow of capital into legitimate business enterprise.

"Both of these are important, the first for obvious reasons; the latter, because the heavy industries, in which approximately 62 per cent of our unemployed is now concentrated, depend upon a capital market.

"I make this interpolation," he said, "so that there can be no misunderstanding, the Bureau of Budget is fully aware of all the implication and ramifications of the assumptions here made."

The difference between the $3,500,000,000 in anticipated revenue and the estimated $2,600,000,000 in expenditures would be applied to "obligations on account of emergency operations incurred this year, but which must be met and paid for in the fiscal year 1935."

New Treasury Aid Is Dropped By Morgenthau

tenure in Wisconsin, Dr. Groves served as his State tax commissioner and was credited with plugging up the holes in that State's tax law, chiefly as it affected corporations. When he was named tax consultant to the Treasury under the Woodin-Acheson regime, it was understood he would do similar work in the Federal field.

When asked the reason for the change, Mr. Morgenthau appeared reluctant to explain, asserting, "Now, how shall I put it—I want to be fair to him." He read over a letter on his desk and then said there were two reasons why Dr. Groves had been dropped.

Wants His Own Man.

"First, I think I can say Dr. Groves could not qualify under the Civil Service Commission," Mr. Morgenthau continued. "Secondly, I thought I would rather have somebody of my own choosing."

He said that Prof. Magill was the "outstanding number one tax expert in the country and when an expert is needed you might as well get the number one man." Moreover, Mr. Morgenthau added, "Prof. Magill's name will not be on the pay roll of any corporation."

"Was Dr. Groves in the pay of any corporation?" he was asked.

"I don't know," he replied.

Asked if Prof. Magill had been qualified by the Civil Service Commission, Mr. Morgenthau replied he did not have to be. In reply to an inquiry as to why civil service qualification was necessary for Dr. Groves and not for Prof. Magill, the Acting Secretary said "we are going to put him on some other pay roll."

He said he had not decided on which pay roll he would place Prof. Magill, but it would not be that of the Treasury Department, since there was no appropriation for salary for such a post. It was then that he identified the four other officials in the department not on the Treasury pay roll.

Three Paid $10,000.

Mr. Morgenthau said his new assistant for administration and personnel, William H. McReynolds, was receiving $8,500 a year from the Farm Credit Administration, where he previously held a similar post.

Earle Bailie, the new Assistant to the Secretary in Charge of Fiscal Affairs; Herman Oliphant, the new general counsel to the Secretary, and Mr. Gaston, the assistant in charge of press relations, were each receiving $10,000 a year from the Deposit Insurance Corporation, Mr Morgenthau explained, adding that the salaries were subject to the regular 15 per cent Federal pay reduction.

Incidentally, it was announced by Chairman Fletcher of the Stock Market Inquiry Committee that as the result of a letter from South America he had directed committee investigators to reexamine the details of Peruvian bond flotations in this country by the firm of J. and W. Seligman & Co. Mr. Bailie was a partner in this firm until his appointment to the Treasury this week.

It was understood the letter charged that the whole truth about the Peruvian bonds had not been told two years ago in the Senate Finance Committee's foreign bond inquiry.

Mr. Morgenthau was asked what he thought would be the reaction of the banks throughout the country that were being assessed to pay the expenses of the deposit insurance corporation to the news that Treasury officials were on the pay roll.

Promises Service to Banks.

"I don't think they will object because we shall give them service for their money," he replied. "These officials will be working in large part on the banking problem and that will benefit all the banks. I think we'll give them full service for their money."

Mr. Morgenthau said that while three of his four new "assistants" were receiving the same pay as they were in the Farm Credit Administration, they were getting more than the regular Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury. He said his own salary was the same as those of his assistants.

Meanwhile, the Treasury order militarizing its police force was put into effect. Each platoon of guards, as it came on duty, was lined up in one of the corridors and inspected by F. A. Birgfeld, the chief clerk, who addressed the guards at length on the necessity of showing attention to superiors, being neat about their persons and being courteous.

Morgenthau Goes South.

The modified press censorship order was said to be in preparation, but it did not appear during the day. Mr. Morgenthau left late in the day for Warm Springs, not to be back until Monday.

Mr. Morgenthau said he did not know Prof. Magill's tax philosophy. Such information was not available in other quarters. Prof. Magill was 38 years old November 20. He was educated at Dartmouth College and Chicago University. He practiced law in Chicago from 1920 to 1926, meanwhile serving as a special attorney for the Treasury and joining the Columbia faculty, where he has been professor of law since 1927.

In 1927-28 he was a tax adviser to Puerto Rico. He is the author of several books on Federal tax laws and business organization.

Text of "Sound Money" Plea

Federal Reserve Board Advisory Council Condemns Inflation With Warning of "Untold Losses to Great Masses."

The text of the resolution adopted by the Advisory Council of the Federal Reserve Board early this week, opposing currency inflation and recommending monetary stabilization, follows:

"While the council is in sympathy with the general purposes of the Administration, it believes these are not to be accomplished by a currency of fluctuating values.

"The members of the Advisory Council believe:

"1. That a higher price level is beneficial only if accompanied by higher natural income, and that can only be brought about by increased volume of business and increased employment.

"2. That a depressing and fluctuating currency value will not adjust existing discrepancies in the price level.

"3. That as long as there is uncertainity in regard to the future value of the monetary unit there can be no lasting or fundamental improvement in business.

"4. That this uncertainity tends and has tended to depress the market price of Government securities and corporate and municipal bonds, which, in turn, has affected and will continue to affect adversely the entire economic structure and thus stand in the way of recovery.

"5. That unless there is monetary stabilization it will become increasingly difficult for the Government to finance its large commitments for reconstruction purposes and to refinance its maturing obligations. The resulting uncertainty will especially affect and cause great uneasiness among the millions of wage earners, savings depositors and holders of insurance policies. It will further diminish the flow of capital into the investment field, and it is this money which is used largely for the purpose of financing the production of capital and durable goods. It is in these fields that unemployment has been most difficult to overcome. The existing uncertainty has already caused capital funds to leave the country, to be invested in foreign securities and deposited in foreign banks.

"6. That no monetary standards can be finally and permanently satisfactory until other important nations have taken similar action and that such international action is extremely improbable on any other than a gold basis.

"7. That history shows that the further currency inflation goes, the more difficult it becomes to control and that it invariably results in untold losses to great masses of the people and the ruin of national credit.

"In view of the opinion above reported, the Federal Advisory Council believes that in the reestablishment of our currency bases on gold it may well be coupled with safeguards to be agreed upon by international action."

Kansas Senate To Try Official

House Votes to Impeach Attorney General in Bond Fraud.

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 23 (AP).—Impeachment of Roland Boynton, State attorney general, was voted tonight by the House of Representatives as an outgrowth of the Kansas million-dollar forged bond scandal.

The vote, by voice, was approximately 5 to 1. Speaker W. H. Vernon appointed a committee to draft formal articles to be presented to the Senate.

Resolutions urging impeachment of Boynton and Will J. French, State auditor, on charges of misdemeanor were introduced by a special committee which investigated the bond scandal. There was no accusation, however, that Boynton had any connection with the forgeries, for which Ronald Finney, young broker, and Tom Boyd, former State treasurer, face both State and Federal charges. French's case will come up later.

Warren W. Finney, banker and father of the broker, was convicted by an Emporia, Kans., jury recently on charges of embezzlement.

and recalled that the World War cost the United States something like 42 billions.

Of Southern problems, Johnson said NRA "got no violent shock" when industrialists of the South asked a 30 per cent wage advantage "because of the lesser efficiency of the labor they employ."

"It is the first time," he observed, "that I ever knew of a community boasting that any section of its people are inferior to a corresponding group in any other part of the country.

"You may be certain that the North will not win its contention for a universal wage scale and the South will not get its 30 per cent differential."

Johnson again criticized the agitation over freedom of the press, asserting "that Constitutional provision can no more be waived than is the right of habeas corpus or, in fact, of citizenship itself."

"Jafsie" Backs Crime Fight

Lindbergh's Intermediary in Kidnaping Talks to Senate Group.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" intermediary in the Lindbergh kidnaping, told the Senate subcommittee on racketeering today that Federal agencies should be used to a greater extent in the suppression of crime.

Called by Senator Royal S. Copeland, chairman, who had expressed fear of an era of bargain kidnaping after repeal of prohibition, Condon referred to the abduction of the infant son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh on March 1, 1932.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith told the committee he believed in advertising the consequences of crime for the benefit of youths who flirt with the electric chair.

"I believe in advertising," said Smith. "I think it would be money well spent to lay before the potential criminal just what he is going to get himself in for."

New Orleans Mayor Admits Gang Methods

Testifies Armed Men Were Held Ready to Aid Overton Vote.

New Orleans, Nov. 23 (AP).—Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, supporter of Senator John H. Overton, today told the Senate committee investigating Overton's election that a group of 75 men was kept at Overton's headquarters on election day to be sent out to the polls if necessary to see that "their side got a square deal."

They were not needed that day, he said, and early in the evening they were paid off. This is a common practice in New Orleans, where, he said, the Choctaw Club, which he described as a political and philanthropic organization of which he is the active head, had lost only one or two elections since its organization in Civil War days.

"Strong-Armed Fellows."

"Strong-armed fellows?" asked Chairman Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas.

"Yes, if necessary," replied Mayor Walmsley.

"Who paid them? Is there a minimum wage for them?"

"No, they are not in the code," said Walmsley. "I do not recall who paid them."

Mayor Walmsley explained that his Choctaw Club had joined the Long political organization in the Overton campaign and that he did not believe Overton would have carried the city but for the Choctaw Club's support.

"You have a pretty good organization, haven't you? Somewhat like Tammany?" asked Chairman Connally. "She clicks, she functions. If it doesn't, off go their heads."

"That's it," said Mayor Walmsley.

Independent of Long.

He said his club operated independently of the Long group and that "Huey P. Long does not control a single ward leader in New Orleans."

The mayor said he was influenced to join Long by the plea of New Orleans bankers for political peace and the necessity of getting a bond issue to refinance the city. He said he and Long had had "plenty of scraps" since their coalition.

Mayor Walmsley admitted his organization made use of dummy candidates, but said in his opinion "it was poor public policy and should be prohibited by law."

Committee Accused.

The subpena for the mayor followed the appearance on the witness stand of Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, militant chairman of the women's committee of Louisiana, seeking to oust Long and Overton from the Senate.

She charged the Senate Committee with neglecting the financial end of the campaign, demanded that both Long and his political treasurer, Seymour Weiss, be called to give more facts on expenditures and insisted that some official of the Choctaw Club be called for examination.

Extension Requested.

After Mrs. Hammond left the stand a group of citizens appeared with a petition for a further extension of the hearing either to include sittings elsewhere in the State or subpenas for country witnesses to testify here.

The group, which included former Gov. R. G. Pleasant and District Judge Nat Tycer, said they could present "hundreds of reliable and unimpeachable witnesses" to testify to wholesale "fraud and corruption" in the primary.

Caffery Will Replace Welles In Cuban Recognition Move

that it could be carried out better by another representative.

Explaining the United States' refusal so far to extend recognition, President Roosevelt said: "We have not believed it would be a policy of friendship and of justice to the Cuban people as a whole to accord recognition to any provisional government unless such government clearly possessed the support and the approval of the people of that republic."

"We feel," he added, "that no official action of the United States should at any time operate as an obstacle to the free and untrammeled determination by the Cuban people of their own destinies."

"Friendly Concern."

The text of the President's announcement follows: "During the months which have passed since the fall of the government of President Machado, we have followed the course of events in Cuba with a most friendly concern and with a consistent desire to be of help to the Cuban people.

"Owing to the exceptionally close relationship which has existed between our two peoples since the founding of the Republic of Cuba and in particular because of the treaty relations which exist between our two countries, recognition by the United States of a government in Cuba affords in more than ordinary measure both material and moral support to that government.

"For this reason we have not believed that it would be a policy of friendship and of justice to the Cuban people as a whole to accord recognition to any provisional government in Cuba unless such government clearly possessed the support and the approval of the people of that republic. We feel that no official action of the United States should at any time operate as an obstacle to the free and untrammeled determination by the Cuban people of their own destinies.

Good-Neighbor Role.

"We have been keenly desirous during all this period of showing by deed our intention of playing the part of a good neighbor to the Cuban people. We have wished to commence negotiations for a revision of the commercial convention between the two countries and for a modification of the permanent treaty between the United States and Cuba.

"On the economic side, we have been hopeful of entering upon a discussion of such measures as might be undertaken by common consent between the two Governments which would redound to the benefit of both the American and Cuban people.

"No progress along these lines can be made until there exists in Cuba a provisional government, which through the popular support which it obtains and which through the general cooperation which it enjoys, shows evidence of genuine stability.

Prejudices Denied.

"As has already been officially stated, the Government of the United States has neither partiality for nor prejudice against any faction or individual in Cuba. It will welcome any provisional government in Cubain which the Cuban people demonstrate their confidence. We earnestly hope that in the near future, through a spirit of compromise on all sides, the Cuban people themselves will reach a peaceful agreement which may result in general support of a government and thus avoid continued civil disturbance with its attendant tragic loss of life and grave prejudice to the social and economic interests of the republic.

"Ambassador Welles is returning to Havana within the next few days. As previously announced, upon the termination of his mission, which will be in the near future, he will return to Washington to resume his former duties as Assistant Secretary of State, and will be replaced by Mr. Jefferson Caffery, now serving as Assistant Secretary of State."

Gold Attacks Ignored.

The President remained silent tonight in the face of rising criticisms of his monetary policy, while he planned to discuss the money question with Acting Secretary Mongenthau tomorrow.

Every indication was that the President regarded as relatively unimportant the recent series of outbreaks against his gold-buying operations, and there seemed no basis for the belief he might be moved to modify the present Administration program.

This he intends to push forward, it was confidently believed, despite the discontent of bankers and others feeling the effects of an unsettled dollar. However strong opposition might grow, the President, aware of his prestige, is thought to be confident that a simple appeal to the country will crush any uprising.

Attacks Not Unexpected.

Criticism by James P. Warburg, New York banker, recalled his connection with the American delegation to the London Economic Conference. Both Warburg and Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, who resigned Wednesday as special adviser to the Treasury, served as financial experts whose advocacy of stabilization was repudiated by the President. Their attacks, therefore, came from not unexpected sources.

There was reason to believe the Administration feels the gold issue might become one between "conservatives' 'and "liberals," the "conservatives" being those who oppose experimentation. The President has already paid his respects to that class in his two recent speeches, characterizing them as intolerant "Tories."

Rankin Praises President.

But if reaction was unfavorable in the East, at least one endorsement came from the South today with the visit of Congressman John E. Rankin, of Mississippi. The latter declared:

"We are with the President 100 per cent in his efforts to restore commodity prices through the readjustment of our obsolete monetary system by revaluation of the gold dollar. Two outstanding achievements will carry President Roosevelt's name down the centuries; his readjustment of our financial structure and his saving for the American people of one of our greatest national resources, the hydroelectric power in our navigable streams through creation of the Tennessee Valley Authority."

Mr. Rankin was here to invite the President to visit his home town, Tupelo, in case he goes by Muscle Shoals on the return trip to Washington. Tupelo, he pointed out, is the first city to sign a contract with the T. V. A. and "we are making a drive now to carry this cheap power into every home in northeastern Mississippi."

Will Speak Friday Night.

Another visitor today was Miss Martha Berry, founder of the Berry Schools, near Rome, who had luncheon with the President and his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt.

Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson is due tomorrow, and other Administration leaders will follow later.

The President spent another day of rest, enjoying a swim during the morning with his secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre, and others, and going for a motor ride. He will speak again Friday night, when he accepts Georgia Hall on behalf of the Warm Springs Foundation, but reports that he would use the occasion to reply to critics or "reassure business" were unsupported.

Mrs. Wynekoop Kind Woman, Says Physician Friend Here

Holds Killing Connection Impossible, "Unless She Was Insane."

The mother-in-law of Mrs. Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, Chicago beauty, questioned in the latter's mysterious slaying, was classified yesterday by a Washington physician as a philanthropist and a woman of high intelligence.

Dr. George L. Knapp, of the 3500 block of McKinley street northwest, whose family employed her late husband, Dr. F. E. Wynekoop, as physician, said yesterday in referring to Mrs. Frank E. Wynekoop, the mother-in-law:

"I have never known a kinder or more intelligent woman than Mrs. Wynekoop. Her brains were far above the average. Moreover, she was a real philanthropist and raised two children besides her own. She did much work in Chicago among the poorer people."

"It's quite impossible that she had anything to do with the death of her daughter-in-law unless she was insane and she certainly wasn't when I saw her in Chicago several years ago."

Dr. Knapp said he had known Mrs. Wynekoop for 13 years, during which her husband had been his family physician.

Referring to a letter which Mrs. Wynekoop wrote and never mailed, saying she had "seen" Dr. Knapp and her husband in conversation in the office next to the operating room where the young woman was found slain, Dr. Knapp said:

"Mrs. Wynekoop never displayed any signs of mysticism or spiritualism beliefs during the time I knew her."

Noted Woman Physician Is Held After Autopsy Shows Chloroform.

after he had been questioned at length by Capt. John Stege. He said he was miles from Chicago between 3 and 6 p. m.—during which time police believe his wife was shot to death.

Dr. Alice Wynekoop, mother-in-law of the girl, previously had admitted she frequently gave the girl medical examinations. She and other members of the family had advanced the theory that the slain woman was the victim of a moron's attack.

Fixes Slaying Time.

Capt. Stege said further that the evidence gathered so far indicated definitely that the girl had been slain between 3 and 6 p. m.

The only member of the family who admits being in the house during that period was Dr. Wynekoop, Capt. Stege said. She told the police she came home from a walk at 5:30 p. m.

The handy man about the house, named Van Pelt, was in Glencoe, painting the home of Walker Wynekoop, a brother-in-law of the slain girl. Miss Hennessey, a boarder, had not yet returned from the school where she teaches. Earle supposedly was en route to Kansas City. Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, a sister-in-law, was at her place of employment in a local hospital, Stege said.

Officers, however, planned further questioning of Earle, who was lodged in a cell for the night. He was not charged. Taken to the station for questioning after his arrival from Kansas City during the day, the young man, after denying any connection with his wife's death, admitted being friendly with Miss Priscilla Wittl, who also was questioned.

Wynekoop, according to Capt. Stege, said that for the last five months he and the victim had not lived as husband and wife.

"Rheta had only a high school education," Earle was quoted by Capt. Stege as saying. "I am a college man. That's why we didn't get on so well. She wasn't up to my scholastic attainments."

The girl whom he had met at the Century of Progress Exhibition while they were both employed there last summer said she loved him and had expected to marry him on his return from the projected three months' trip to the Grand Canyon. She had been with him on a "date" until 1:30 a. m. Tuesday, the morning before his wife was found slain.

Miss Wittl was not held.

"I didn't know he was married until I read the newspapers about this terrible thing," she said. "He was a nice fellow, but very unhappy. He seldom went home. Although it never was stated in so many words, I considered that we were engaged to be married."

Evades Police at Trains.

While police watched every incoming train from Kansas City for him, Wynekoop jumped off at a South Side station and proceded by street car after telephoning his mother, under police surveillance at their home.

"Of course not," he snapped, when a policeman asked if he was Earle Wynekoop upon his return to his mother's home. Neighbors refuted his denial, and he was taken to the Fillmore Street Police Station for questioning.

Wynekoop apparently shared his mother's theory that Rheta was slain by a moron who attempted to attack her, but that was not the opinion of Detective Chief William H. Shoemaker.

"The solution of the murder, I am sure, lies between the mother and the missing husband," Shoemaker said. At the time Earle had not returned.

A chemical analysis of the victim's stomach content was said by Dr. Virgil Gant, a coroner's physician, to have established definitely that Rheta had eaten no dinner before she was killed.

Dr. Gant placed the time of Rheta's death at between 3 and 6 p. m. Dr. Wynekoop told police she returned home at 5:30 p. m., and Miss Enid Hennessey, a boarder, entered the house at 6 p. m.

Husband Offers Alibi.

Earle presented an alibi of having started, hours before his bride met death, for Arizona to take photographs of the Grand Canyon for advertising purposes.

As he entered the police station, Wynekoop stood face to face for a moment with B. H. Gardner, of Indianapolis, the grief-stricken father of Rheta. Neither spoke.

A close police guard was maintained over the Wynekoop home, allowing no one to enter or depart. Among those in technical custody was Dr. Alice Wynekoop, waiting to see her son, her love for whom was shown in a letter written to him but unmailed and found in the house.

Coroner Frank J. Walsh announced he had learned that Dr. Wynekoop on November 2 obtained a second insurance policy, one for $1,000, on Rheta's life, had paid $5 for a two months' premium, and had made Earle and his sister, Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, beneficiaries. A week ago Dr. Wynekoop bought a $5,000 policy on Rheta with herself named beneficiary.

A letter telling apparently of an attempt by Dr. Alice to communicate with her dead husband was found in the home. Addressed to a close friend of the late husband, it read, in part: "I put on my dressing gown and shoes and came down to the office—and sat and 'talked' to my dead husband for half an hour."

Kansas City, Nov. 23 (AP).—An alibi for Earle Wynekoop, held for questioning in Chicago in the slaying of his wife, was furnished here today by Stanley Young, his companion and business associate.

Asked by police whether he believed Wynekoop could have had anything to do with the killing, Young replied:

"It was impossible, physically, because he was with me all day Tuesday."

"Commodity" Bill Was Worth $1.69 March 4.

The "commodity dollar" was worth $1.39 last Saturday, Department of Labor statistics on wholesale commodity prices for that date showed yesterday. Wholesale prices reached a new high in the upward trend that started nine months ago.

The index number on November 18 was 71.7, using the 1926 average as 100. This means a dollar now will buy commodities that would have cost $1.39 in 1926. The increase in the index number was one-half of 1 per cent over the number for November 11. March 4 the index number was 59.6, and a year ago it was 64.2. In terms of the commodity dollar, this means such a dollar was worth $1.69 March 4 and $1.56 a year ago.

Six of the 10 major groups used in averaging commodity prices showed an increase. These are farm products, foods, hides and leather products, metals and metal products, building materials, chemicals and drugs. Products showing a decrease are textiles, fuel and lighting and house furnishings.

Huge Deficits Major Menace To Solid Franc

By Andre Vulliet.

The permanence of budgetary deficits to which the successive French governments seem incapable of putting an end may, in the long run, bring about psychological reactions more detrimental to the stability of the franc than the present outflow of gold.

On one hand, public expenditures have swollen from 37,000,000,000 francs in 1926 to well over 50,000,000,000 francs in the present budget. Lamoureux, former finance minister, terms this increase "the inevitable inflation of public expenditures," as a consequence of laws voted and appropriations made improvidently in the time of prosperity.

On the other hand, receipts, affected by the depression, have not followed pace and are now well below estimates. Thus, the deficit computed by different experts is somewhere between 6,000,000,000 and 8,000,000,000 francs.

Now, the normal ways of covering a budgetary deficit are by either a rise of receipts through increased taxation or a decrease of expenditures through economies. When neither of these steps are taken, which is the case now in France, the deficit of the budget becomes permanent. Since the expenditures are permanent, too, what can not be covered by regular receipts must be made good through borrowing or inflation.

So far, the French government has resorted to the former system.

Since April of this year the needs of the treasury were covered by two issues of ten-year notes aggregating 8,300,000,000 francs. Moreover, the total amount of floating notes (very short-term notes of two years or less), which was 26,500,000,000 francs in September, 1932, has considerably extended since.

Previous Crisis Cited.

In 1926, during the crisis of the franc then, there were 48,500,000,000 francs of such short-term notes maturing at the average rate of 7,500,000,000 francs monthly. The meeting of these maturities became a recurring danger, each time more difficult to overcome. The credit of the government was so impaired that its bonds were quoted on the basis of a 10 per cent yield. It could no longer obtain funds through long-term borrowing. The floating debt maturities had to be met with paper currency printed by the Bank of France and advanced to the government. This was the process of inflation in France.

The present situation is by no means comparable. Nevertheless, the fact that the last 4½ per cent conversion loan of September, 1932, is now selling at 82 per cent, reveals that the long-term credit of the Government is somewhat impaired. France, with a gold currency, finds it more difficult to borrow than England whose currency is detached from gold and likely to fluctuate freely.

This proves, as the financial writer of Le Temps puts it, that "except for its current Treasury needs, the state can not keep on borrowing 10,000,000,000 francs or more yearly. Aside from the burden thus dangerously added to the budget by such loans, the realization that the deficit is becoming permanent would tend to annihilate confidence."

People Would Rise Up.

For once the resources of borrowing had dried up or become too difficult, the resort to inflation would become inevitable. Such a move would probably stir up all the inner feelings of the French against inflation and provoke a flight from their own currency. That, and that only, could force, in the long run, the government to put an embargo on the yellow metal, thus departing from the gold standard.

The whole process would take time to develop. Technically, the gold stock of the Bank of France can stand a long strain. Psychologically, it seems that even those French who wish to fly from the franc find it difficult at present to find a stable currency in which to invest their money. But eventually the situation may change. Within a few months England or the United States may become a safe refuge for the sacred capital of the world. Nobody can tell.

That is why, if the gold franc is to remain the basis of France's monetary policy, the solving of her budgetary difficulties is of paramount importance. For, as Herriot clearly put it, it is a choice "between budgetary devaluation or inflation."

Britain Held Ready to Fight Fall of Dollar

Exchequer Head Declares England to Protect Its Markets.

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, made it plain today that the British government has done nothing to date to combat the fall of the American dollar below its old parity with sterling, but that it is prepared for action if necessary.

"The depreciated American dollar has not, up to the present time, seriously affected British trade," Mr. Chamberlain told the House of Commons.

Asked whether he was satisfied with the present position of the British exchange equalization fund and how its book position compared with that of last year, the chancellor replied:

"The answer to the first question is affirmative. With regard to the second, I can not undertake to publish such information, as it would not be in the public interest."

Walter Runciman, president of the British Board of Trade, announced in the House of Commons, meanwhile, that England would put a higher tax on French goods unless France removed its surtax on English goods—"roughly equivalent to the amount of discrimination against British goods by France."

The United States dollar, meanwhile, experienced a substantial recovery in late exchange market dealings and touched $5.26 to the pound. Later, it receded somewhat to end the day at $5.28¼.

The improvement was due to an unchanged gold price.

The French franc quotation, which had been weakened by further selling, was well supported toward the end of the trading and closed in after-hours dealings at 83.21 francs to the pound, the day's best rate. Earlier the franc had been quoted at 83.93, compared with yesterday's finish at 83.53.

It was understood that a group of Swansea business men protested to Runciman against both the dollar and blocked marks, maintaining that South Wales would suffer severely unless protective measures were taken.

The board of trade president was urged to prevent contracts being made on the basis of a cheap dollar, it was learned.

He was said to have been warned by the British Chamber of Commerce in Buenos Aires that Great Britain faces the loss of her preferred markets in Argentina because of the fluctuations of the dollar and the German mark. Cheaper prices of British goods were urged by the Buenos Aires representatives as a solution to the problem.

In some quarters it was believed that increased tariffs would be instituted to offset any benefits accrueing to United States exporters through the fall of the dollar.

In this connection, Mr. Chamberlain told the House of Commons that representations could be made to the tariff advisory board. He said the dollar fluctuations in some instances had wiped out tariff protection.

Sir Edward Davson, chairman of the association, said today the aim of President Roosevelt was "to depreciate the dollar in an endeavor to raise the internal level of commodity prices."

"If the United States' policy," Sir Edward added, "does not bring a commensurate rise in commodity prices, the result can only be a fall in world prices and serious dislocation of the markets within the empire. The results are already apparent in the unsettlement of empire markets.

"Any serious consequences to the primary producer must, in turn, react on the demand from overseas for the United Kingdom's manufactured goods, which themselves would already be suffering from the increased competition by the United States."

Nazi Order Hits Jewish Doctors

Berlin, Nov. 23 (AP).—The severity of measures against Jewish medical men was increased today by a supplementary law canceling contracts of non-Aryan doctors and dentists or Aryans married to Jews, who are working for state and municipal sick benefit institutions in towns with over 100,000 population.

They will be barred in the future except in cases when the Jews are sons of men who died in the World War.

A new exception to the law also was made "for reasons of equity" in the cases of non-Aryan women doctors whose husbands were killed in the war.

Illinois Inn Keeper Held For Murder of 3 in Italy

Aurora, Ill., Nov. 23 (AP).—Santo (Sam) Virruso, 30, part owner of the Old Heidelberg Inn, Aurora, was taken into custody there tonight by Deputy U. S. Marshal R. D. Holcomb at the request of the Italian consul in Chicago on a charge of three murders.

Holcomb said Virruso was wanted in Italy for the slaying of Antonio Romano, November 16, 1922, and for the later killing of Romano's two brothers.

Merging Coast Guard in Navy Roosevelt Aim

To Recommend Measure Despite Mystery and Protests of Plan.

Merging of the Coast Guard with the Navy probably will be recommended to Congress by President Roosevelt, it was said at the Little White House last night.

A general plan for uniting the two forces has been forwarded to the President at Warm Springs, Ga., for his study, to the apparent mystification of authorities at Washington.

The Coast Guard, with its sterling record of lives saved and smugglers run down, obviously is not anxious to become a part of the Navy. Coast Guard officials, it was learned, had their first intimation of the scheme when they read about it in newspapers.

Likewise, the Navy disclaimed responsibility. Secretary Swanson said he had made no recommendation to the President, but otherwise the Navy kept silent.

Regardless of the protests of the nautical officials, it was stated at Warm Springs that the President is ready to recommend the consolidation. The ostensible reason is economy of operation, although there is little duplication of service. At present, the Coast Guard is a unit of the Treasury Department.

Has Fine Record.

The outstanding record achieved by the Coast Guard has made it anxious to preserve its separate identity. In addition to its aid to shipping and life-saving work, the Guard is charged with the revenue enforcement work of the Treasury on the sea coast and the suppression of smuggling and rum running.

Its function as a customs guardian is primarily that of a Treasury unit guarding National revenue. What the Navy would do about this branch of the work is not explained, but it has been suggested that the Guard could be made a branch of the Navy similar to the Marine Corps. However, orders woud be taken from the Navy Department instead of the Treasury, which does not appeal to the independent heads of the Coast Guard.

Guard Greatly Reduced.

Recent drastic economies in the Coast Guard have cut down its forces substantially, and about 1,700 officers and men have been laid off. Advocates of the merger say the Guard would furnish an outlet for Naval officers trained at Annapolis, only about half of whom now receive commissions because of the lack of berths for them in the Navy.

Navy authorities have expressed a traditional distaste for such policing work as the Coast Guard does in suppressing rumrunning and smuggling. Should they take the Guarded over, howev r, they will have to forget their dislikes as Guard authorities anticipate the greatest wave of rumrunning ever seen following repeal.

It also was suggested the Coast and Geodetic Survey and Lighthouse Service to be merged with the Navy, but nothing was said about these branches at Warm Springs.

Commissioners Indorsed.

The new District Commissioners were indorsed last night at a meeting of the D. C. Democratic Central Club at 1007 U street northwest. I. W. Bennett, president of the club, presided.

Wensel's Team Leading.

Three teams are in a neck-and-neck race for first place in the Federal Bridge League, with the Bureau of Standards Phychems holding a slight edge. The Phychems, captained by Harry T. Wensel, last season's champions, are leading with 91.5 boards won and 49.5 lost. The others in the leading quartet are J. R. Branham, W. G. Brombacher and Walter Bockstahler.

The race for pair honors is even closer than team competition, with R. C. Power and H. M. Pearson, of Treasury, leading. J. C. Link and W. R. Stevens are close seconds.

Johnson Taking 22 Codes to Roosevelt

General Says Ford Is No Longer 'Concern of Mine.'

Atlanta, Nov. 23 (AP).—Carrying 22 codes ready for the signature of President Roosevelt, including those for the motion picture industry and radio broadcasting, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, arrived here late today en route to Warm Springs.

The general was expected to bring the newspaper code with him but he said that would come later. He said the code was ready for his consideration and that only some technical matters were to be ironed out.

Johnson said Henry Ford's motor industry had complied with the recovery act and no longer was "any concern of mine." Johnson said the Detroit automobile manufacturer had come within all provisions of the act.

Eighteen alleged Communists were arrested at Santiago and sent to Havana under soldier guard.

LaGuardia To Ply Broom In New York

Many Tammany Offices and Bureaus Due for Elimination.

A political house-cleaning such as New York City never before has known was forecast yesterday by Fiorello H. LaGuardia, mayor-elect.

Maj. LaGuardia, who is here to confer with civil and public works officials and agricultural department heads, predicted his political appointments after January 1 will be startling.

"They'll be good appointments," he said, smiling, "but I'll be the most unpopular man in American politics."

As to details, Maj. LaGuardia was profoundly silent, but he indicated the first of next week will find him figuratively with his sleeves rolled up, a tight grip on a brand new political broom-stick and his bright, bird-like eyes on Tammany cobwebs.

Old Bureaus To Go.

Abolition of many offices and bureaus, long the pigeon-holes of Tammany patronage, will be one of the Republican-Fusion mayor's objectives.

Not only the broom-stick, but the night-stick will be swung vigorously in New York City after the first of the year, Maj. LaGuardia said. Referring to AAA provisions to prevent racketeering in the distribution of Federal food supplies, the mayor-elect said:

"We'll supply those provisions with night sticks. We'll take care of racketeering."

Maj. LaGuardia plans to devote the first few days following his return to New York today to matters concerning civil and public works appropriations. Then he will turn to the business of paring the city's budget.

When his attention was called to New York advices indicating the 1934 budget already had been pared to the bone, the mayor-elect shrugged his squatty shoulders impatiently, and said:

Literacy Test Hinted.

"There may be some difference of opinion over what I consider unnecessary, overlapping and duplicating offices and bureaus. I already have made my survey, and am ready to take up the matter of eliminating many offices. In some cases, I'll need legislation; in others, constitutional amendments; some can be taken care of simply by not filling the office. As for those holdovers I can't get rid of in any other way, I may apply the literacy test."

Regarding New York City salaries, recently drastically reduced, Maj. LaGuardia said:

"I'm going to demand a full day's work for a day's pay. That will be a reduction in itself in many cases."

Following conferences yesterday with Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Civil Works Administrator Hopkins, LaGuardia announced:

"I am certain of full cooperation and sympathetic understanding of our problems from Secretary Ickes and Mr. Hopkins. We will be ready to put our plan into operation within 24 hours after I take office."

$25,000,000 Loan Probable.

Pleading he was "not yet mayor," LaGuardia refused to discuss relief and civil works projects for New York City in detail, but said one of the Federal advances would be approximately $25,000,000 to complete the municipal subway and he thought creation of an airport on Governors Island was probable.

"One thing you can be sure of," he exclaimed, "and that is there'll be no political nonsense either on this end or at my end in the allotment or administration of Federal funds."

Maj. LaGuardia lunched with Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, and discussed AAA cooperation in the matter of milk and marketing.

"You know," he remarked, "New York eats, too."

There is no possibility of the Republican-Fusion organization in New York putting up a candidate for Congress next year, LaGuardia said. As for himself, he was emphatic, declaring:

"I am out of politics — National politics—for four years."

Pinchot Tax Plan Angers Distillers

Threat to MoveOut of State Follows Program.

Unlike the bloody insurrection that sent 13,000 Federal troops into the State 142 years ago to quell an uprising over a tax of 7 cents a gallon imposed by Congress, the present flare-up is having the effect of closing whisky plants.

Claiming that taxes being pushed through the Legislature by the State's dry governor, Gifford Pinchot, will ruin them, the distillers are threatening to move to other States.

Italy Reiterates Armament Policy

Government Is Confident Accord Possible.

Rome, Nov. 23 (AP).—An official communique today "reconfirmed" the confidence of the Italian government that the big powers can achieve a world disarmament agreement through diplomatic negotiations.

"Italy, pursuing the line she has consistently followed, is ready now as before to devote all her efforts to reach an accord which will be an expression of a policy of effective collaboration among all these states," the statement said.

Approval was also given of the adjournment of the disarmament conference at Geneva yesterday.

Mrs. L. P. Lowe Passes at 82

Husband Was Once Chief of Fire Department; Rites Tomorrow.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Rose Lowe, 82, widow of Louis P. Lowe, at one time chief of the Washington Fire Department, who died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Louise Manning, 439 Quincy street northwest, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the home. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Lowe, a native of Washington, was the daughter of John Ennis, who came to Washington from Ireland in 1830. Mr. Ennis was a contractor and among the projects which he undertook was the grading of the Capitol plaza several years before the Civil War.

Mrs. Lowe lived in Georgetown until the death of her husband. She was a member of Peck Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church and was active in the affairs of the church.

Park Savings Officials Sued By Depositors

Liability for Bank Loss Laid to Directors in Test Case.

Seven former directors of the closed Park Savings Bank were sued in District Supreme Court yesterday by three depositors, who seek to hold them responsible for an estimated shortage of $2,000,000 in the bank.

The defendants are Wade H. Atkinson, 1402 M street northwest; Charles W. Bolgiano, 607 E street northwest; L. T. Brueninger, 1511 K street northwest; G. W. Forsberg, Eighth and Water streets southwest; C. F. Jenkins, 5502 Sixteenth street northwest; A. F. Jorss, 1220 Twenty-fourth street northwest, and George W. White, National Metropolitan Bank.

The suits, filed by Attorneys E. Hilton Jackson and William E. Richardson, are expected to be forerunners of approximately 50 more if the depositors win in this test action.

Those who filed suit were Fannie L. Crittenden, 1708 Newton street northwest, $4,250.38; Annie Stout, same address, $2,313.97, and Margaret C. Barber, 1661 Park road northwest, $2,103.03.

They allege that as the charter for the Park Bank expired in August, 1929, the directors were, after that date, "liquidating trustees" and that the directors were "jointly and severally liable" to stockholders and depositors. Each of the three plaintiffs deposited their money after the charter expired.

The bank is now being liquidated by John M. Moran, appointed receiver by the Treasury Department. The bank was closed after Robert Stunz, former executive officer, killed himself last March. To him is attributed a shortage of $1,500,000 and about $400,000 in addition is blamed upon poor loans.

G.O.P. Leaders Linked by Fox In Stock Fight

Movie Magnate Testifies He Even Asked Aid From Hoover.

the two Republican leaders advised him to get in touch with Louis B. Mayer, head of the California Republican committee, who held a manufacturing contract with Loew's.

"This contract netted Mayer $3,000,000 in 1929 and 1930," said Fox. "He naturally didn't rejoice in my acquiring these 400,000 shares of Loew's. He was afraid his contract wouldn't be renewed, and it was the most important thing in his life.

"When I met Mayer in New York he told me he was violently opposed to the purchase. But I told him I would like to retain him and that after the merger was effected I would pay him $2,000,000 cash, which would have been about the fair amount for him to receive on the original sale of the block of stocks. Needless to say, Mr. Mayer was very well pleased."

Talks of Changed Records.

When Fox told Mayer about his difficulties with the Department of Justice, the Californian, according to the witness, told him he knew all about it, that he had the record changed and could have it done again.

"Well, when I heard that, I felt ashamed of being a citizen of the United States," said Fox, fervently, rubbing his head with his handkerchief.

Questioned more closely by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, about the purported changed records, Fox said he had no personal knowledge of such a change, but that if the change had been made, he would be tempted to say that Mayer had not done it. He said he believed Harley L. Clarke, president of the General Theaters Equipment Corporation, holding company formed to purchase the Fox interests, might have been responsible.

Fox said that he had met Clarke through Harry Stuart, one of the firm that acted as bankers for the Fox interests. After writing a letter of introduction, however, Fox said Stuart told him to look out for Clarke, that "his word is no good."

Refers to "Unseen Hands."

Consistently calling them "fillums," and frequently making references to "unseen hands," "cataclysms" and "miracles," the one-time movie magnate spent a long time giving details of the origin of Grandeur Corporation, organized to market large screen projectors.

The agreement proposed by Clarke included $900,000 working capital, the gift to Fox of 50 per cent of the stock, purchase of the Mitchell Cameron Lamp Co., and the assumption of all patents, investments and good-will which Fox had put into the development of the new large screen idea.

Next, acting on the advice of John Otterson, of the American Telephone Co., Fox purchased for $20,000,000 stocks in the British Gaumont Co., which owned 300 theaters in England.

This, added to his Loew's purchases, raised Fox's liabilities to $93,000,000.

Wiggins Was "Santa Claus."

"I began to wonder why the bankers urged all these purchases," he said in a conversational tone. "Were they acting in good faith? Was this Wiggin's method of enriching himself?

"At the time I didn't realize that Wiggin was in on this. It wasn't until everything went on the rocks that I realized that he was the Santa Claus."

After the October, 1929, stock market crash, Fox's troubles became acute. Hard-pressed by brokers, he went out to borrow $6,000,000. He said Clarke, his "old friend," who had told him to come any time he was in trouble, refused to lend him the money.

All the banks refused his request, he added.

But he was rescued by Warner Bros., who bought his First National Pictures stock for $10,000,000.

After all the banks of New York began to "grab" his companies' deposits, Fox decided he had better have lots more lawyers. So he went to his only bank friend left, Bernard K. Marcus, former official of the Bank of the United States, and now in jail. He referred Fox to the firm of Charles Evans Hughes.

When the bankers pressed Fox to create a voting trusteeship, Hughes advised him to do it, said Fox. Later Hughes was retained as counsel for the trustees and abandoned his connection as Fox's personal representative.

Promise From Hayes.

After another futile attempt to secure further loans, Fox said he thought he was saved by Will Hays, who told him a friend of his was willing to buy his voting shares for $33,000,000.

"And that friend, I learned later, was Harley Clarke," declared the witness, swinging around in his chair to face the banker, who sat directly behind him.

Fox's peroration was a dramatic recital of an anxious Monday morning when Clarke had promised to arrive before the banks opened with commitments for $6,000,000 with which Fox could meet calls for more margin from his brokers.

Fox recited his torture from 8:45, when Clarke was due, until 9:56, when he was rescued by his attorney, who had obtained the money from the Eastman Kodak Co.

Clarke did not show up until 10:30, without the money and with apologies for being late.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Hatfield (Republican) W. Va., in a statement yesterday said President Roosevelt was on the highway to monetary ruin and asserted that "but for economic theorists running wild, we might now be well out of this depression, as is the case in England."

Hatfield said the greatest game of politics in American history was being played with the taxpayers' money and that the Administration had gone "dole mad."

"It will do no good for the Presiden to petulantly hurl the gibe of 'tory' at his critics," Hatfield said. "It is he, and not his critics, who occupies the exalted position comparable to that of Royal George III, backed by Tory courtiers, the army and navy, and all the panoply of state. * * *

"Gone Dole Mad."

The Administration has gone dole mad. It is attempting to purchase the sufferance of millions of destitute and unfortunate citizens at the cost of their liberty.

"We can not go on forever spending ten billions a year. The end to such madness is Government bankruptcy. It will pauperize the Nation."

Imploring Mr. Roosevelt to "turn back from the brink of monetary disaster," Hatfield said only the President could now stop inflationists.

"I point out to him," said Hatfield, "that he is on the same treacherous highway that brought Louis XIV to monetary ruin through paper assignats, which, though they were poured out by the billions, failed to save France.

"It is the poor and humble people of this Nation who will be hit hardest by inflation. It is the small man who has suffered most from the depression, who will be buried up to his eyes in an avalanche of wall-paper money. The rich can take care of themselves.

Declares Billion Exported.

"Indeed, they have already done so. At least $1,000,000,000, and possibly $4,000,000,000 of American capital, has already winged its way to foreign shores in flight from the depreciating dollar."

Hatfield said that wages could not possibly keep up with the "soaring inflationary spiral," and that the plight of the workers would be all the more desperate by reason of "the regimentation that fixes prices, the hours and the days they shall toil."

"In every age, in every country fiat money has been tried," he continued, "it has produced only bankruptcy and ruin. Inflation will not save the farmers, either the thrifty or the improvident. On the contrary, it may force upon them the nationalization of all land. * * * For the farmers, inflation is the road to tenancy and peonage, raids by roving bands of hungry men and possibly martial law."

Half-Price Sale Of Opera Seats To Close Today

Post Allotment Almost Depleted, but Tickets Will Be Available.

Today is the last day seats may be purchased on The Washington Post half-rate plan for performances of the International Opera Company.

Washington has responded with unparalleled enthusiasm to the opportunity presented by The Post to purchase seats at half the box-office price and The Post's allotment of tickets is almost exhausted.

A decision was reached last night, following a near-capacity house for the popular "Aida," to continue the sale of tickets at half price today to each Post reader applying at the Stieff Piano Co., 1340 G street northwest, even though the day's sales may extend well beyond The Post's block of seats. However, no tickets will be sold at The Post half-price after 5:30 p. m., when the downtown box office closes for the day.

Full Price at Box Office.

After that time tickets may be purchased for tonight's performance of "La Traviata" at the box office at the Auditorium at the usual scale of rates of 55, 83 and 99 cents.

Sale of tickets for "Il Trovatore" tomorrow night and "Faust" Sunday night, and the special "Aida" matinee tomorrow afternoon for high school children will continue tomorrow at the Stieff company and tomorrow night and Sunday at the Auditorium. The "Aida" matinee prices are 25 and 40 cents.

The lobby of the Auditorium began to fill at 7:15 last night for the performance of "Aida," long lines forming promptly at the box office. By curtain time the first floor was filling to within the last few rows. Because hundreds of persons in the lobby were unable to enter the Auditorium by curtain time it was necessary to delay the start 20 minutes.

Capacity Houses Cited.

Officials of the Auditorium Corporation, present throughout the week, said the "full house" of 3,000 persons on the first floor Thursday night was a remarkable manifestation of interest in grand opera, and cited smaller houses attracted by a wide variety of other forms of entertainment in the last few years.

"La Traviata" will bring Emily Day in the role of Violetta, Ugo Martinelli as Alfredo Germont, Giuseppe Martino-Rossi as Giorgio Germont, Elizabeth Girard as Flora, Lloyd Harris as Baron Douphol, and Eugenio Prosperoni as the Doctor.

Untermyer Defends Fee.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Samuel Untermyer, in a statement today, described as "entirely reasonable" the $1,000,000 fee he and his associates received in the Fox Film litigation.

Evidence of the payment of the fee, and also one of $520,000 to the law firm of Charles Evans Hughes for legal services in the fight of William Fox, former theatrical magnate, to save his threater properties, is in the hands of Senate investigators in Washington.

"It is true," Untermyer's statement said, "that my firm received, at one time or another, for the firm and myself and for the lawyers which it became necessary to associate with us in this series of most heated, intense and widely ramified litigations in the Federal and State courts during the brief history of their duration, a total of $1,000,000, of which my share was $570,000.

"Of this total $50,000 was paid by the Fox Film Corporation and $50,000 by the Fox Theaters Corporation as original retainers."

Special Election Called.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP).—Gov. Lehman today called a special election in the thirty-fourth congressional district for December 28 to select a successor to the late Representative John D. Clarke (Republican), who was killed in an automobile accident on November 5.

Tonight's Opera

LA TRAVIATA.

Opera in three acts; music by Giuseppe Verdi, libretto by Francesco Mario Pieve, based on the play, "La Dame aux Camelias" ("Camille"), by Alexandre Dumas, the younger. First performed March 6, 1853, in Venice; in the United States, December 3, 1856, in New York.

The scene is laid in Paris; the period is 1850. In the first act, Violetta Valery, a courtesan, is hostess at a dinner. Alfredo Germont is introduced to her as her latest admirer. When the guests move into the adjoining ballroom, Alfredo remains behind to tell Violetta that he has long loved her. She replies that she is not worthy of his affection and begs him to go. He persists in his suit, saying that he will return.

Writes Farewell Note.

The second act takes place at a villa near Paris where Violetta and Alfredo have been living in secluded happiness. Alfredo learns from the maid that Violetta has secretly sold her jewels to keep their establishment going. He hurries to the city to obtain money. In his absence his father calls on Violetta to ask her to give up his son. He tells her that Alfredo's younger sister is about to be married and there must be no scandal in the family. Out of love for Alfredo she agrees to depart. She writes a note of farewell. When Alfredo receives this note he misunderstands it and thinks she has abandoned him to take up her former way of living.

The scene changes to the salon of Flora, a friend of Violetta. A merry party is in progress, and there are gaming tables. Among the guests is Alfredo, who begins to play cards with extraordinary luck. Violetta enters with Baron Douphol. The baron joins the card game and loses to Alfredo. A quarrel follows and a duel seems imminent, but guests intervene.

Begs Him to Leave.

Violetta asks Alfredo for a word apart. She begs him to leave the house at once. He asks her if she loves Douphol. When she untruthfully replies that she does, Alfredo calls the guests together, cries, "I call you to witness that I have paid her," and throws his purse at her feet.

In the last act, Violetta, heartbroken and in retirement, is dying of tuberculosis. She receives a letter from Alfredo's father in which he informs her that Alfredo now knows the truth about her sacrifice and is soon coming to see her. "Too late," she murmurs. She realizes that her illness is fatal, and muses on her vanished happiness. A moment later Alfredo enters and asks forgiveness, which is gladly granted. But the joy of meeting is too much for Violetta, and she collapses. Alfredo's father comes with a physician, but there is no hope for her. She dies in her lover's arms.

"Aida" Brings Opera Group Best Triumph

Record Crowd Applauds as Ponselle, Ransome Add New Laurels.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

If the auditors assembled last evening in the Washington Auditorium for "Aida" were impatient at the tardy rise of the curtain, the explanation is due them that there was still a line at the box office when Gabriele Simeoni finally lifted his baton for the overture. The attendance was the largest thus far in the engagement of the International Opera Company, and enthusiasm matched the numbers.

Ample cause for the salvos of applause lay in the performance, which was the best that the organization has presented, not excepting their "Carmen." In keeping with the pageantry of the opera, the personnel was augmented, and the mise-en-scene elaborated. The ballets in the first and second acts were given in their entirety, and the manner of their execution was a credit to the premiere danseuse, Lisa Gardiner, and her corps of assistants.

Ponselle in Good Voice.

Carmela Ponselle, in the role of Amneris, presented a new aspect of her histrionic art. With the insignia of royalty she donned the air as well, and her impersonation had dignity, poise and authority. Both as the despotic princess and the jealous woman she was dramatically convincing, and her emotional gamut was equal to the intensities demanded of it. She was in excellent voice, and sang with clear fluency.

Edward Ransome, as Rhadames, had some difficulty at first in warming his voice to the tessitura of the role. The "Celeste Aida" aria, which is always a trying occasion for a tenor, proved no exception with him. His voice has a trace of huskiness, and he could not hold the climactic top note. But thereafter he improved in clarity and flexibility, and his singing in the last two acts was effective.

Star Seemed Nervous.

Ruth Coleman also started in the title role with what seemed to be a handicap of nervousness. Considerable vibrato and unsteadiness of breath control were noticeable in her reading of "Ritorna Vincitor." These faults became less and less apparent as she proceeded, and her singing gained in emotional control. Her characterization had appealing qualities in its naivete and unaffectedness.

Although the name of Ciro de Ritis appeared on the program, it was Giuseppe Martino-Rossi who took the part of Amonasro. Whatever the reason for the change, it was an advantageous one. The more impetuous temperament of Martino-Rossi fitted the role of the haughty and vengeful Ethiopian with nicety, and he sang his lines with a fine vigor and resonant timbre.

Simeoni Returns.

The basso part of Ramfis was assigned to Amund Sjovik, who again demonstrated his competence as singer and actor. His powerful voice was in its best form, and his delivery had the gravity of the priestly rank he assumed. The minor parts were taken by Eugenio Prosperino (The King), Bernard Poland (Messenger) and Carlotta Bruno (Priestess).

The return of Gabriele Simeoni to the conductor's stand after a night's absence was evident in the vitality of the performance. There had been some dragging of tempo in "Rigoletto" the evening before, but nothing of the kind happened with the dynamic young maestro in command.

C. W. A. Check Handling To Provide New Jobs

Several hundred new clerks will be taken from the reemployment lists of the Civil Service Commission to handle pay checks for employes of the Civil Works Administration, the Treasury announced yesterday.

No definite estimate of the number to be employed could be made, but the Treasury's calls will not exhaust the reemployment registers. The work is expected to last about six months.

'Adventure'

Boy 'Gold Seeker' Warned by Police Judge.

George Mockabee's quest for gold, which led him into the home of a policeman and subsequently Police Court, was terminated yesterday with a warning from Judge Isaac R. Hitt to seek his gold through business channels.

The 18-year-old boy was dismissed when the Rev. Charles Einders, of the Lutheran Angelical Church, testified Mockabee had a "misplaced sense of adventure."

Mockabee was charged with entering the home of Policeman John J. Leu, 3100 Whitehaven street northwest, November 14, because he had been told "there was gold on the place."

Mockabee, who lives at 1371 East Capitol street, had been free on $500 bond.

Commissioners Expected to Start Conference on Bride Plan Tuesday.

Draft of a proposed liquor license law for the District was submitted yesterday to Commissioner George E. Allen by William W. Bride, corporation counsel, and will be taken up by the full Board of Commissioners probably on Tuesday.

Commissioner Allen refused to make public the draft submitted him, saying he believed it should be withheld until it is given to the full Board of Commissioners. Details of the draft, however, were set forth in The Post yesterday.

Public hearings are to be held by the Senate District Committee about December 15, Senator William H. King, its chairman, said yesterday following a conference with Mr. Bride.

Senator Welcomes New Views.

The senator said the Bride draft, which has frequently been revised to meet suggestions and objections advanced by various interested elements, was very comprehensive. He refused to say that a licensing bill would be approved. Consideration will be given to a Government-controlled dispensary system, the Senator added.

All views on the subject will be welcomed by his committee, the chairman said.

Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, is planning to push a licensing law through the House the second day of the session. Speaker Henry T. Rainey has promised special recognition for the liquor law.

Approval of the plan was voiced yesterday by heads of local trade organizations.

Colliflower Urges Low Fees.

A different view, however, was given by Henry Gilligan, Board of Education member, who declared "the further away from school buildings the sale of whisky, wine and beer can be kept, the better pleased I will be."

Claude W. Owen, president of the Washington Board of Trade, recommended that the control board be given liberal discretionary powers in extending licenses.

Thomas P. Littlepage, former president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, observed that "whatever legislation is worked out should be considered from the standpoint of the public in the elimination of speakeasies, bootleggers and law vilations."

"It is absolutely necessary that license fees be kept low, so that the bootlegging and other illict liquor trade be kept low," said James E. Colliflower, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association. "Keep the price up and the bootleggers will thrive. The proposed control board should give its entire time to the job of supervising the sale of liquor in the District," he added.

Nelson Sees Too Much Law.

Other District leaders said:

J. W. Nelson, president of the District of Columbia Taxpayers Association—"I believe the plan is a step in the wrong direction because it provides for too much governmental interference. The liquor traffic should be under control, but not to that extent." He assailed the price-fixing and production-regulating features, and recommended every precaution should be taken to protect the consumer.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and a pillar of the W. C. T. U.—"I deprecate the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, but since it is an accomplished fact, I believe that regulations as published in The Post are wise."

William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic—"I was concerned chiefly with those provisions which are within my province, such as those pertaining to operators of vehicles and witnesses testifying in violation cases. I found them quite satisfactory."

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks—"It seems to be a feasible plan and the establishment of a control board of three persons should be effective."

Rufus S. Lusk, former legislative officer of the Crusaders—"The plan is all right, with regard to its licensing system, but it does not eliminate the evils arising from profits in the liquor traffic. Mr. Lusk would place the off-sale distribution of hard beverages in the hands of a monopoly, responsible to the District government, or the District itself. He has drafted his own system, which will be submitted to Senator King.

Joseph H. Himes, president of Columbia Hospital, real estate operator—"The District of Columbia control law should be made a model for the States. It is to be hoped that there will be full and free discussion looking toward drafting of a law that will be to the best interests of the people."

Charles W. Hoover, president of the Lions Club—"The plan is sound, I believe. Care should be taken to hold taxes within bounds, to prevent a new epidemic of bootlegging. It should not be necessary to go to Baltimore for a drink," he said, in critical reference to that provision which would bar the sale of liquor in residential areas.

A New Prohibition Threat.

When the American people voted to repeal the eighteenth amendment, they voted to restore to the States the police powers of which they had been deprived when the amendment was passed. It has been taken for granted that the country would revert to State regulation of the liquor business, varied to meet the needs and desires of a population living under highly diversified conditions. In no other way is it possible to assure popular support for control systems and to reestablish respect for the agencies of law enforcement.

The attempt to make Federal officials and Federal courts the instrumentalities for giving effect to a uniform type of sumptuary legislation, applicable to 48 different States, failed miserably. The lesson of that failure calls for speedy and definitive withdrawal of the Federal Government from an alien regulatory field, that it ought never to have entered.

With repeal accomplished, it has been assumed that the Federal authorities would limit their control of the liquor traffic to regulation of interstate trade and to the minimum amount of supervision required to give effect to liquor tax laws.

The code and marketing agreement which the Administration proposes to impose upon the distilling industry under the authority conferred by the recovery and the farm adjustment acts, in order to retain control pending Congressional action, will come as a shock to those who had supposed that the battle for repeal of an unsuccessful system of Federal regulation had been won.

Under the proposed code, extensive powers to regulate the distilling industry would be vested in a Federal board, known as the Alcohol Control Administration. No distiller would be permitted to engage in business without obtaining a permit from this board, nor could he add to the equipment in use at the time of repeal except with its authorization.

In addition, the Federal board would have power to limit the production and distribution of distilled spirits, while the method of selling would be restricted to sales in bottles, with specified exceptions. Distillers also would be forbidden to have any interest in retail outlets.

The merits of these provisions are a matter for separate discussion. The immediately important fact is that the proponents of the plan would coerce a private industry into acceptance of a code of so-called fair practice which is in substance a form of Federal regulation.

The code has not been reached by mutual agreement and discussion among interested parties. It would be substituted for the code suggested by the industry, and it would be enforced by a Federal board of Presidential appointees. To insure conformity, the proposed plan would invoke the drastic licensing provisions of the recovery act and thus make acceptance of the code a condition precedent to engaging in the distilling industry.

The public should not be deceived into regarding this Federal regulatory plan as a simple code of fair practice. If it is imposed upon the distilling industry, the Federal Government will continue to exercise extensive powers of control over intrastate liquor business.

It would be a gross breach of faith for Congress to countenance retention of a large measure of Federal control over the liquor business, in the guise of codes, marketing agreements or any other device which would camouflage the fact that the Federal Government had not relinquished the regulatory powers which the people have voted to return to the States.

Georgia Hall.

Georgia Hall, the $100,000 building erected by public subscription on the reservation of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, will be dedicated tonight with a program featuring an address by the President.

The occasion is one upon which all persons, of whatever mind on other matters, may meet upon the common ground of felicitation to the President and his associates of the Foundation.

In 1925, long before he was mentioned for the Presidency, Mr. Roosevelt became interested in the development of a national spa for the treatment of persons who had suffered infantile paralysis. He was reluctant, it was said, to accept the nomination for the governorship of New York, and did so only under great pressure, because it was offered at a time when he was most engrossed in the new project.

When he first went to Warm Springs, in 1925, upon the urging of George Foster Peabody, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., a native Georgian, Mr. Roosevelt found a rundown yellow and white resort hotel on a pine-studded hill in western Georgia. Its chief attraction was a nearby pool filled with warm water pouring from the hillside. Although warm, the water does not debilitate, and offers the buoyancy necessary to support the body while the patient exercises the affected limbs.

To that gift of nature, the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, under leadership of the President, who furnished much of the financing from his own pocket, has added a staff of scientists under the direction of Dr. Michael Hoke, one of the outstanding pediatricians of the country. The pool has been enlarged through a gift of John D. Rockefeller, jr.; white cottages have been erected in pine groves all over the reservation; the old wooden hotel has been modernized as much as possible to await its more substantial successor.

Warm Springs has been transformed from a village of "forest and pine and sleepy air" into a haven of hope and a mecca for sufferers from all over the country. They go about hopeful, cheerful and even radiant in a genial atmosphere warmed by the personality of the President.

The Duty of All.

Chairman Frank J. Hogan announces that contributions to the Community Chest are lagging in comparison with the totals reported at the equivalent stage of last year's campaign. "I am afraid that Washingtonians have not yet realized the distress that exists here," says Mr. Hogan. "I am afraid that they do not recognize that this is a joint campaign for needs supplied by 60 organizations. I am afraid they have not had brought home to them the consequences that may accrue to each and all of us if these needs are not met."

The sum required to finance the 60 public charitable and humanitarian organizations supported by the Community Chest is $1,945,000 for 1934. It represents the minimum amount needed to take care of misfortune, disability, helpless old age, homelessness, and other human distress arising in the National Capital.

This city is not immune from the processes which deprive a proportion of the population of the chance to live by their own efforts. Whether it is homeless childhood that needs help, or feeble and penniless old age, or bodily affliction, the appeal to human sympathy is the same.

Effective relief of misfortune must be based upon systematic ascertainment of genuine needs and suitable methods of extending relief. The organizations supported by the Chest are public servants within their respective fields, vigilantly sifting out worthy from unworthy appeals, and performing the public duty of charity with unflagging industry, month after month. The funds contributed by sympathetic individuals are not lost, but are made effective in relieving distress and affliction.

The Community Chest is the agent of humanity. It must be equipped for its work. Washington must not fail to protect its own helpless people.

Scrambled Exchanges.

A short time ago the London Financial News discussed editorially some of the unexpected and unsatisfactory results of the lack of a coordinated exchange policy within the Empire.

A great deal of emphasis has been placed upon the fact that sterling, although depreciated, has continued to be the international monetary measuring rod for most countries within the Empire as well as for a large number without it. Comparatively little attention has been given, however, to the consequences of the highly individualistic policies followed by the Empire states that have devalued their own currencies in relation to the depreciated pound sterling.

Australia, for example, has maintained her pound at a discount of approximately 25 per cent since England abandoned the gold standard—the same rate of discount as that prevailing immediately prior to suspension of gold payments. By such means, the country has been enabled to force its exports upon world markets and to discourage imports, also severely restricted by tariffs and embargoes.

New Zealand, fired by Australia's example, likewise has kept her currency at a discount of 25 per cent in terms of the pound sterling. The result has been the creation of foreign balances estimated by the Financial News to be almost twice the amount required to cover external interest and dividend payments. Australia, on the other hand, is not piling up excess foreign balances—a fact which indicates that her currency is not undervalued as is that of New Zealand.

South Africa, which abandoned the gold standard voluntarily after Britain suspended gold payments, has kept her currency close to parity with the British pound, although the depreciation is not justified by the level of internal prices or by the state of the South African trade balance. The South African export surplus has been increasing rapidly and the bullion and foreign exchange holdings of her central bank have expanded greatly during the past year, as a result of the undervaluation of the South African pound.

The inter-Empire confusion of currency relationships is made still worse by the gyrations of sterling in relation to the dollar and other non-Empire currencies. The fact that the Canadian dollar is linked so closely to our currency and has no direct or predicable relationship to sterling introduces another element of uncertainty into the currency situation of the Empire states.

At the present time, arbitrary devaluation of Empire currencies in terms of sterling is viewed with approbation by investors in other countries, who realize that exchange depreciation has assisted states such as Australia and New Zealand to build up foreign balances and meet their external obligations. But when depreciation is carried beyond the limits deemed necessary to enable foreign interest and dividend payments to be covered, approbation of the policy ceases and criticism begins to appear. Consequently, it is not surprising that the Financial News is moved to discuss the possibility of an adjustment of Empire currency rates, so that they "would honestly reflect the economic strength of the countries concerned."

Hope for realization of this objective is not high, it would seem, since the News believes that "nothing but force majeure would induce South Africa to let its currency go to a premium," while New Zealand is convinced that she must have the same exchange rate as Australia.

So long as these self-seeking or irrational considerations are permitted to decide what shall be the extent of exchange depreciation in terms of sterling, there seems to be slight prospect for inter-Empire agreements which would bring exchange relationships more nearly into conformity with the economic necessities of the various countries within the Empire.

District Fiscal Problem.

Haphazard fluctuations in the amount contributed by the Federal Government toward the maintenance of the National Capital in recent years have resulted in confusion and hardships for the District. Intelligent budgetary planning under these conditions is most difficult. It is not fair to either the District or Federal governments to perpetuate a fiscal relationship that results in so much misunderstanding and inequity.

The announcement by Chairman Thomas, of the Senate subcommittee which handles the District appropriation bill, that he will seek to establish a more definite fiscal relationship between the Federal and District governments, probably through a joint meeting of his committee with the similar group in the House of Representatives, lays the foundation for a new approach to this difficult issue.

The Senate and House have been at odds for a number of years on the amount which should be contributed to the District budget. It is to be hoped that Senator Thomas will sponsor a comprehensive discussion of the subject with the view of bringing about an equitable division of the expenses of maintaining the Federal City.

In two years the Federal contribution to the District was cut from $9,500,000 to $5,700,000. Obviously the slashes represented by these figures were not made on the basis of local needs, nor upon any decline in the service rendered to the Federal Government by municipal agencies. The District was handicapped at a time when demands upon its budget were heavy, apparently because of a general policy of cutting ordinary Federal expenditures.

It should not be difficult to convince Congress that a more equitable and stable arrangement is needed. The National Capital is maintained for the benefit of the Nation as well as for the people who live here.

If the appropriation committees can evolve an equitable formula for division of the expenses of the Capital, it will earn the gratitude of Washingtonians and millions of other citizens who wish to see the seat of Government maintained on a scale that is in keeping with the finest American standards.

Senator Gibson.

The appointment of Representative E. W. Gibson to be United States Senator from Vermont, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Porter H. Dale, is of special interest to the people of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Gibson devoted much time and effort to the affairs of the District while chairman of the House committee having jurisdiction of local legislation. He did not lose interest with the change of administrations, but has been a constant student of District affairs and a valuable contributor to its welfare.

Mr. Gibson will take to the Senate a store of information regarding District problems gained during his years of service in the House.

Fill the bumper fair!
Every drop we sprinkle
O'er the brow of care
Smooths away a wrinkle.
Wit's electric flame
Ne'er so swiftly passes
As when through the frame
It shoots from brimming glasses.

Fill the bumper fair!
Drinking while you're able,
Sitting in a chair,
Always at a table.

Drink to me only in thy chair,
And I will drink in mine;
There'll be no posters on the walls,
And no electric signs.
If you would rise to give a toast
To person or to town
You'll hear some big enforcement chief
Request that you sit down.

Does the wine our goblets gleam in;
With hue as red as rosy bed
Which a bee would choose to dream in.
Then fill tonight with hearts as light,
To loves as gay and fleeting
As bubbles that swim the beaker's brim—
If the place has ample seating.

Daily Talks About Books and Authors

A SHORT POEM.

One day, reading a newspaper somewhere in the Middle West, I came across this poem, which I immediately learned by heart.

Overtones.

Sing in the autumn trees
A song so mystical, so calm,
So full of certainties,
No man, I thought, could listen long
Except upon his knees,
Yet this was but a simple bird,
Alone, among dead trees.

The author of this poem is a Southerner, born in Mississippi, William Alexander Percy; he is a classical scholar, and has written much verse on ancient themes.

Some years ago I was talking with the famous Irishman, George W. Russell, universally known by the initials A. E. He began to discuss the difference between narrative and lyrical poetry, and he maintained that merely narrative poetry, no matter how well done, must always be second-rate; for it is always on one plane. The greatest poetry, said he, is the poetry of transfiguration. The poet takes some familiar object or experience, and by his imagination transmutes it into something beautiful or sublime. "It takes two currents to make the electric light." I think this short poem by Mr. Percy is a perfect illustration of transfiguration.

You Wouldn't Mind Using Dimes as Seed if the Tree Would Bear Dollars

By Robert Quillen.

A group in California is sponsoring an idea that is worth passing on for others to think about.

It is based on the assumption—or accepted fact—that America in this machine age can no longer provide jobs for all of her people.

If that is in truth the situation we face, the obvious solution of the problem is to get rid of part of the people.

What part? Here again the answer is simple. Dispose of those who are slowing up—those who have done their share of work.

How can they be disposed of as competitors for jobs? By enabling them to retire with an adequate pension.

That, you will say, is the usual joker. Old-age pensions mean more taxes.

But you expect to pay for what you get in this hard world. If you would be secure in your old age, you must lay by money while you are young. If you depend on some form of retirement insurance, that also costs you money.

The taxes required to provide the pension fund would be the equivalent of installment payments on an insurance policy.

The tax suggested is a national sales tax on commodities in common use.

You wouldn't object to that kind of tax, for it would be much like putting money in the bank. With every purchase made you would lay away a little money to provide your old-age pension.

Then at 60 or 50 or any age that experience proved best, you would quit work and give your job to a younger man—or woman.

And thereafter you would take your ease and enjoy spending your pension.

The only question that remains is the size of your monthly check. How about $200? Does that seem too generous?

Well, what difference does it make if you have paid for it? It could be either more or less, depending on the percentage of the sales tax.

In any case it should provide a good living. And all of it would be put into circulation each month, for there would be no need to save if you were sure of a life income.

Think it over. There may be weak spots in it, but certainly it would make jobs plentiful, close poorhouses and similar institutions that add to the tax burden and make care-free spenders of the anxious millions who now save for their old age.

The Dollar War Is On.

Omaha World-Herald.

At Savannah, Ga., Saturday President Roosevelt was talking about "certain modern Tories" and the persistent opposition of those who fear change and refuse to recognize it when it is come.

And at Washington the directorate of the United States Chamber of Commerce was fitting the shoe to its own foot by demanding that there be no price changes effected by monetary methods and calling for an "immediate and complete recession" from the policy of raising prices by the gold purchase plan.

Thus the issue is drawn and war is formally declared on the President's firm determination to effect a rising price level "by monetary methods" and whatever other methods are available.

Appointment by Soviet Russia of Alexander Antonovich Trovanovsky as its ambassador to the United States would indicate that Stalin regards recognition by the United States as of more than purely economic importance.

Russia is glad to trade with the United States on American credits, but Russia undoubtedly values even more the tendency that recognition by this country will have to ward off trouble with Japan in Manchuria. Certainly the effect of America's action on international politics is the point stressed in European capitals, for although recognition does not imply alliance, friendship between the United States and Russia is regarded as exerting a quieting effect on the Far East situation.

Can't Blame It on Prohibition Now.

Kansas City Times.

Andrew J. Volstead, along with other dry leaders, may not be so happy today. But he and the others may have the satisfaction suggested by a remark in Mr. Volstead's statement addressed to the wets. "In the future," he says, "you will have to answer for failures; you can not lay to prohibition all the misdeeds and suffering of the future that you laid to prohibition in the past." Well, Mr. Volstead doubtless hopes with the rest of us that there will be fewer misdeeds and less suffering in the future. But whether there is to be more or less of both, prohibition will be out of the picture. It no longer will be the "goat."

There also are indications that the object on Gen. Johnson's shoulder, which we naturally assumed to be the insignia of his rank, is turning out to be a chip.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

OUR leaders have to do so many indirect things that often we do not follow them and are inclined to make mockery of what later turns out to be of considerable import. There now is the business of Henry Morgenthau's making the Treasury guards stand at attention when he or any of the other Treasury moguls come around.

BARGERON.

When I first heard of this I thought I would double up with laughter, so great was my mirth. What tickled me more about it was that it was the first story to come from the Treasury under Henry's censorship. It recalled the time Mr. Hoover sought to establish something of the sort at the White House. Immediately stories came out that had never come out before.

* * * *

BUT further study of the order for the guards to salute reveals that it is a matter directed at the very fundamentals of our institutions, at our foundation stones, so to speak. It is designed to retrieve the Treasury's dignity, that is what it is supposed to do, and everybody will agree that the Treasury's dignity must be recovered if our governmental credit is to be preserved.

Until recent months there was not a more formidable and forbidding structure in our midst. It appealed to one at once as impressive and the embodiment of strength. A person looking at the thing observed inwardly that this country had all the money in the world. Nothing could rock us with the Treasury standing intact—and there it was right before the naked eye, intactness itself.

* * * *

MORE recently, though, it has not been the same old Treasury. A visitor, upon passing through the grilled portals, instead of being impressed by the quiet solemnity of things might be knocked down by a secretary or a college professor being thrown out on his neck. This naturally caused a people used to laughing when a man slips on a banana peeling to become convulsed with mirth.

There came also to be mysterious daily gatherings of Messrs, Acheson, Morgenthau and Jones for the purpose of reading a little slip that the retiring Prof. Warren had sent over to them, and then emerging to announce very pompously what the price of gold was for the day. This was so funny it is not unlikely that the Treasury clerks got to running and skipping and standing on their heads all over the place.

* * * *

MANIFESTLY, a situation such as this could not last. If there is one thing in this country we must take seriously it is the Treasury. Our credit system, when we have one, is based upon it. It is our Gibraltar.

Well, Henry is not a man to let grass grow under his feet when he takes over a job. Aggressiveness is his middle name. Of course, he didn't move so fast in relieving the farm debt, but that is no reason why he should not move fast in a matter which he had right at his finger tips.

The thing to do, Henry became convinced in the first survey of his new post, was to retrieve the Treasury's dignity. Now what better way was there to do this than make the Treasury guards salute when he and other big knobs came around?

* * * *

IT gives a suggestion of strength, of forcefulness of purpose, a color and directness that go with the military.

One of the neatest little tricks which the British have is to parade the palace guard every day at sundown. It tends to give the British a respect for their government.

Maybe Henry ought to go further and do this—have the guard parade through the corridors every morning, stopping before his office for a flourish of trumpets and a singing of:

"Good morning, dear teacher, good morning to you!"

In Which I Acknowledge a Gift.

"A gift for you," my darling said,
"From Sis and Bess and Flo.
A present tied with ribbon red
Their love for you to show."
My strange surprise I can't begin
Sufficiently to tell.
I oped the box and found within
A blue nightgown for Nell!

"I thought the gift was mine," said I,
When speech again began.
She answered: "It's so hard to buy
A present for a man!
The girls decided after all
That happier you'd be
If they should make their token small
A blue nightgown for me."

Had I the words of Shakespeare wise,
The genius of Shelley,
Some fitting tribute I'd devise
To that nightgown for Nellie.
I'd sing of lovely women three
Who would a man delight
And bought for him a drapery
His wife could wear at night.

Oh, gifts with her I've shared before,
Since good friends oft must choose;
Hand-painted barriers for the door
And things we both could use.
Grateful for years I've had to be
For cakes and Christmas jelly;
But now the girls have given to me
A blue nightgown for Nellie!

(Associated Press.)

The Soviet commissar for foreign affairs made the first stage of the journey by automobile. It was explained by members of his delegation that he chose that method to avoid further ceremony and public receptions.

Litvinoff was accompanied by Ivan Divilkovsky, who journeyed with him from Moscow; Boris Skvirsky, Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy, and Mrs. Skvirsky and a secret service man.

Konstantin Umansky, press relations officer for the Soviet foreign office, was left behind because of illness. Attendants said, while his condition was not serious, he would remain in bed another week or ten days.

Litvinoff accomplished the prime purpose of his visit—the restoration of diplomatic relations between the United States and Russia—but quite a few odds and ends remain for further negotiation.

Among them are Governmental debts and claims against Russia by American citizens growing out of the confiscation of private property by the Soviet Union and other incidents attending the Communist revolution.

Even before President Roosevelt left for Warm Springs, Ga., however, he and Litvinoff had reached a basis for the discussion of these matters and his conversations with other officials proceeded along these lines.

Litvinof Reaches New York

The Soviet diplomat, relaxing after negotiations at Washington attendant to United States recognition of the Soviet Union, went to the home of Peter Bogdanov, chairman of the board of Amtorg, Russian trading agency here. Later Bogdanov took his guest out to see the city.

Progress Claimed Against Hoarders

$428,000 Gold Given Up; 9 Indictments Pending.

Progress in the Government's drive against gold hoarding was reported yesterday when Attorney General Homer Cummings said there were nine indictments pending against known hoarders and $39,329,573 had been turned in to the Treasury.

Between September 28 and November 22, approximately $428,000 in gold or certificates was surrendered. A total of $240,130 has been turned in since prosecutions started.

Five pending indictments are in New York. Two are in New Jersey and two in Massachusetts. Twelve complaints have been filed in California, Wisconsin and Oklahoma.

The exact amount of gold still outstanding is not known, Cummings said.

A Fable From My College Days

In Which Two Professors Fight It Out in Sanguinary Fashion

By William Harlan Hale.

Once upon a time there was a professor by the name of Weatherbee, who spent all his life studying the semicolon. In his maturer years he added the colon. The researches which he made into the semicolon and the colon were published in a series of disquisitions in scholarly periodicals which, I am afraid, no one except other experts on the semicolon and the colon ever read.

But when finally he incorporated all these studies into one grand work, "The Semicolon and the Colon as Employed in the Devotional Works of Hieronymus von Branntwein (1502-1567)," his academic reputation was made. The future seemed bright; he was appointed head of the language department of his grateful university, and he looked forward to a life of comfortable and secluded years and to the completion of his second volume, "The Semicolon and the Colon as Employed in the Nondevotional Works of Hieronymus von Branntwein (1502-1567)."

Prof. Weatherbee grew to be a fine and dignified gentleman. No academic controversies raged around him, because no other scholar had the equipment to question his researches on the semicolon. It is true that there was a professor in the University of Goettingen, by the name of Schweidnitz, who charged that he relied on old texts rather than on new discoveries. But Schweidnitz was a notorious radical, and his statements were discredited.

Now it is true that Prof. Weatherbee, in writing his monumental analysis of the semicolon as used by Hieronymus von Branntwein, had not consulted the actual manuscripts of that immortal poet. But the reason is simple: No Branntwein manuscripts were known to exist. In using early printed editions of Branntwein's works as source material, Prof. Weatherbee was doing the best that any scholar could.

But then, one calm day during the fall semester, the incredible happened. Prof. Schweidnitz announced that he had discovered in the cellar of an ancient distillery in Nuernberg, the actual manuscripts of the works of Hieronymus von Branntwein!

The scholarly world immediately began to buzz with interest and curiosity. Would the newly discovered manuscripts reveal the same usages of punctuation as the printed editions which Weatherbee had used as sources? If the punctuation were different, would not Weatherbee's entire researches have to be withdrawn and rewritten? And would not that mean the discrediting of the world-famous Weatherbee "Theory of the Indo-European Development of the Colon?"

Finally overcoming their fear of his ire, Prof. Weatherbee's colleagues broached the subject to him one evening at the Faculty Club. What was his reaction to the Schweidnitz discoveries? In the mellow room hovered the suspense of a major crisis. But the professor remained calm.

"I have had," he said, "thirty years of experience with the Branntwein semicolon. I know it as no one else. From his printed works, I know how Branntwein's mind and hand must have worked in every hour of his waking life. Whatever the actual manuscripts may contain, they could not affect my analysis or my theory in the least."

What a Napoleon of scholarship! thought his colleagues. He will not let himself be frightened by any opponent, however challenging!

And Weatherbee's reputation, enhanced by this clarifying statement, was so great that no one paid any more serious attention to the discoveries of Professor Schweidnitz. The German could not even get any scholarly periodical to publish them. He had no list of academic distinctions; he was not, like Weatherbee, the head of a language department.

Finally, however, at great expense Schweidnitz published the facsimiles of the Branntwein manuscripts himself. Indeed, he came over to this country with a case full of the pamphlets in his baggage, intending to go on a lecture tour and offer his proofs to the academic world.

For this was what he had to prove: in his manuscripts Branntwein used a colon wherever in the printed editions a semicolon was used. Vice versa, he used a semicolon wherever the printed editions showed a colon. In other words, Schweidnitz would show that Weatherbee's thesis not only erred in detail, but that it was, in its entirety, the very opposite of the truth.

The dispute began to rage among scholars in all great universities and learned societies. Schweidnitz was denounced as an upstart and as a radical with subversive intentions. Many of the younger professors, on the other hand, denounced Weatherbee as a man who clung to an old theory rather than accept new facts, and even suggested that he had been in the pay of an alien English group known as the Society for the Preservation of Old Forms of Speech. The majority, however, relying on Weatherbee's authority, dignity, and assurance, felt sure that he would refute the Schweidnitz charges with ease.

What did Weatherbee do? One day, to the amazement of the profession, he quite abandoned his calm, and—so some people said—his dignity. He wrote an open letter to Schweidnitz and his group, in which he began by saying that he should have been consulted when the Neurnberg manuscripts were found; that he regarded Schweidnitz as an immature person, lacking in experience, and therefore irresponsible. He felt that now, when so many people in the world were questioning the entire teaching profession, was the worst possible time to raise so destructive an issue as that of the Nuernberg manuscripts. He saw only doom ahead. The manuscripts themselves, however, he did not answer.

That all happened a long, long time ago. Today, Prof. Weatherbee is still teaching his theory of the semicolon, as borne out in the devotional works of Hieronymus von Branntwein. But he is no longer the head of his university's Language Department; the head of it is Prof. Schweidnitz.

Court Upholds Secret Ballot Of Rail Unions

Only Men in Full Working Status Can Vote on Representatives.

A decision affecting thousands of organized railroad employes in the United States was returned in District Supreme Court yesterday by Justice Peyton Gordon.

The decision held that only employes actually plying their trade were entitled to vote in selecting their representatives. It withheld from furloughed or demoted employes the right to cast ballots in union elections.

Justice Gordon's opinion was made in a suit for injunction brought by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, which had claimed the right to represent engineers in matters relating to maintenance of agreements with the Georgia Southern & Florida Railway Co.

In dismissing the injunction application, Justice Gordon said:

"Only engineers actually engaged as such have such an interest in the selection of a representative of engineers. Those demoted from engineers to firemen, and furloughed out of service, though their names are retained on the seniority list of engineers, are not so interested as to entitle them to a voice in the selection of representative engineers."

For several years the engineers of the Georgia Railroad have been represented by the union of firemen and enginemen. In 1932 a secret ballot was held in which engineers who were demoted were not allowed to vote. This election resulted in election of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers as the official representative of the engineers.

Where Does a Starling Go To Die?—Here's the Answer

Nowhere in Particular, Just "Drop Off," Says Investigator.

A little investigation yesterday into the habits of Washington's most maligned creature, the starling, suggested a new simile and set at rest the oft-recurring question—Where does a starling go to die?

One is familiar with the simile, "as scarce as a dead starling." And as to where they go to die, why, nowhere in particular. They just keel over casual like, on a tree branch or a District building window ledge, and that's all there is to it.

No, there is more to it. There is the answer to the question, What becomes of starlings that have entered into bird heaven? There are thousands on the wing, wheeling and maneuvering beautifully, but to the discomfiture of pedestrians below, but obviously they don't go on wheeling and maneuvering forever. The starling's life span is from 5 to 10 years. Of the innumerable squadrons in Washington, undoubtedly dozens die daily.

But the corpus delicti!

Expert Consulted.

Dr. Alexander Wetmore, noted ornithologist and assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, was consulted yesterday. His answer was a tribute ot the numbers and appetites of the Capital's cats, hawks, owls and other predatory fauna.

The starling is a bold fellow, especially when flying in company with his own kind; Dr. Wetmore recalled once having seen a large flock force a hawk to the ground just for sport. But when he gets old and unsteady in the joints, he is fairly easy prey for any of his vigilant enemies.

These birds, which have been dignified by citizens' associations' protests, insults from Capitol Hill and, most recently, an ominous threat against their well being by Commissioner Hazen, usually die with their boots on, to coin a phrase. That is, few give in to natural causes. When they go, speaking for the majority, it is in the chops of a lurking tomcat or the maw of a hungry hawk. Dogs, too, carry off some of the bodies.

Many Die in Night.

If a starling is fortunate enough to shift worlds unmolested, it usually occurs in the night, Dr. Wetmore declared. Walk in the parks and circles about 3 a. m. or do a mite or cornice inspecting on some F street building and one will probably find a few dead ones. But one must get there ahead of the scavengers.

This ruthless equalizing system may be quite satisfactory to cats, hawks et al, not to mention suffering humanity, but it is a decided drawback to scientific research. Skeletons are made too scarce by the process. Dr. Wetmore, quoting from a paper he read on the subject, said:

"Most birds die through capture by some predator, or if overtaken by disease are eaten promptly by some scavenger. That this destruction is the usual course when birds die will be attested by field naturalists when they reflect upon the hundreds and thousands of living birds seen and the relatively small number of instances in which remains of dead birds are encountered."

Postmaster Mooney's Plan.

Postmaster Mooney, a student of bird behavior, long ago recognized the owl's lethal influence over starlings and placed a stuffed one in the pediment of the city postoffice to keep the pests away. Now he is advocating the manufacture of thousands of artificial eagles, blue or otherwise, to be used for the same purpose.

Meanwhile, by the miracle of Hydra-like propagation and the power of their disheartening numbers, the menace from above flies merrily on. But not far.

guest speaker of the day. She congratulated the local Community Chest on its program of child welfare, which she called one of the most important elements of its work, and pointed out that Washington must not disappoint its children who look to it to carry them through another hard winter.

Another speaker was Allen T. Burns, director of the Community Chest Councils, Inc., the national Community Chest organization. He reminded the large audience that 400 other Community Chests through the country are watching with keen interest the progress of the 6,000 workers in the National Capital. "It will mean a distinct loss of morale to other Community Chests if Washington does not go over the top," declared Mr. Burns.

Mr. Burns declared the Nation must give sacrificially this year and not as a matter of convenience. "Think of all you have in contrast to those who have nothing and think only of what can be shared with the needy," he admonished. "In that way the Community Chest will certainly be successful."

Mr. Hogan sent word through Mr. Burns to other Community Chests that there is "no such word as 'fail' in the lexicon of Washington Community Chest."

Transfusion Saves Boy's Life Afer Many Heed Radio Plea

35 Volunteer to Aid Lad Whose Father Gave All He Could.

A 4-year-old boy owed his life yesterday to the quick response of 35 persons who heard an appeal over the radio for blood to save the boy after his own father, a disabled veteran of Annapolis, had given so much of his blood his life was threatened.

The boy, Emile Maigret, and his father, John Maigret, 1151 New Jersey avenue northwest, were at Garfield Hospital. John Egense, of the local office of the Disabled American Veterans, who received an emergency call from the boy's father, notified the Police Department and the Fire Rescue Squad. Unable to get a blood supply there, he asked that a call for volunteers be sounded over the radio.

All Washington was told that saving the boy's lfie depended upon blood being available the next morning. At dawn volunteers arrived at the hospital and by the time tests were made there were 35 in line.

Six were accepted and after the transfusion, doctors said the boy was resting comfortably.

Hazen Seeks Way to Rid Downtown of Starlings

Appointment of a committee to seek means to rid the public of the starling nuisance, which has plagued downtown areas for several years, will be proposed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen at a meeting of the Board of Commissioners today.

Clifford Lanham, superintendent of trees and parkings, may be named head of the committee and the aid of Department of Agriculture ornithologists also will be sought. Whether the starlings will be driven away is problematical, inasmuch as those urging effective action already are expressing fears of disapproval from soft-hearted bird lovers.

New Official Altitude Record Credited to Settle at 11.6 Miles

Pilot's Initial Estimate Short More Than 2,000 Feet.

With completion yesterday of calibration of the barographs carried by Lieut. Comdr. T. G. W. Settle and Maj. Chester L. Fordney on their stratosphere flight, the United States held the official world record for altitude.

The National Aeronautic Association announced that the instruments showed the two balloonists had reached an altitude of 61,237 feet or 11.6 miles. This is more than 2,000 feet higher than Settle's original estimate of the altitude attained by the balloon.

The figures, which were worked out by the Government Bureau of Standards, will be forwarded to the Federation Aeronautics Internationale, the organization that passes on all world aviation records.

Soviet Mark Unofficial.

The American flight is expected to be considered a world's record, in spite of the claim of three Russian balloonists that last September they reached an altitude of 62,335 feet, about two-tenths of a mile higher than that reached by Settle and Fordney. Russia is not a member of the federation and therefore its claims are not recognized. The federation represents 42 nations.

Settle and Fordney ascended almost 2 miles higher than the best record made by Auguste Piccard, Swiss scientist, who was the first to make a trip to the stratosphere in a sealed gondola.

The best previous American balloon record was made by Capt. Gray, of the Army, who jumped with a parachute from his balloon when it had reached a height of about 40,000 feet. In a second attempt to make an altitude record he lost his life.

The world's airplane altitude record is 44,819 feet, held by France. The American airplane record is 43,165.

Work Done Below Zero.

The work of calibrating the balloon barograph was done in a partial vacuum at a temperature far below zero. This was done to approximate conditions that existed in the stratosphere when the balloon reached its greatest height.

Settle said yesterday when he was informed of the results of the barograph calibration that he hoped an attempt would be made soon to break his record.

"The altitude that a balloon is able to attain is very largely a matter of the volume of the balloon," he said. "The bigger the envelope, the higher the altitude in general, and in order to make a higher altitude we will need a bigger balloon."

Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of Navy aeronautics, commended the two balloonists' flight as of the highest importance to aeronautics and science.

"While the altitude reached is of interest and importance," Admiral King said, "greater importance belongs to planning, execution and success of the flight for scientific purposes."

Boris Skvirsky, Soviet charge d'affaires, yesterday relayed to Settle and Fordney a cablegram of congratulations received from Commander George Prokofiev, who headed the stratosphere flight in Russia. The cablegram read:

"Convey to Settle and Fordney hearty congratulations from their colleagues of the stratosphere and wishes for all further successes.

Defense Calls 31 Witnesses For Crawford

Will Try to Show Negro Jurymen Barred; Senator Connor to Prosecute.

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.). Thirty-one witnesses have been called by the defense for the trial of George Crawford, Negro, accused of the murder of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley and Mrs. Mina Buckner in their home at Middleburg.

Among these are the judge of the Loudoun County Circuit Court, J. R. H. Alexander; the clerk, E. O. Russell; sheriff, E. S. Adrian; eight jury commissioners, C. A. Whaley, John W. Thompson, S. Preston Luck, W. H. Frazier, V. B. Harding, C. Shirley Carter, G. Hampton Virts and A. P. McGeath, and 20 Negro witnesses.

The question of exclusion of qualified Negroes from trial juries solely on grounds of race will be brought up by the defense. The trial starts here December 12. This same question was raised several weeks ago when an attempt was made to quash the indictments against Crawford on account of there being no Negroes on the grand jury. Judge James L. McLemore, of Suffolk, ruled that Negroes had not been excluded.

State Senator Cecil Connor, former Commonwealth's attorney of Loudoun County, will assist in the prosecution.

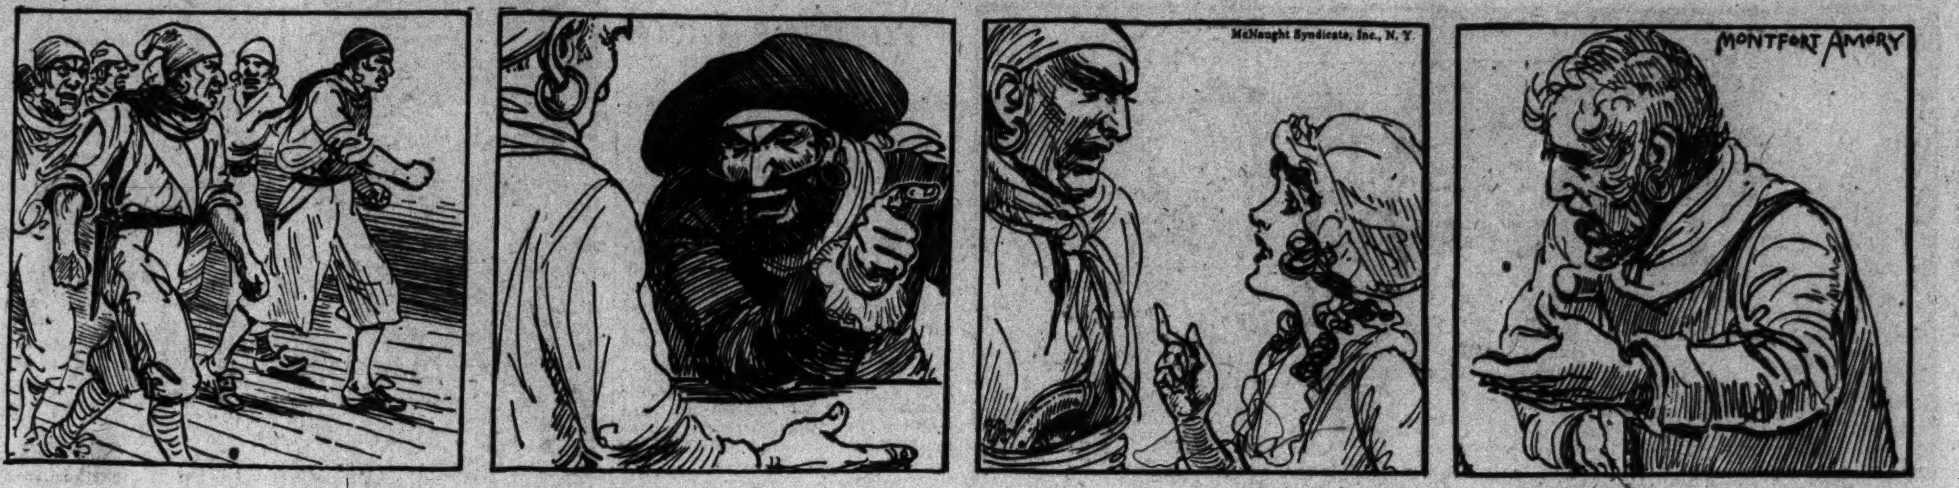
The Pirate's Appeal

By Charles B. Driscoll



McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.
MONTFORT AMORY

Mate Richards, confronted by the mutinous crew of the Queen Anne's Revenge, consented to ask Prudence to tell the men whether the mysterious stranger was the Devil or merely a man. The men dispersed, with threats and promises, for an hour.

Richards went first to Blackbeard, telling him what the men had said. "No one but the Lady can save us from the crew," he reported. The pirate chief was in a rage, but he was not insane. "Go and ask her," he said.

The Mate went, hat in hand, to Prudence. "Only you can quiet the men and save your husband's life," he said. "My husband? That monster, Blackbeard? I do not know him, and the words said by Governor Eden are not enough to make me his wife!"

Then up spoke Basilica Hands (called also Israel): "Do it for me, my lady. Captain Teach has maimed me and he has been cruel to you. It is his nature. But I am still loyal to him." "I will do what I can," answered Prudence.

Mob Menaces Hart Slayers

Extra Guard Around Jail Foils Crowd at San Jose.

San Jose, Calif., Nov. 23 (U.P.) Threats of mob violence against the confessed slayers of Brooke Hart, 22, son of a wealthy San Jose merchant, tonight led Sheriff William Emig to strengthen the guard at the San Jose Jail, where the prisoners are held.

A crowd of about 200 persons gathered around the building and deputies armed themselves with tear-gas bombs and shotguns after Sheriff Emig received a telephone call that a gang of men was coming to take the prisoners, Thomas Thurmond and Jack Holmes.

The crowd increased when it was learned Thurmond and Holmes had been taken from their cells to the jail barber shop to be shaved by a trusty. Sheriff Emig posted his men at the main entrance to the jail and forced the crowd to remain at a safe distance from the building.

Thurmond appeared haggard and worried while he was being shaved, but Holmes joked with the guard.

Veteran in Gray Who Spared Life Of Sherman Dies

Omaha, Nov. 23 (AP).—R. H. Stoner, 89, captain in the Confederate army before he was 17, died today still firm in his belief that Gen. Sherman was "a fine figure of a man."

Captain of Company G, Fourteenth Virginia Infantry, Stoner often related how he drew a bead on Sherman at the battle of Five Forks, but was so impressed by the Union general he couldn't pull the trigger.

Stoner, who was born near Roanoke, Va., left a military academy at Lexington, Ky., when he was 16 to join the Confederate forces. He was wounded twice and taken prisoner a few days before the war ended.

Vanderlip Has 5 Fiscal Plans

Financier Would Stop All Gold Coinage to Make Dollar Stable.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Frank A. Vanderlip, noted financier, tonight outlined a plan for stabilizing the dollar without reverting to the gold standard of the post-war period. The plan follows:

First—Permanently cease the coinage of gold.

Second—Convert all existing gold coin into bullion.

Third—Confine the convertibility of the stabilized dollar to exchangeability for gold bars only, with a minimum weight equal to approximately $5,000 in the new currency.

Fourth—Prohibit the Federal Reserve Banks from receiving deposits from foreign central banks and compel all member banks to inform the Federal Reserve Banks regarding the total of foreign-controlled deposits in member banks.

Fifth—Retain the present Government control of all foreign exchange transactions. Specifically define that control as meaning that gold will only be freely supplied for settling legitimate foreign-trade balances.

Moscow, Nov. 23 (AP).—Joseph Stalin and all his fellow-officers of the Communist Party, from the all-powerful "political bureau" down, will come up for reelection in the seventeenth all-union congress of the party, summoned tonight to meet in Moscow next January 25.

Unusual importance attaches to the congress, which will be the first since 1930, because by the time it will be held a country-wide party "cleansing" will have ended its exhaustive examination of the worthiness of the highest officials to the lowest workers to be members of the party.

U. S. Loss Seen Of $1,200,000 In Hog Deal

Wallace Favors New Buying Plan; 1,750,000 Corn Loan Blanks Ready.

Secretary Wallace said yesterday that it looked as though the Government had been "stuck" for $1,200,000 in connection with the recent purchase of hogs for relief distribution.

He said that as a result a cost plus plan of making food contracts may be used in future.

Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins recently asked for 29,000,000 pounds of dressed pork. This involved approximately 300,000 hogs weighing 60,000,000 pounds. The contracts were awarded at $6 a hundred pounds. Almost immediately, between the time the contracts were awarded and the time the packers bought the hogs, the price of live hogs fell to $3.90 a hundred pounds. This made a difference of a little more than 2 cents a pound, or a total of about $1,200,000, which was profit to the packers.

Seeks Larger Exports.

Wallace said several packers had wired Hopkins asking for more business. He said hog prices were depressed because of a heavy run of cattle to the market.

First steps for the relief of corn farmers were taken with completion of 1,750,000 copies of the corn loan contract. Distribution will begin immediately. Under this contract, farmers may borrow at the rate of 45 cents a bushel on their corn. Loans will be made through the Commodity Credit Corporation. Farm administration officials said they expected $200,000,000 to be distributed to farmers.

In connection with the relief program, Secretary Wallace said the United States may become a "net" importer of goods in order to put its economic affairs in adjustment with the rest of the world. Wallace expressed the opinion that by making possible larger sales of foreign goods in this country exports of farm products could be substantially increased.

Meanwhile, the Farm Administration continued to wrestle with codes involving farm products. Farm Administrator Peek said he hoped for final action on the retail and wholesale food and grocery code within 10 days. A separate code for food manufacturers is being formulated.

Father T. A. Judge Dies at Providence

Catholic Mission Leader Ill Several Months.

The Very Rev. Thomas Augustine Judge, C. M., M. S., SS. T., died yesterday at Providence Hospital after an illness of several months. He returned from a missionary tour of his stations in Puerto Rico last August and had been confined to his bed ever since.

Father Judge was born in South Boston, Mass., August 23, 1868, and entered the Vincentin Order, following an elementary school education, and was ordained priest May 27, 1899.

Father Judge taught at St. John's College, Brooklyn, N. Y., and at Niagara University. For several years he was a member of the New England Mission Band, and while engaged in this field he established centers of Catholic Social Action, for the active lay Apostolate, in which he was a pioneer worker. In 1915 he was sent to Opelika, Ala., as superior of the Vincentian Mission Band.

He founded the Missionary Servants of the Most Blessed Trinity in 1916, an order of women for teaching, maintaining hospitals, religious and social service. Four years later he founded a similar order, the Missionary Servants of the Most Holy Trinity, consisting of priests and brothers for labor in the desolate places.

Nudists Wed

Slippers Worn by Few of Guests.

Elsinore, Calif., Nov. 23 (AP).—With principals, preacher and spectators in their "birthday" clothes, a wedding ceremony was performed yesterday at a nudist colony in Sylvan Valley.

The bridegroom was Jim Goodman, railway conductor, and the bride Miss Susie Wise. They went to San Francisco on their honeymoon.

Goodman and the Rev. Clarke Irvine, of the Temple of Nature Church, leapt down a path from their bungalows to a well, singing out "Won't you join us?" to several nude men guests. The guests heeded.

In the clearing, the bride discarded a kimono and the ceremony was performed. Some of the women guests wore slippers, nothing else.

"I married this way because I like the simplicity and freedom," said the bride, a nudist of three months.

"Al" Urges War On Bootlegger

Smith Calls on Citizens to Get Their Liquor in Legal Way.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith urged today that private citizens unite in stamping out bootlegging after repeal by conforming to State regulations for the purchase of liquor.

"We've won the first fight," said Smith, commenting on repeal. "Now we've got to win the other. It behooves every patriotic citizen to secure his supplies after December 5 in a thoroughly legal manner."

Just as Smith years ago expressed the belief that prohibition would be voted out of the Constitution, so today he said he was certain the people would oppose sale of illegal liquor.

"It is inherent in every good citizen to desire to be obedient to the law," he said. "Repeal has given the opportunity to respect and obey the law again and to see that others respect and obey it.

U. S. Job Office Program Laid

Service Making Progress in Aiding Unemployed, Officials Report.

Plans to make the revamped United States Employment Service of real value both to employers and workers throughout the Nation were discussed yesterday at an all-day meeting of the executive committee of the Federal Advisory Council and the Labor Department staff.

Afterward, W. Frank Persons, director of the service and secretary of the committee, said great progress was being shown in the transfer of the old service's activities to State governmental agencies and that to date 11 States had been qualified for Federal employment service subsidies.

Under the law, the Labor Department is directed to withdraw its employment offices from the States where they often competed with similar offices supported by the State governments, and to transfer administration funds to the local agencies whenever their efficiency has been established.

President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, presided over the meeting. Other committee members are Senator Robert H. Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board; President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor; Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

"I'M KILLING SIX BIRDS WITH ONE STONE"

ELECTROLUX the Gas REFRIGERATOR
$129.50 CASH INSTALLED
SMALL DOWN PAYMENT
Balance in thirty months

"You know, Henry, for the past two years I thought of practical gifts for the family, but at the last minute I did the usual—bought little things which were promptly forgotten. This year I'm killing six birds with one stone, and I acted sooner than usual to be sure that I would be practical. I made the first payment on a gas refrigerator, and here's where the birds come in . . .

"In the first place, it is something that Mary has always wanted. It saves kitchen work and allows her to use leftovers and buy more things at one time.

"Our daughter has always complained about the kitchen when she wants to entertain her friends. Now she can make all the salads and cold desserts her heart desires.

"Andy—you met my son—likes his midnight lunches, and I do, too, for that matter. So we'll both have plenty of cold meats and cooling drinks.

"He may not realize it, but the baby comes next. Mary worries a lot about keeping milk safe and other baby food. So the baby will benefit, too.

"Last, but not least—and this is why I tell you all this—the refrigerator won't cost me a cent! . . . That's a fact, because the amount of money we have been spending for ice, and the amount of food which has been wasted because of improper refrigeration, will more than make our monthly payments. After that, this saving will continue and it will actually mean money saved."

There are many reasons for giving useful gifts this year, and many reasons why the gift to your family should be the gas refrigerator. Drop in and let us show you the model your family requires or telephone and we will send you complete descriptive folders.

Culbertson's Bridge

Transferring a Finesse.

It is not always necessary to surrender a trick to a guarded Queen simply because there is only one way to finesse for it, and that one way must fail. Even when the losing tricks can not be discarded, the Queen can not be dropped, and there is no possible squeeze, it is sometimes possible to drive out the Queen, and in doing so establish a finesse position for a lower card which will serve the same purpose.

I find the following hand very interesting, first, because it illustrates such a position, and secondly, because it represents an amazing swing in a team-of-four contest. In the case I am dealing with it was played at six spades redoubled. At the other table at which it was played the team holds the same cards did not even reach a game. In that case, West opened the bidding with one heart, and after North passed, East made one of the worst three-heart bids on record. South bid three spades, West passed, and North, thinking West's was a Forcing Pass, also passed to see what East would do. East refused to overbid any more outrageously by reopening the bidding, and at three spades it was played. Here is the hand, and the bidding below is that of the first table, where a Slam contract was reached.

West, Dealer.

Redbl.(6)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The vulnerable Overcall at two is strong, and North wished his partner to have a chance to rabid. The two-notrump call was about the only one open to him, although it incorrectly showed a heart stopper.

2—An overbid.

3—South became ambitious at this point, his partner having made what is ordinarily a very strong bid.

4—North would like to pass, but he fears that South has a four-card diamond suit and that being forced to ruff hearts, he will lose control of the hand.

5—This Double is partly based upon East's free raise and partly upon the fact that North was obviously in distress.

6—A dangerous Redouble, to say the least, when North and South are vulnerable.

West opened the King of hearts, which South ruffed. He led over to the Ace of spades, and took a round of clubs, playing small from Dummy to his King. When West did not have the Ace, he could see that West's Double had been very bad, but he did not think it could have been bad enough not to include the Queen of diamonds. So South led the Knave of diamonds, which West was forced to cover. South now had the A-9, a perfect tenace over East's 10-8. He finessed for this card immediately, drew trumps, and led a club toward Dummy's Queen. West's Knave was forced out, the Queen drew East's Ace, and South's nine became high. He had lost only one trick, and made a vulnerable Small Slam redoubled.

Let it not be said that I condone South's overbidding, nor that I think he was entitled to so great a reward, but at least he recognized his opportunity in the play and took full advantage of it.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South is playing a contract of three notrump, against which West opens the seven of hearts. How should East and West plan their defense

North, Dealer.

Women Lawyers Meet at Dinner

District Bar Association Holds First Affair of Season.

The Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia held its first dinner meeting of the season last evening at the Women's City Club. Miss Dorothea M. Wassmann presided as toastmistress. A group of musical selections were given by Miss Mary Russell Williams.

Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, United States Civil Service Commissioner, was the guest of honor and addressed the association on "Women in Civil Service." Mrs. McMillin has had wide experience along diplomatic and political lines, having spent several years in Central and South America when her husband, former Gov. McMillin of Tennessee, was United States Minister to Guatemala and Peru.

She was the first woman to be elected National Democratic committeewoman of Tennessee, and during her tenure of office presided over a conference in Atlanta of Democratic women of the Southern State, prior to the 1924 National convention. She was also appointed regional director of organization of the Democratic women of the Southern States by the Hon. Cordell Hull, then chairman of the National Democratic committee. Mrs. McMillin is active in many women's organizations. Last May President Roosevelt appointed Mrs. McMillin as one of the three members of the United States Civil Service Commission.

In addition to her ability and success as a business woman, Mrs. McMillin possesses unusual talent as a dramatic reader and lecturer.

Books

Latest Book of Photographs Is Therese Bonney's "Remember When—."

Photographic chronicles are the current band-wagon. Every one is climbing aboard. Most impressive was Laurence Stallings' dramatic indictment of war, "The First World War," published by Simon & Schuster. Quieter, more enjoyable, was Agnes Rogers' "The American Procession." She is the wife of Frederick Lewis Allen, author of "Only Yesterday" and assistant editor of Harper's. Helping him with that book, she had the idea for an informal chronicle in photographs of American life since 1860. She collected them, her husband wrote the captions, and the house of Harper issued this charming book last month.

Latest to appear on the band-wagon is a volume published by Coward-McCann yesterday entitled "Remember When—." Its editor, Therese Bonney, runs a famous picture service in Paris. From the 20,000 photographs in her files she has chosen such items as Sarah Bernhardt playing tennis, the Prince of Wales in his high chair, Theodore Roosevelt in his Rough Rider days, all of an international and personal character. Says Charles Dana Gibson in the preface: "She gives us the scenes and the people that colored the years before romance went down before realism—the years when queens were queens and not writers of advertising copy."

Miss Bonney is also co-author with her sister, Miss Louise Bonney, of "French Cooking for American Kitchens" and "A Shopping Guide to Paris," both of which are published by McBride.

The Six-Inch Shelf.

A study, "THE PEOPLE'S FORESTS," by Robert Marshall. (Smith & Haas, $2.)
A historical episode, "THE SPANISH MARRIAGE," by Helen Simpson. (Putnam, $1.50.)
A study, "THE TAX RACKET," by Ray E. Untereiner. (Lippincott, $1.)
An anthology, "THE BOOK OF GOOD DEEDS, 1914-1918," edited by Bernard Diebold. (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.)
Short tales, "MY FIRST BABY AND OTHER AMBULANCE ANECDOTES," by The Interne. (Macrae-Smith, $1.)

Four years ago you could not have books like these for the prices above mentioned. Nor would they have been so admirably printed. This six-inch shelf, ranging between trees, taxes and babies, shows what unambitious but genuine excellence the American publisher can reach. In taste as well as format, for the contents of these books are equally sound in their separate ways.

Mr. Marshall, a professional forester, writes so simply and forcibly of the need of forest-control planning in this country that the fairly familiar theme becomes a crying necessity. Last year his description of Eskimo life, "Arctic Village," was widely praised. This year, with crusading earnestness, he deals with a perhaps less entertaining topic. But if all who are affected vitally and inevitably by the condition of American forests were to read this book, it would shoot to the head of the best-seller lists in no time at all.

Because Mary Tudor was bound that she would marry Philip of Spain, English history altered its course. Miss Simpson tells the story from the time when Mary was lifted in arms at the age of 2 and betrothed to the Dauphin of France (he was rather her junior at that!) until she died in her great, curtained bed at the age of 42. The author is a novelist. Though she ties down her facts firmly, she has given here the full pageant of sixteenth century England. The book is one of a series called "Great Occasions," each enlarging and enlivening some episode of history too often banished by the historian to three dry lines.

Mr. Hoover, speaking in 1932, said: "Each citizen works 61 days for the support of Government." That is the sweat and eyestrain of taxes in this country. Mr. Untereiner, of the economics department, California Institute of Technology, here gives in one little book the reasons for that alarming cost of Government, and the dangers ahead unless something is done. He is entirely plain-spoken on this depressing subject. This book also belongs in a series. "The Hour Library" endeavors to give brief, authoritative and up-to-date information on a number of standard topics.

"Good Deeds" is a collection of the little, untold examples of friendliness and human decency which took place among the soldiers of all nations in the Great War. Some of the incidents are unbelievably touching, all point to a moral which you will be glad to remember in the midst of the horror-tales poured upon us. Dr. Diebold is a critic on the Frankfurter Zeitung. The anecdotes are strictly true, and collected from all possible sources.

If longevity is your heart's desire, Dr. Rose's little volume will point out all the known ways to that end. But unless you are passionately interested in reaching 85, you will find these pages a bit dull as reading. Dr. Clendening's great book, "The Human Body," made considerable havoc among these usual medical assertions. So you can take your choice.

Some of the stories in "My First Baby" appeared in Saturday Evening Post. They relate the experiences of a doctor in a large hospital, are filled with humor and excitement. Although the drawings by "Marge" (familiar S. E. P. cartoonist on the "Short Turns and Encores" page) and other hints of the publishers would indicate that this is an entirely funny book, that is not so. But it remains grand reading.

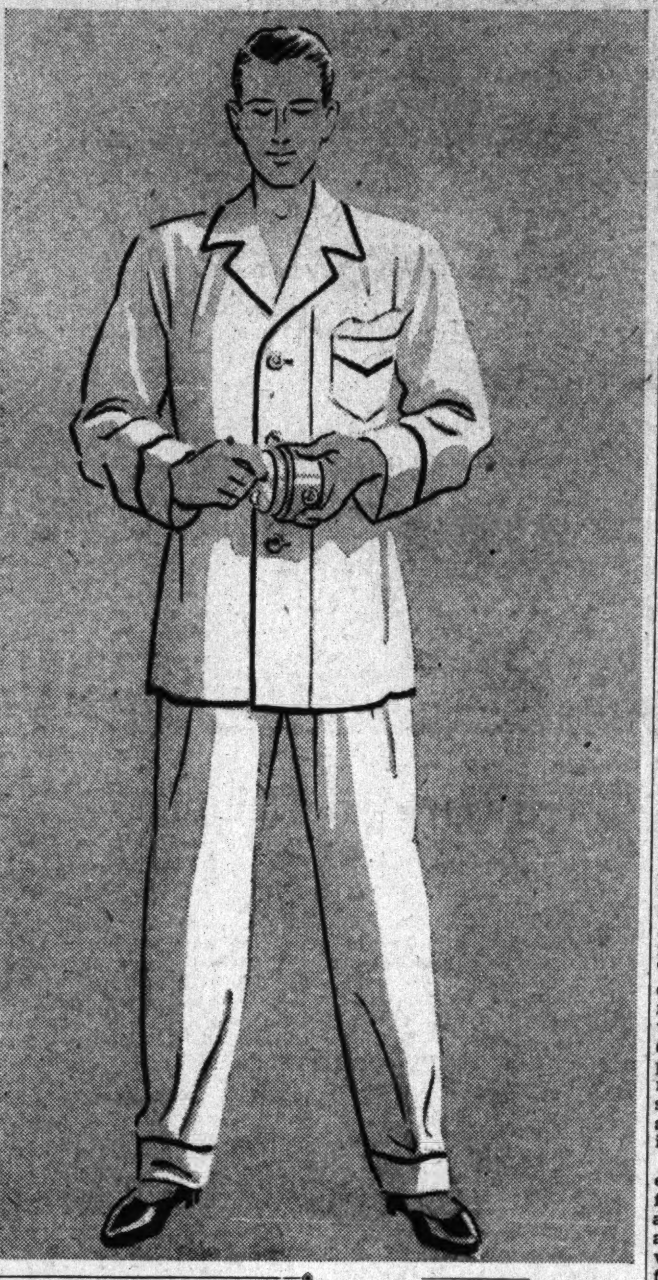
Even Pajamas Follow Trend To More Color and Pattern

Directed by Amos Parrish

Garments of the type described in this article are available in Washington in all the better class shops.



New York, Nov. 23—Something like a revolution, slow but sure, has overtaken the men's pajama industry. The old uncomfortable—and decidedly uncomely—pajamas have gone out. The fact of the matter is that men are dressing up for bed these days. In pajamas that can boast more color, more pattern, more comfort, and a good deal more life than they ever had before.

Many more men have been taking to the new coat-type pajamas . . . distinguished by their convertible collars, as in the illustration. You either button them right up to the neck. Or you leave the top button open and have a good-looking notch-lapel coat effect.

These newer type pajamas, you've noticed, are comfortable all the way. Cut with plenty of room across the chest, in the arms, in the coat length. And with their trousers cut generously enough to give the most restless sleeper through-the-night comfort, without his waking up in the morning with a half-strangled hamstrung feeling.

Middy Tops Popular—Coat Types Newer.

There are still legions of men who prefer the buttonless, slip-over top pajamas in middy, or in surplice models. But the man who knows his pajama fashions is leaning more to the trimmer-looking coat type.

Most men stick to blue in their pajama color-thinking . . . the color they like best in their ties, their shirts and their socks. Almost any shade of blue from pale and light to almost midnight blue.

But—since they're going in for more colors in their clothes in general, lots of them are putting on more pajama colors . . . colors like tan, gold, black, maroon, even deep purple. Some solid colors. Many of them fancy effects. And a great many with neat, contrasting (or harmonizing) piping around the edges of the collar, the coat front and the cuffs.

Pattern Influence Spreading.

For generations, American men have been strictly plain-pajamas in their taste. All the more remarkable that so many of them are taking up the neat, striped effects that King George's men have liked and worn so long . . . small all-over patterns of the foulard type. Even bolder designs, such as Paisleys and Persians.

It's common knowledge that the long-wearing, and the most comfortable-at-a-price pajamas are of broadcloth . . . men who like that fabric best in shirts naturally enough wear it to bed.

But your luxury-liker (and even in these times there are more and more of them) takes his in satin and silk. Another good pajama point to remember when you do your early gift shopping for him next week.

- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 4 tablespoons lard

Thanksgiving Dinner Cheaper Than Last Year

Great Gobblers Are Fattening Under Wing of the Blue Eagle.

(Associated Press.)

Despite quite general advances in food prices under the NRA and A. A. A., indications are that the 1933 Thanksgiving dinner will cost the average household no more—and perhaps a little less—than the 1932 feast.

Turkey prices have been running 1 to 3 cents a pound under last year's quotations, according to market observers at the Department of Agriculture. While they can not be exactly forecast much in advance of the holiday, a decline in price such as usually accompanies warm weather at Thanksgiving is considered more likely than a substantial increase.

Consumer counsel surveys indicate that "nice fat" hens also are lower while executives of chain grocery stores report that most meats are lower in price than they were last fall. Potatoes and celery are slightly higher but apples are considerably cheaper. Preserved pumpkin used in the traditional holiday pie and cranberries, the turkey "side-kick," are on about the same price level as a year ago.

The Blue Eagle may have grabbed the spotlight, but the great gobbler still holds his place as America's premier feast bird. Turkey, which some 10 or 15 years ago seldom appeared on the dining table except on the most festive occasions, now is extensively served at ordinary Sunday or week-day dinners, says Roy C. Potts, chief of the Poultry Products Division of the Depatment of Agriculture.

Potts says one likely factor in the enlarged use of the bird is the improved quality of its meat. Turkeys placed on the market nowadays are of better quality owing to the fact they are matured earlier and are better fattened. Research work of the department has helped farmers in bringing a large proportion of their young turkeys to maturity.

Souvenirs.

By Katherine Smith.

I have a little wooden box
  In which I keep my souvenirs—
A dust-brown rose, a calling card,
  A letter blistered with my tears.

But, as I turn them over with
  My hand—these scraps of romance lent
To me—I find that I forget
  By whom the souvenirs were sent.

- 2 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons butter

Beat yolks, add sugar and flour. Mix quickly, add milk and cook until thick in double boiler. Stir frequently. When mixture becomes thick and creamy, add butter and vanilla. Cool. Pour over macaroons which have been placed in glass dish. Cool and chill.

Woman Painter Declares War On Jazz Art

Mrs. Ray Ovid Hall Thinks Modern Will Soon Be Forgotten.

"Modernistic art is dead art and will soon be forgotten. It mocks the universe and defiles loveliness."

That blunt statement was made by Mrs. Ray Ovid Hall in her studio on R street yesterday. It was the opening shot in a war she intends to wage against the whole modernistic nonsense.

Certainly there is nothing modernistic about Mrs. Hall's paintings. She is a disciple of Lucjan Powell, that colorful character known as the "American Turner of his day," who spent the last years of his life in a determined attack upon the gathering forces of impressionistic art.

"The scourge of modernistic art must be wiped out," he told her. "If I were ten years younger I would open up a school and give free lessons to young artists. I can't do that. I am old and I haven't much time left here. I am going to teach you what I know. Then when I am gone you can teach other young artists to portray life as it is."

For the past three years Mrs. Hall has been studying in Italy, Greece and Turkey. She has returned to America to open a school of art and to combat the indifference and ignorance about the fine arts she believes characterizes the average American.

"Did you know that a wonderful collection of paintings has been left the United States Government, and are to be sold at auction because the authorities say they have no place to hang them?" she asked. "Why in Italy people would sacrifice necessities to get a building in which to keep such treasures. Then too, the modernistic fad has crept into our schools and it is almost impossible to get instruction which is untainted by it. Yet I can see that this is all a passing phase and even now people are returning to the old naturalistic school. I want to help in this renaissance. That is why I am opening up my school."

The paintings which Mrs. Hall exhibited show the Powell influence strongly. Especially noticeable is a predomination of reds and yellows in the delicate touch with which she has painted peaceful, pastoral scenes.

"I must carry on his work," she said earnestly, "in spirit as well as in letter. That is why I have consistently refused to exhibit my paintings in connection with modernistic work. I feel that that would not be keeping the faith."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Some Plans for the Migrainous.

A recent study of migraine, made by Dr. H. A. Riley and his associates, appears to point toward a way out for a considerable proportion of those who have the sick headache habit.

The disorder going by the name migraine is a group of afflictions with nothing in common except the combination of symptoms. Therefore what relieves one case of migraine may have no effect on the next one, and the way of living that serves to prevent attacks in one person may be of no help to the next one.

In the very large group of cases that Dr. Riley and associates are interested in the seat of the disorder lies in the pituitary gland and the gonads, or both. This kind of migraine they regard as being due to overwork by the pituitary and underwork by the gonads, or by the work of the two getting out of relation to each other. However, even in these cases they think a second factor is in part responsible for the attack. What that is they do not suggest. Doubtless it varies in different cases. One of the substances secreted by the pituitary is known as prolan. This substance can be detected in the urine by a proper examination several days before an attack of migraine, as well as during the attack.

The practical value of this discovery is that persons of the group subject to this type of migraine can be warned of an impending attack two or three days before its onset and can arrange his affairs so as to be discommoded as little as possible.

There are some migrainous people who can ward off attacks by taking purgatives or enemas, by dieting, and by getting plenty of rest. The discovery, when confirmed and applied, can be made the basis of another line of preventive medication, in the opinion of the experimenter. The ovary secretes an endocrine substance which is known as follutein, or theelin, now on the market. Dr. Riley suggests that an injection of this endocrine substance, given when urinalysis shows prolan, will prevent attacks of migraine.

If it is proved to be a successful preventive it should also be a cure if used during the first day of the headache or while prolan is still found in the urine.

The test is of value in the case of males as well as females, and if the medicine suggested as a preventive proves to be of value it should help men as well as women.

Enemy of Jazz Art

Modernistic tendencies are a menace to true art, in the opinion of Mrs. Ray Ovid Hall, painter and pupil of the great Lucian Powell. She has declared war on the "jazz age."

Plants Choke In Pots That Cramp Roots

They Need Repotting and Bathing Every Now and Then.

It is a good plan to examine your potted plants. Sometimes the roots get too large for the pots, and should have more room to grow. Better to take care of the potted plants now than wait until it is too late.

Hold the hand over the top of the pot, with the stem of the plant between the fingers. Tap the pot gently to loosen it, then lift it off. If the plants are stubborn, it may be necessary to moisten the soil a little. If the ball of earth is completely covered with roots the plant should be put in a larger pot and thoroughly watered.

Plants that reach maturity slowly should require repotting less often than those which grow rapidly.

Soil for potting should consist of one part compost, one part good loam and one part sand. A little bone meal is a good addition. If you have no garden from which you can get the soil it can be obtained from a florist.

House plants need baths occasionally. A good washing with a pure soap-suds not only removes the dust and soot, but the insect pests that may be present on the stems or foliage. The broad leaves of rubber plants will brighten considerably after a sponge. After washing rinse them immediately.

Vionnet Uses African Great White Cape

Paris (U.P.).—Vionnet has glorified the Spahis cape of sumptuous proportions, which means she has "gone African" in a large way. The great wrap-around cape which the Spahis wear in Africa is of white wool, but Mme. Vionnet is making them in white satin and velvet for formal evening cape-coats which slip on over the head. Her newest and most striking version, however, is made entirely of ermine.

Mainbocher uses ermine to form the huge bell-shaped sleeves and yoke of the coat of a "little suit." The coat material and that of the simple dress worn under it are of black wool, as are the hat, the gloves and the purse.

Colored Singers Plan Program in Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.). Two hundred colored singers, whose rendition of spirituals here last year attracted wide attention, will present a more comprehensive program at the city auditorium on December 1. Mr. George L. Johnson, of New York City, Negro barytone, is training the choir.

In addition to local talent, visiting artists to be associated with the choir include Mrs. Vivian Bright, of Winston-Salem, N. C., lyric soprano and one of the South's leading colored singers. Mr. Johnson is a representative of the National Recreation Association.

College Women Fill Leisure With Odd Jobs

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—What the college woman now working in New York City is doing with her leisure time ranges from tropical fish breeding to "just resting," as shown today by a questionnaire answered by 100 college and university women.

The inquiry was made of guests in a residential club for former students of institutions of higher education.

One girl "sews a fine seam" and has developed her skill to the point of selling "sets" for $85 each. Fifteen girls knit.

Writing is the most popular avocation, and novels, scenarios and poetry are the side interests of 25. Ten study various kinds of dancing.

There is an amateur photographer; a woman who makes hooked rugs; another who comes home from a bank, puts on her velvet pajamas and a smock, and paints the views of the East River from her apartment window.

Another learned to make gloves in Budapest, and she is keeping it up—before and after working hours.

Warm Weather Brings in Trout and Channel Bass.

"Well, how are the fish today?" asked the Marketer.

"Much better, much better; this warm weather helps a lot." The fisherman dumped a basket of trout into the scales. "Trout is good, at 10 cents a pound."

"What else do you have?"

"Well, we're getting small channel bass, that's 10 cents a pound, and croakers are 4 pounds for 25 cents."

"What's that funny fish hanging up there by its tail?"

"T'tell the truth, I'm not sure whether that's called sheep's head or ship's head; anyway, that's 12 cents a pound."

"Yas'm, most of 'em are silly looking, if you ask me!"

"How about oysters?"

"Them's 40 and 50 cents a quart."

"And crabs?"

"You haven't any?"

"Nope; they're all down in the mud, and we aren't allowed to drag for them until December 1. So you can tell the folks to lay off crabs until around December 10; then they can get them."

"I suppose there are seasons when you can't get oysters, either?"

"What do you mean; without an "r."

"Wall, lemme see." He counted the months off on his fingers. There's May, June, July and August. No 'r's' in those months."

"I get it," said the Marketer.

"Some people won't even eat oysters during those months. It's an old-fashioned custom."

Spare Young Girls Worry Of Household

One girl cried her way through four years of college, going back each fall only because she was doggedly determined to see the thing through and crying herself to sleep several times a week until senior year brought the end of the ordeal in sight.

No doubt her persistence brought its reward. Never again was the struggle quite so hard, and eventually she was able to leave home and lead a normal and happy life.

But so much misery seems excessive when by a little common sense and effort and a little plain talk it could have been avoided.

She was the oldest of a large family and had early been saddled with too much responsibility. Overconscientious, she had been given worries which did not by right belong to her. Even when she went to college she could not enter wholeheartedly into the life there, because she felt that the extra expenses thus incurred would add to the family burden.

Thrown back on herself, she took to worrying about matters at home, and wrote desperate letters of anxious questioning about domestic affairs.

It is time enough for the children to take on the worries and responsibilities of a household when they have one of their own.

For parents to pile money worries and problems about children and household management on a growing girl, already quite loaded down by school work and her own physical development, is shirking the job.

They assumed the cares and their children are in no way liable or interested. Their turn will come and in the meantime they should have freedom, leisure, time to grow and companionship of their own kind.

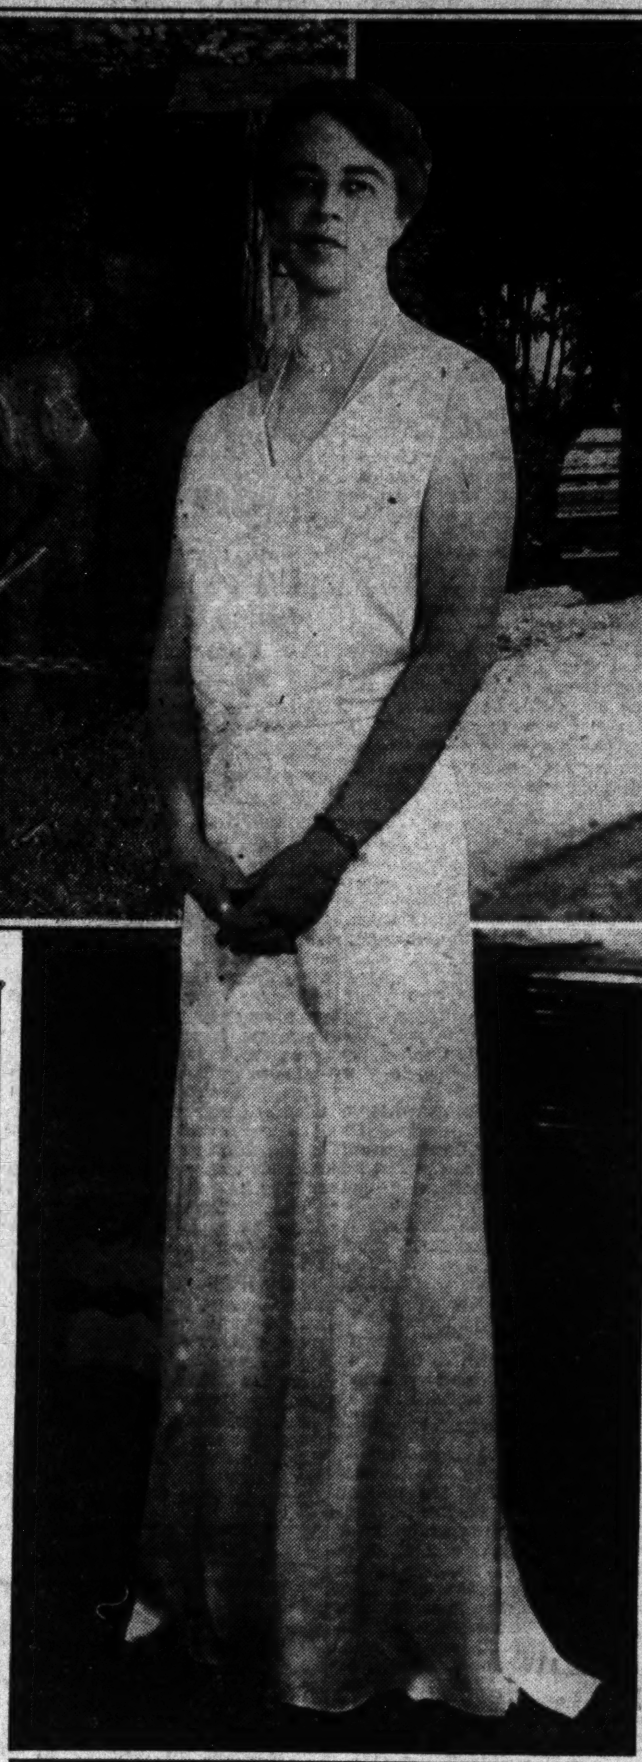
Mrs. Roosevelt's "Homeland" Becomes Model for Nation's Aid to Hopeless Millions

Courtesy U. S. Bureau of Mines.



Underwood & Underwood.

Fifty families of West Virginia coal miners who have been out of work for several years, look forward to a roseate Yuletide, thanks to the generosity and sympathy of the First Lady of the Land. She is the fairy godmother who has made homes arise out of the barren hillsides and whose vast project for rehabilitation of the destitute in this region is declared to serve as an object lesson to the entire Nation.

Cream for Eye Wrinkles Makes Age Marks Flee

By Ruth Anne Davis.

When the first wrinkles begin to appear around lovely eyes, it's time to do something about it. If the many women who spend hours a day scrutinizing them in the mirror, pulling the skin to firmness and sadly watching it fold back, would spend but a tenth of that time applying a good eye cream, there would be lasting results.

The preparation put out by the manufacturer of many aids to beauty is one of the best of its kind. Apply it at night just before going to bed and rub it in. By morning the skin has absorbed it, and already looks fresher and firmer. Do this consistently and there isn't a chance for the marring wrinkles to make any headway.

The manufacturer is so sure of the cream that he's put a money-back guarantee on it.

The new bags in an F street shop serve three purposes. First of all their gay colors serve to enliven a somber street costume and the attractive French knot wool fabric of which they're made is a drawing card of its own. Second, they're large and roomy enough to hold a compact, lipstick, cigarette case and various other trifles we like to carry with us. Third and most interesting, they're designed to act as muffs to keep our hands warm.

They come in practically all of the new fall shades to match anything in the wardrobe. Velvet bags are made in this fashion too, but they're only in white, red, brown and black.

To wield a lipstick with one hand has always been considered a feat. But now it's merely a matter of course if we use the new automatic lipsticks, which were designed for this purpose.

They are arranged so that at the press of a spring the top slides aside and the rouge comes out ready for use. Their nontarnishable chrome cases will keep shiny and new as long as the lipstick lasts.

When the whistle blows it's tea time, according to the burnished copper kettles in a downtown store. They're equipped with little black wood whistles over the spout which begin to toot emphatically when the water boils.

Even when they aren't in use they make attractive ornaments to place on the hearth alongside a blazing fire.

The new ash tray in a Connecticut avenue shop is one of England's contributions to the novelty list. The little pieces of wood making a flat fence around it might surprise you at first. But if you catch hold of one and give it a pull, you'll find matches with their heads buried. When they're used up, it's easy to remove the bowl of the tray and put in a new supply.

Cold, gray days are a ripe time for the blues unless we take special measures to insure our high spirits. Most women are so susceptible to the influence of clothes they can sway their feelings by the way they're dressed.

We might experiment the next overcast day by donning one of the bright plaid hats which a large department store is featuring now. They come in every conceivable color, in numerous criss-cross designs at an extremely reasonable price. If one of these blithe sport models doesn't keep these blues away, we're inclined to wonder what could.

Automatic cocktail mixers can be depended upon to do a good job in a short time. We've accustomed ourselves to thinking that cocktails need vehement shakings. But that's where we're wrong. They need a good thorough mixing more than anything else.

In this way automatic mixers have it all over us. We can stir, blend, and beat, but we can't compete with them. After pouring the concoction into the mixer, turn the top and the work begins. In a minute or so the cocktails are ready, churned to the point of perfection

Just why we've clung so tenaciously to square card tables is hard to understand after we've seen the round ones in a Connecticut avenue shop. It might be because they're unusual, or it might be their graceful curve, but something about them makes them impossible to pass by without inspecting.

There's one with a black suede cloth top and shiny chromium rim with collapsible chairs to match that we can imagine being the inspiration of many bridge evenings.

Amelia Earhart Putnam Turns Designer of Sports Clothes

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Women's sports clothes seemed a little too fancy to Amelia Earhart Putnam—and so she is designing some herself and will exhibit her collection next month.

"Nature," she said today, "is essentially simple, and clothes to be worn in natural surroundings must be completely harmonious with nature."

For the last three months, the famous flier disclosed, she has been working on designs for sports clothes. One is a new type of overall suit for aviators. Others are ingenious garments for travel and all other outdoor activities.

It was from the practical standpoint of the pilot and the woman who spends a great deal of time out-of-doors that she first gave attention to the cut and material of sports clothes.

Evening Gowns Of Satin Have Filmy Redingote

Bodices Show Criss-Cross Effect, With Very Low Backs.

While the silhouette of almost all the midseason gowns continues to mold the body in long, sculptured lines, the hemlines are growing so full that some have a frothy quality as they swish about the wearer's feet.

One of the newest influences in evening fashions is the redingote. This is marvelously effective when the gown is satin and diaphanous chiffon makes the redingote.

Trimmings are just as attractive as they are varied and in many instances play a large part in forming the silhouette. Fringes, shirrings, cordings, cut-out appliques, furs, narrow fluted bands and stitchings are used ingeniously.

A dress with cording at the top of the sleeves has a small silver metal cape entirely covered with stitching. Flutings are usually used at the hemline or on elaborate sleeves. Fringe, in addition to being used on gowns and capes, frequently forms graceful trains. It also makes borders and flounces for evening gowns.

Deep He-Male Voices Extinct As Heath Hen

Scarcity of "Bull Basses" Threatens Choral Art.

Boston, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—The man with the good old, he-male rumbling voice is becoming as "extinct as the bison or the celebrated heath hen," an authority on male voices declared tonight.

According to a report received from his listening committee by Thompson Stone, conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society, oldest and largest permanent oratoric chorus in America, the deep, or "bull" bass is dying out.

Stone recently requested the audition committee of the society to find him some good deep basses. The chairman of the committee, Paul F. Spain, replied that as far as, "bull basses" are concerned "the scarcity is real, and I am afraid it is permanent."

"Our findings point unerringly to one conclusion," he declared, "namely, that the bull bass type is dying out." In five years, he pointed out, only ten men of 85 accepted by the committee had bass voices, and none were of the heavy rumble type.

Medical Examiner George Burgess Magrath, member of the society's audition committee, has not, according to Spain, "been able to supply any theory from the fields of comparative or morbid anatomy that adequately explains this phenomenon."

What Today Means

"Sagittarius."

If November 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 to 9 a. m., from 3:30 to 4:05 p. m. and from 7:55 to 8:20 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 12:25 p. m., from 5 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:40 to 10 p. m.

Influences will prompt you to deal severely with those who interfere with your work; remember to restrain yourself. Children in school will not be as attentive as they should be; their minds will stray far from the classroom and they will resent discipline. Those in love will not be able to conceal their emotions.

The child born on this November 24 will in all probability be a very serious one, who will, however, have a good deal of deviltry and good fun in his make-up. In any given situation he will know just how far he can go and just how much he can get away with. Trust him to go the limit and no farther.

If November 24 is the date of your birth, you are more than likely a real searcher after truths of existence; you are no doubt or will become an ardent student of the Bible. During your life you will probably change your church-home until you find what most nearly satisfies your wants. You are not the kind to accept either the political or church views of your parents simply because they were good enough for your elders, therefore good enough for you. If you find yourself spiritually you will be a zealous and sincere disseminator of your church views; you may even turn into a missionary. One thing is certain, you will, whatever you do, attempt to conduct yourself as a Christian.

Born on November 24, you quickly succeed in getting into the good graces of others; they seem readily to give their confidences and you, who keep your counsel, will not betray them. Although you are interested in acquiring sufficient material possessions to see you comfortably through life, you apply a strict standard of ethics to your conduct and will at the sacrifice of wealth turn down any proposition which does not measure up to your standard. You spend many hours in meditation and study. Your happiest hours are spent in your home, and there peace and harmony are seldom broken. People enjoy visiting you, so gracious and hospitable are you.

Repeal a Stumbling Stone On Road to Teetotaling

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Women of the W. C. T. U. regard repeal of the eighteenth amendment as "just a boulder in a winding trail up a mountain toward world safety," Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, of Des Moines, Iowa, the organization's new head, said tonight.

"Of course, many members of the total of 400,000 are saddened that the people were not content to give prohibition a fair trial," she added. "But, looking forward to a day of total abstinence, we are only intensifying our efforts."

"This year," she said in an interview, "we are celebrating the sixtieth anniversary of the original women's crusade by laying plans for a new crusade.

"In addition to stressing present Federal and State laws requiring teachers to educate youth regarding the nature and effects of liquor, looking toward abstinence, we will promote such education among adults by means of forums and lectures, community study groups and adult Bible classes.

"A phase of our social education will be to devise ways of presenting nonalcoholic fruit products, which can be used instead of intoxicating drinks, at parties."

Mrs. Smith, who is an ordained minister, and has been a member of the W. T. C. U. for 42 years, is here to attend the biennial meeting of the National Council of Women.

She asserted that "our friends of the opposition can not lay claim to the word 'temperance.' That is ours. 'Temperance,' according to both the Bible and the dictionary—and to us—means 'total abstinence from intoxicating drink.'"

"It won't be long," she predicted, "before people will be harking back to the last 13 years of 'relief,' and wishing it were here again."

Washington Women in Welfare Work

CAPT. RHODA J. MILLIKEN.

Police work is combined with social welfare activity in the life of Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, ranking woman officer of the Metropolitan Police Department and in charge of the Women's Bureau of that department. While she takes part in practically every sort of welfare activity in the city, Capt. Milliken combines her board memberships to the Social Hygiene Society and the Bureau of Rehabilitation, on both of which she serves actively. Her reasons for service in these boards are contained in the following statement:

"Through its educational program, the Social Hygiene Society is bringing to a steadily increasing and more varied group of people a better understanding of human relationships in connection with certain health and community problems. By this activity it makes possible a greater effectiveness of the social protective measures which we have.

"Service on the board of the Bureau of Rehabilitation is to me a double obligation as an officer in the police department and as a citizen. It is making possible not only the return to the community of persons who for a time have been taken out of it but giving the community as well as the individual another chance to start out anew and correct the mistakes it has only too often made with the individual."

Tired Little Girl Slumbered On First Lady's Crushed Hat

Fairmont, W. Va., Nov. 23 (AP). Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt doesn't know it, but one of her hats has a little girl very, very much worried.

Wearied by excitement attending the visit of the President's wife to Reedsville on her way to inspect the model town of Arthursdale, the child went in search of a nice, soft place to rest.

She found it in a huge chair in one of the buildings on the estate and soon was fast asleep.

Mrs. G. F. Jaynes, coming into the room, found her lying on a rumpled hat, coat and fur neckpiece.

She smoothed the pieces, put them away and then told the panic-stricken tot to whom they belonged.

"Oh, please, please, don't tell who did it," pleaded the child.

The kindly woman promised and so Mrs. Roosevelt never, never will know the name of the tired little girl who slept on her hat.

Countess Quits Society for Job As Saleswoman

Washington Girl Who Married Nobleman Now Sells Gowns.

Once there were glamorously gleaming diamonds, and gay light laughter of noble gatherings for the countess. Once there were soft velvets that trailed the floor, and breathlessly modeled gowns of shimmering satin. Now she sells the clothes that she might regally wear to smart Washingtonians.

"I'm just an ordinary sales woman," explained Countess Marjorie Salvoni, who is holding a fashion exhibit for a big New York firm at the "Three Musketeers," rendezvous of the Junior Leaguers, on Connecticut avenue. "I'm an ordinary sales woman for the simple reason that I need money, as every one else needs money these days."

She reached toward a rack of multi-colored evening dresses. "Here is a lovely model," she said, "charming for a young girl. She took down a slim-lined dress of red, brocaded in gold. "Can't you see a wide-eyed young debutante going to her first big ball in this dress?"

The countess laughed. "I've been in the dress business a whole two months now, and find it utterly fascinating. So many, many lovely things! So tempting! If anyone should ask me which of the dresses I should like to own, I'm afraid I should say, I really can't decide!'

"Yes, sometimes I see a woman buy a dress that looks terrible on her—a lovely dress and a lovely person, but they simply do not suit each other. At first it pained me, but now I'm hardened to it—something like being a trained nurse, I guess! They too must steel themselves to gruesome sights.

"Oh, but you should see the barroom in our New York shop. We are serving tea to our customers now, but pretty soon we are going to put in a real bar and serve cocktails. It will be much nicer." She pulled her smart black antelope hat a fraction farther down over her eye at a saucy angle.

Then the countess looked cautiously around to make sure no one was listening in, and, with a sly twinkle in her eye she confessed:

"Don't tell a soul, but I'm not a real countess, I should say not! I'm a true daughter of the U. S. A. In fact, I'm a Washingtonian. But my husband is a count and it's lots of fun playing at nobility now and then—when I'm not selling dresses!"

New Airplane Gown Creates Paris Furor

Of Stiff Satin It Has Wings at Back; Hard to Sit Down.

Paris (AP).—A new "airplane line" with outstanding wings below the back of the hipline has made its debut here as the latest evening silhouette, inspired by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's first visit since his record-breaking flight.

One designer launched gowns of stiff shimmering satin cut on a slender trained silhouette with fabric "airplane" wings which stood straight out in the back and then curved in. The manikins who wore the gowns gave no demonstration of the technique of sitting down.

The vogue for accented hiplines marked a number of midseason evening frocks. Pert peplums flaring over the hipbones emphasized hiplines and slenderized waists.

Rich plum and silver lame fashioned one slender sinuous frock designed with brief peplums which flared right over the hips. It was accompanied by a long scarf of plum colored velvet lined with the same moire. Deep green faille made another striking gown whose flaring basque hips were made of green and gold lame faille.

Dinner gowns too appeared with accented hiplines. One model of soft black wool splashed with silver dots had a demure basque bodice which rippled over the hips. Two bright red dahlias caught at the front of the neckline were the only touch of color on the frock.

St. Thomas' Parish To Exhibit Dresses

Orange, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—An amateur art exhibit, sponsored by the Junior Woman's Club of Orange, will be held at St. Thomas' Parish House Friday, December 8. The exhibit will be given for the benefit of the County Dental Clinic at Orange High School.

A feature of the show will be impersonations of "Her Wedding Dress." Dresses from the eighteenth century up to and including present-day styles will be displayed. Dresses worn by those taking part in the exhibit will be original, some of them having been worn by ancestral brides of prominent families in this vicinity.

Plans for National Theater "Nebulons"

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt pronounced "very nebulous" plans for a National theater formulated by Eva LeGallienne, which the actress hopes to place before the President.

However, Mrs. Roosevelt made clear her own interest in such a project, which she said is now being talked of in theater groups of many of the leading cities.

"There is no question that many people think that perhaps if we are going to educate for more leisure there will have to be an effort made to bring within reach of the people things of beauty in every line to increase general appreciation and pleasure," she told her press conference.

She Calls It A Laboratory Of Social Aid

President's Wife Is Full of Enthusiasm Over Model Town.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's dream project — the miners' "homeland" in the hills of West Virginia, which sprang into being out of her thought and her pity for human suffering—may become a model of how the rehabilitation of the destitute should be carried on throughout the entire Nation.

Her face aglow, her eyes shining with enthusiasm, the First Lady yesterday reported to the women of her press conference, gathered about her in the White House green room, the results of her tour of inspection of the vast tract and of the little model town which is blossoming under her guidance.

She had just returned after a two-day trip that included a night on the train, a tiresome motor jaunt, and hours of tramping afoot across country to Arthurdale—the town whose name spells hope to hundreds of helpless families, but which is still little more than a set of engineers' and architects' blueprints. By Christmas Day the First Lady hopes to see a nucleus of 50 homes built, furnished, tenanted and sparkling with merry holiday cheer.

Work Progressing.

"Everything is coming along very satisfactorily," she said, describing how the ground was being broken for the first cellars when she was there, and how she had gone over the plans herself and made such changes as were needed, as the placing of the children's recreation and sports ground alongside the public school.

That school is to be one of her particular interests. Its curriculum will provide for regular recreation classes and for all sorts of cultural advantages for boys and girls who have passed the first few years of their lives in a grim battle with cold and hunger. In the new homeland they will lack for nothing. Like the children of the more fortunate, they will be watched for artistic talents and individual possibilities, and will be given every opportunity to make the most of their lives.

The houses themselves, Mrs. Roosevelt said, will be of varying sizes, according to the needs of the families occupying them. Some will have as many as four bedrooms, and there will be ample closet space, for social workers studying the causes of misery among the poor in congested city tenements have discovered, it seems, that closet space is one of the most important factors of all in organization for ideal family life.

Homes of Log and Stone.

Some of the homes will be of West Virginia log and others will be built out of stone from the local quarries, now providing employment to another group of jobless men.

There is a tool shop on the town site that is hard at work reclaiming parts of old autos and junk, fashioning tools for construction work and generally preparing for the birth of the little town.

"I stopped in there and chatted with the men," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "Of course, I love a tool shop."

Her own furniture shop of Val Kyl, near Hyde Park, is running full steam in preparation for the Arthurdale "homecoming," she revealed. There, under the direction of Miss Nancy Cook, beds and chairs and tables and dressers and all that goes to make a home are being manufactured, not in series patterns, but in charming individual styles.

The furniture will be shipped to Arthurdale and there the miners and their wives will have an opportunity to select for their houses the pieces they like best.

Land for Each House.

These houses, Mrs. Roosevelt explained, will have a great deal more than a front lawn and a few feet of backyard. Rather, each will stand in the center of a five-acre plot, where the owner, under advice and guidance of University of West Virginia agricultural experts, may start for himself a little stock farm of cows, chickens and pigs, or may raise vegetables for his family's wants and to sell.

In addition to this, employment will be provided for those who wish it in the small factory which is to be an important feature of the model town.

Thus it appears that the Christmas season in Arthurdale will be a time for real rejoicing. As Mrs. Roosevelt herself outlined the project, which she destines to become a vast rehabilitation enterprise, its far-reaching effects on similar undertakings throughout the land seemed evident. She herself thinks of it as something more than a local effort.

To Be Laboratory.

"The Arthurdale community is to serve as a laboratory," she declared, "in which not only farm and crop experiments will be carried on, but certain social experiments as well."

As Mrs. Roosevelt sped by auto across West Virginia on her inspection tour a coat works a few miles beyond Morgantown blew her a salute on its squeaky factory whistle.

The incident was significant of the sense of deep loyalty and gratitude her Arthurdale project has inspired in the hearts of American working people everywhere.

Visit of Screen "Alice" Delayed—Marie Dressler Cuts Critics Piece of Cake!

Miss Henry to Reach Capital Two Days Late

Will Arrive Here Dec. 7; How to Win Turkey; Theater Chat.

Unavoidable delay in departure from the West Coast of Charlotte Henry, the demure young blonde actress selected by Paramount to assume the role of Alice in the film version of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," will, perforce, defer her arrival in Washington until Thursday, December 7, local officials of Loew's, Inc., were advised last night.

This young Brooklyn, N. Y., girl, whose age has been variously reported as anywhere between 11 and 19 years, and who was chosen from among more than 7,000 aspirants for the role of Alice—being played currently on the stage at the National by Josephine Hutchinson in the Eva Le Gallienne production of the Carroll fantasy—was to have arrived in this city on December 5. The two-day delay, however, will not alter the elaborate plans for her entertainment when she does put in an appearance.

After a crowded day and a half in the Capital—in which will be included a personal appearance at Loew's Fox Theater—which is expected to provide as realistic a "wonderland" as the fantastic creation of the Carroll imagination, Miss Henry will return to New York City.

Film Follows Shortly.

The cinema's rendition of "Alice in Wonderland" is scheduled to be presented on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater the week following its star's visit to the National Capital. Coming so close upon the heels of the Le Gallienne production, now on view at the National, it will, as suggested in a recent Sabbath column, be interesting to draw the inevitable comparisons between the stage and camera versions of the famous classic.

In addition to Miss Henry, in the title role, the cast of the celluloid "Alice" will include Richard Arlen, Roscoe Ates, Gary Cooper, Leon Errol, W. C. Fields, "Skeets" Gallagher, Louis Fazenda, Raymond Hatton, Edward Everett Horton, Polly Moran, Jack Oakie, Charlie Ruggles, Alison Skipworth, Ned Sparks, Edna May Oliver, May Robson and Roscoe Karns.

The visit here of the real-life Alice, in the person of Miss Henry, is being sponsored by the Loew Theaters, Paramount Pictures and the Washington Kiwanis Club.

An echo of the recent birthday party in Hollywood celebrating the sixty-second anniversary of the birth of Marie Dressler reached the dramatic desk yesterday in the form of a neatly boxed piece of the huge birthday cake that constituted the piece de resistance of the occasion. The inclosed card had this to say: "Christopher Bean liked my cooking. I hope you will enjoy this piece of my birthday cake. (Signed) Marie Dressler." Miss Dressler got her hope!

How to Gobble a Gobbler.

Although the precise process to be followed in acquiring possession of one of the handsome birds is not made entirely clear in the scholarly piece of writing that has come to hand, it seems that six turkeys are to be given away within a period of six days at Loew's Fox Theater through some method of voting or other.

Ballots have been prepared, so one hears, on which the names of 26 of the better talking pictures of recent release are listed. If one is so lucky as to apply the right title to the correct bird, his Thanksgiving fowl will not cost him anything—or something like that.

Three of the turkeys are on exhibition in the lobby of the theater—all weighing something in excess of 40 pounds, which is by the way of being considerable turkey, especially for a family of two! One of the festive birds is a beautiful bronze; the other two Narragansetts.

Each day's votes are to be kept separate and the awards made the Wednesday before Thanksgiving.

Reverting momentarily to the topic of "Alice in Wonderland," there will probably be not better opportunity than this to remark again that its popularity at the National this week is so great that an extra matinee has been announced for this afternoon, at which it will be given one more performance than was originally scheduled. Today's matinee will begin at 2:45.

Another Alice.

Josephine Hutchison, by the way, who has so out-Englished the English in her portrayal of Carroll's adventurous little heroine, and is often mistaken for a native-born Britisher, is, of course, an American girl. Miss Hutchinson was born in Seattle, Wash., where she made her home until she was 16.

Manifesting an early desire to become an actress, she won a scholarship in a school of dramatic art and received her early stage training at the capable hands of Maurice Brown, who, although himself an Englishman, is to all intents and purposes the father of the "little theater" movement in Amreica.

Resident of Washington.

After some experience in the West, Miss Hutchinson came East and for about three years was a member of the Rams Head Players in this city, of which Robert Bell was the moving spirit. During the course of this association, Miss Hutchinson became Mrs. Robert Bell and, naturally, made her home in Washington. Her first appearance in New York was in "The Bird Cage," in 1925, followed closely the same year by an engagement in "A Man's Man."

In 1926 she became a member of Miss Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Theater Co., of New York, and has remained there since. During this affiliation she has been seen in the following plays, among others: "Twelfth Night," "The Cradle Song," "Hedda Gabler," "Peter Pan," "The Cherry Orchard," "Alison's House," "Camille" and "The Three Sisters."

The "Songbird of the South"

Washington's own Kate Smith, star of stage, screen and radio, who this morning returns to her native city to appear professionally for the first time in almost two years, as star of her "Swanee Revue," on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater.

"Boy of Mine," that sentimental ballad of wide popularity, has been voted the song out of her entire repertoire that Washington wants to hear Kate Smith sing during her current engagement, beginning today, at Loew's Fox Theater. More than 2,000 ballots were cast in less than three days to determine which number was the Capital's favorite for its native songstress. "Boy of Mine" received 673 votes, next in popularity "Home on the Range," with 511 votes, and trailing along behind in the order named were "The Rosary," "Annie Laurie" and "My Wild Irish Rose"—indicating a strange supremacy of ballads for one whose early reputation was made as a shouter of "hot" tunes!

"Wings Over Mexico."

Under date of Thursday, November 23, which was yesterday, Mr. Hubbard Keavy, chief operative of our West Coast finger-in-the-wind department, takes a telegraph key in hand at Culver City, Calif., to report as follows regarding the Lee Tracy threat against the tranquillity of the sovereign state of Mexico:

"The possibility that a great portion of the picture 'Viva Villa' will be remade here was seen in unofficial announcements from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio today, and in other developments, chief of which was the dismissal of Actor Lee Tracy.

"Tests of several players to find one to take the place of Tracy, who plays a reporter in the film biography of the Mexican bandit, were being made today.

"Mona Maris has been removed from the cast and probably will be replaced by Dorothy Burgess. No explanation for this change was given.

"Howard Hawks, who was directing, has been relieved of the assignment. Jack Conway, who originally was slated to direct, will take Hawks' place.

"It will not be known until after Hawks' return from the Mexican location trip what scenes filmed in Mexico were destroyed when an air mail plane crashed and burned near El Paso, Tex., Tuesday night.

"Two units of the film company still are in Mexico, awaiting word whether to remain to reshoot those sequences which were destroyed. If the film which was burned can not be duplicated here, it was said at the studio, it will be refilmed in Mexico.

"Meanwhile, Tracy's friends and the agency of Joyce & Selznick, which handles his business affairs, refused any comment on Tracy's removal from the picture and his simultaneous dismissal as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer employe, which action was taken last night by Louis B. Mayer.

Dave Epstein, a friend who handles some of the actor's business, said today he had talked to his client by phone in El Paso last night. "He told me the whole thing was grossly exaggerated," said Epstein, "but he didn't authorize me to make any formal statement. He'll have plenty to say, however, when he arrives here tonight."

Success Note.

Well, if excitement was what M-G-M was looking for when it started out to make "Viva Villa!" that is certainly what it got.

Maryland Bill Provides Low Liquor Taxes

Dispensaries Near D. C. and $1.10 State Excise Levy Proposed.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 23.—Liquor taxes must be so low bootleggers will be unable to sell whisky after December 6, Gov. Ritchie warned a special session of the Maryland Legislature here today.

The governor departed from his prepared message as he appealed to lawmakers for support in his drive to free the State of bootleggers, speakeasies and blind pigs.

Shortly after he outlined his program to a joint session of both houses, the administration's liquor control bill was introduced in the Senate. The measure would provide a State excise tax on liquor, sale of strong drinks in "taverns," hotels and clubs, and sale of light wines and beer in establishments now handling beer exclusively.

Outstanding among a score of other bills was a measure calling for a liquor control board of five members in Montgomery County, with dispensaries at Silver Spring, Bethesda and Rockville.

$1.10 State Excise Tax.

Ritchie proposed a State excise tax of $1.10 a gallon on liquor and fortified wines.

"We could tax liquor so high," the governor explained, "we would keep alive the bootlegger, the speakeasy and the blind pig. We certainly don't want to do that. We are, however, entitled to a fair revenue from liquor.

"The Federal Government has no right to receive all the excise taxes on liquor. Now that liquor control is to be returned to the States, we should get a fair portion of that money."

He pointed out the revenues of the State have decreased about $1,800,000 in the past year and revealed the excise tax was counted on to cover the reduction.

Smiling broadly, he added:

"Bankers tell me Maryland's credit is not only better than that of any State in the country, but of any country in the world."

$1,000 to $25 License Range.

Principal points made by the governor in explaining his revised liquor plans included: The question would be treated on the principle of local option; liquor and wines of greater than 14 per cent alcoholic content would be obtained by the drink, without purchase of food, at bona fide hotels, restaurants, cafes and clubs, to be charged a $1,000 license fee, and at taverns to be charged $500 license fee; "off-sale"—not for consumption on premises—beer and light wines licenses would be $25 and "on-sale" $50; "off-sale" liquor licenses would be $50; brewers, distillers, rectifiers, importers and wholesaler distributors would pay a $1,000 license fee; establishments under contract to sell the product of only one manufacturer would be banned; all income from the excise tax and licenses to brewers, distillers, rectifiers, importers, wholesale distributors beer and light wines dealers would go to the State; all other license fees would go to the cities or counties.

Gov. Ritchie urged passage of all rum legislation by December 6—anticipated date of a Presidential proclamation definitely repealing the eighteenth amendment.

Lynching Deplored.

The governor referred to the recent lynching of George Armwood in Somerset County as deplorable. He charged the county's State attorney has possessed for more than a week information warranting the arrest of nine persons in the lynching, but failed to take such action.

2 Alleged Pig Sale Profiteers Indicted

St. Paul, Nov. 23 (AP).—Two south St. Paul live-stock commission men today furnished bail on indictments alleging they profited improperly during recent Federal pig purchasing as the Government sought to raise prices.

James R. Williams, of Washington, special Department of Agriculture investigator, said the Government charges approximately $10,000 in improper profits by sale of animals to the Government, which offered a premium for them.

Dollar to Tell Of Ship Passes For Officials

(Associated Press.)

The names of members of Congress, Government representatives and newspaper publishers who may have received free passes or other privileges from the Dollar Steamship Line were ordered produced yesterday by the Senate Mail Investigating Committee.

President R. Stanley Dollar, who testified he thought some members of Congress, including Representative Carter (Republican), California, may have been so favored, promised to supply the information. Carter is from Oakland, Dollar's home city.

Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, requested the list while questioning Dollar on negotiations in Washington relative to the purchase of Shipping Board vessels by Dollar interests and the obtaining of mail contracts.

The testimony developed that during the negotiations, T. C. Gregory, a Washington representative of the Dollar Line, consulted with President Hoover. Dollar explained this concerned whether his company should build new ships for the round-the-world service it had started with ships it had bought from the Government. He said that Gregory did not, to his knowledge, take up with officials the question of interest rates on loans from the Shipping Board for construction of two new ships, the President Hoover and President Coolidge.

Green Charges Labor Ignored In Coal Board

Undercover dissension between Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson and organized labor was thrust into the spotlight yesterday when President William Green of the American Federation of Labor assailed the administration for failure to appoint a labor representative to the codes' Bituminous Coal Industrial Board.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, it simultaneously was reported, has cast her lot with the A. F. of L. in the dispute, and indulged in an hour's argument over the telephone with Johnson prior to the board appointments which aroused the organization's rancour.

Pointing out that labor is as much interested in securing representation on code authority organizations, labor policy boards and industrial relations boards set up under the codes "as it is in securing favorable minimum rates of pay and shorter hours," Green added that despite the supposed slight the A. F. of L. will "continue to contend vigorously" for other appointments.

The row has been developing for some time behind the scenes due to repeated refusal of Johnson to recognize labor's pleas that it be given appointments on code authority organizations, and the breach was widened materially by the treatment accorded A. F. of L. representatives in the drawing of the proposed construction code. But though A. F. of L. officials charged NRA leaders with "discrimination," with "yielding to industry" and the like, it required the bituminous board appointments to shatter semblance of friendliness.

The issue was brought to the fore by hurried action of Johnson in withdrawing the name of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, after the latter had felt certain he would be appointed on the board, and substituting that of Johnson himself.

Another upset was the appointment of Fred G. Tyron after the naming of Fred Berquist, former official of the Bureau of Mines and now an employe of the NRA mining division, had been anticipated.

The third Government appointment went to former District Judge George A. Anderson, as scheduled.

Tobacco Price Fixing Is Urged For New Code

Declaring he argued for the salvation of a billion-dollar industry, William A. Hollingsworth, of New York, president of Retail Tobacco Dealers of America, told the story of the "little fellow" or small tobacco dealer yesterday at the hearing on the cigar manufacturers' code held jointly by the NRA and the A. A. A.

Only one thing, price control, can restore prosperity to the tobacco business, Hollingsworth argued. Vicious price-cutting and the use of tobacco products as loss leaders, he said, are making the retailing of tobacco a side line instead of a major business.

"You see evidence of it right here in Washington," he continued. "Not a single independent tobacco store exists today in the District of Columbia.

Price regulation which Hollingsworth advocated, speaking for 750,000 retail tobacco outlets, is set forth in the code so that the manufacturer, having set a minimum retail price on his cigars, shall allow to the retailer a discount ranging from 20 to 28 per cent of that minimum. When the manufacturer sells to jobbers, the latter are allowed an additional discount ranging from 5 to 14 per cent.

Political Ax Shadow Falls Over District

Allen Says Patronage Not Discussed in Farley Visit.

The shadow of the political patronage ax was thrown across the District service again yesterday when it became known District officials are facing increasing pressure to find jobs for deserving Democrats.

What changes are to be made and when has not been discussed sufficiently to afford a basis for sound conjecture, but it was known that Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen has in mind some changes in the organization of the municipal service.

Since his announcement to that effect, made immediately after he was named Commissioner, he has refused to be specific and said that he has had no time to discuss the matter with the other Commissioners or to work out any definite plan. He also has said that there is to be no "carpetbagging" in the District.

Hazen said yesterday he is not aware of any outside movement to pluck jobs from possessors for the benefit of others and reiterated his belief that the present system of selecting District employes from lists of eligibles certified by the Civil Service Commission should be continued.

Should Have Free Hand.

The Commissioners, however, should have a free hand in selecting department heads and assistant department heads, and should have equally as free hand in displacing those who they were not in sympathy with, Commissioner Hazen said.

Commissioner George E. Allen confined his comment to a general statement, which he refused to make specific when pressed by newspaper reporters. He did not know how the President might feel about the matter and he felt it would be improper for him to say he would oppose or favor a policy until he knew what the President might have in mind.

Commissioner Allen visited Postmaster General James A. Farley as soon as he was appointed, but their conversation had nothing to do with patronage, the Commissioner said.

Harrison Backed Allen.

Allen had as his chief supporter for appointment Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, and several other members of both Senate and House. Several members of both houses also were among the supporters of Hazen. Both have said, however, they made no pledges and were under no obligations to find jobs.

Postmaster General Farley made it plain that he considered several jobs filled by Republican Presidents as falling within that group which might be considered available for paying political debts.

Retirement of several District executives and those in the ranks is likely in the next few months Commissioner Hazen indicated. Hazen has said he is not certain just who will come within the arc of the ax of the retirement law. Most District executives have passed decades in the service of the city.

Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of penal institutions, is beyond the retirement age of 70 and is serving under an extension. The same thing is true of Frank Sebring, veteran clerk of the District Police Court.

Stephens Near Retirement.

Francis H. Stephens, assistant corporation counsel, is among the elders in the District service and will reach retirement age in a few months.

The office of corporation counsel, held by William W. Bride, was marked many months ago as a nice one which should be passed along. Talk along that line, however, has quieted down. Bride is comparatively young and has won the admiration and support of many influential persons on Capitol Hill.

Among other department heads who are no longer young in years, but who are some time away from the arbitrary retirement age, are Dr. William C. Fowler, health officer; Daniel J. Donovan, auditor; Daniel E. Garges, secretary to the Board of Commissioners; Morris Hacker, superintendent of refuse; Marion C. Hargrove, purchasing officer, who has passed more than 40 years in the District government; Clifford Lanham, superintendent of trees and parkings, and many others.

District employes, except Police and Fire Departments, do not enjoy full Civil Service protection. They may be removed by the Commissioners. Under an executive order issued by President Hoover the Civil Service Commission was authorized to prepare lists of eligibles for the District service.

Man Admits Robbery Of 75 Coin Telephones

Caught with a pocketful of nickels, Warren F. McGuinn, 38, no fixed address, pleaded guilty in Police Court yesterday to robbing 75 pay telephones in Government buildings. He will be sentenced Monday by Judge John P. McMahon.

Raymond C. Whipp, telephone company employe, testified McGuinn stuffed paper in the coin receiving chute of the boxes and returned later to collect the coins deposited. A quantity of paper napkins and wire was found on him.

Assault Case Against Carlin To Be Dropped

Prosecutor Declares He Will Dismiss Charge; Lacks Evidence.

Charges of assault, placed against Keith Carlin after an alleged assault upon Mrs. Marue Cobb Frazier, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Hugh C. Frazier, retired, will be dropped in Police Court today, it was learned last night.

Assistant United States Attorney Michael F. Keogh last night determined upon such a course after he investigated the case. Keogh said he "would be foolish" to attempt to prosecute Carlin. His investigation, he declared, convinced him there was no chance of sustaining an attack charge in court.

Today he will ask the charge be dismissed.

Carlin, it was charged, struck Mrs. Frazier after a party in his apartment, 2008 Sixteenth street northwest, on the morning of November 12. Blood-stained clothing and evidence of a struggle were found by police.

In a written statement, Mrs. Frazier declared they had been drinking and as she was about to leave the apartment Carlin grabbed her and almost stripped her of her clothing. Keogh declared police found a key to Carlin's apartment in her pocketbook. The attack occurred after other guests at the party had left, Mrs. Frazier said.

Veterans Fight Cuts Of Pension in C. W. A.

An attempt to protect disabled veterans employed by the Civil Works Administration from suffering a pension cut while employed was launched yesterday by the Disabled American Veterans.

Disabled veterans employed by the Government are not allowed to receive a pension of more than $6 per month unless disability was received in combat. Special regulations suspend this ruling in the case of employes of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

In an effort to have a similar suspension made in the case of the Civil Works Administration, the Disabled Veterans yesterday sent letters to the Emergency Relief Administration, the Director of the Budget and the Veterans' Administration.

Police Search for Boy.

Police yesterday were asked to look for Thomas E. Sullivan, 15, who disappeared Tuesday from his home, 709 E street northeast. Described by his mother as being about 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing about 120 pounds, the boy wore a blue sweater, dark trousers and a brown overcoat.

Pre-Thanksgiving Half Holiday Granted Government Workers

District Employes Also Will Get Off at 1 P. M. Wednesday.

Government employes, whether in regular or emergency agencies, will have something extra to be thankful for next Wednesday when they get off at 1 o'clock to prepare for Thanksgiving.

The half holiday was ordered yesterday by Director of the Budget Douglas. It applies to both Washington and field employes, in the old or in the new offices. Even in the NRA, home of Government overtime, employes will get the extra holiday if the pressure of business permits.

The "pressure of business" clause was contained also in Douglas' order, but past experience has shown that this usually means that everybody gets away. It has been the usual procedure in Washington for the President to order a half holiday before both Thanksgiving and Christmas.

A half day for District employes also was ordered yesterday by the District Commissioners. Policemen and firemen are not included.

Curley Club Benefit Party Set Tomorrow

A benefit party will be given at 8 p. m. tomorrow by the Curley Club at the Church of the Assumption, Nichols avenue, Congress Heights. The proceeds will go to the Archbishop Curley educational fund for children in the achdiocese.

Delay in Sale Of Mayflower Hotel Refused

Court Denies Petition of Holders of Second Trust Notes.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Supreme Court yesterday declined to postpone foreclosure sale of the Mayflower Hotel, thus paving the way to an early reorganization of the Connecticut avenue property.

Suit for foreclosure was brought by holders of first trust notes secured by the hotel. Their move was opposed by holders of second trust notes on the theory that a sale now would not bring sufficient money to meet both the first trust of $7,443,000 and the second trust of $2,400,000.

"The evidence (at a hearing to block foreclosure) does not justify a finding that within any reasonable time the earnings of the Mayflower Hotel will be sufficient to pay the current interest and the accumulation of overdue interest on the first mortgage bonds.

"An analysis of the earnings of the hotel since it opened convinces me that under the most optimistic view it is not reasonable to expect this would happen within less than three to five years, and it probably would take an indefinite period, if it ever happened at all."

The earnings thus far this year, he pointed out, are $391,000, exclusive of depreciation and receivership expenses. With all deductions this figure will pay less than 7 per cent on the first trust only. Overdue interest of $1,100,000 now is on the books. "Postponement of the foreclosure would accomplish nothing for second mortgage bondholders," Justice Adkins declared.

The opinion also decreed that about $600,000 now in the hands of the receivers, accumulated as profits, should be used to pay 6 per cent interest to first trust noteholders.

The reorganization plan, now nearing completion, should be presented to the receivers for examination, and they should, in turn, report to the court their opinions, Justice Adkins said.

Unfortunate Children To Be Theater Guests

The Children's Theater will be host tomorrow to Washington's underprivileged children. Seven homes will send youngsters to see "Curdie, the Princess and the Goblin."

The treat of seeing a real stage play will be enjoyed by children from Friendship House, "Hillcrest," the Neighborhood House, the Children's Hospital, the Juvenile Protective Association, the Christ Child Society and the Episcopal Home for Children.

Conduit Road Citizens Ban Liquor Sales

Debating with a fervor, members of the Conduit Road Citizens Association voted last night to prohibit sale of liquor in the neighborhood.

So crowded was the meeting at Our Lady of Victory Church that although there was no "S. R. O." sign available, the group standing three deep in the rear of the meeting hall was evidence of the interest in the liquor problem in the section.

Counts and recounts were demanded in such quick succession that a 15-minute recess had to be called to allow registration of new members who paid dues so that they might have a voice. With every new member who favored the sale of liquor another who thought different offered the fee required to take part.

Canvass Move Fails.

Finally a roll call count was taken and the sentiment registered against sale of liquor. A motion for the appointment of a committee to canvass the sentiment of the entire community was lost in the scuffle.

The question of the sale of liquor was not the only issue calling for debate. A motion presented by Albert Lyman, local attorney and former diving champion, to make precinct jails more comfortable presented a flare in the discussion.

While some members visioned settees and lounges as part of the regular equipment of cells, no one seemed willing to talk from actual experience. Lyman stated that it was no crime to be locked up. His motion, however, was not adopted.

New Bridge Sought.

Considering the "existent inadequate Chain Bridge," the association went on record favoring an appropriation by Congress of not less than $10,000 for a study of plans to construct a high level bridge to take its place. The secretary of the organization was instructed to get in touch with civic organizations of nearby Virginia and solicit their support of the resolution.

The group also favored removal of the old Aqueduct Bridge and the use of an underground wiring with ornamental poles and high-powered lights along Conduit road. Ellis R. King, president, presided. The next meeting of the association will be held in the Community Church

Jury at Odds On Extortion Case Verdict

Panel Will Deliberate Further Today After 9-Hour Deadlock.

2 Patrolmen Pace Halls Awaiting Word From 11 Men, Woman.

Failing to reach a verdict after nine hours, the jury deliberating the case of Policemen Harry G. Bauer and Rudolph Schleichert last night was locked up at 9:35 p. m. for the night by order of Justice Peyton Gordon, of District Supreme Court.

Frequent outbursts of singing and handclapping characterized the deliberations earlier in the evening. The jury will resume consideration of the case at 10 a. m. today.

Both Bauer and Schleichert last night paced corridors in the District Supreme Court, where for the last four days they have been fighting a charge that they extorted $50 in marked money from Alfred H. Dudley, an alleged rumrunner.

Both Deny Guilt.

The Government's charge was that Bauer and Schleichert used their official status as members of the Police Department to extort the money. Both men emphatically denied they were guilty.

In their own defense, both said after they arrested Dudley in front of an upper Fourteenth street apartment last month, they were led to believe if they recommended to Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart, of Police Court, that he go as easily as possible on Dudley, the latter would furnish them with information.

They declared they went to the corner of Eighth and L streets northwest for the purpose of accepting from Dudley a tip concerning the alcohol racket here. Dudley handed Baur an envelope, and the latter handed the paper to Schleichert, who placed it in his pocket.

Envelope Recovered.

At this point, a group of secreted police officials pounced upon the pair and arrested them. The envelope, containing $50 in marked money, was found on Schleichert at Police Headquarters. Schleichert testified he was amazed when the envelope was torn open and the money was found in it.

He said he thought it contained information he had been led to believe, either Dudley, or his employer, Henry Milton, would give them.

Case Sent Direct to Jury.

Dispensing with a Police Court hearing, the case of two Traffic Bureau policemen, John R. LeFoe and Henry L. Woods, charged with extortion, was taken directly to the grand jury yesterday.

The officers, assigned to motorcycle patrol, are accused of having accepted $10 from Wayne B. King colored, 720 Girard street northwest, for letting him go instead of arresting him on a speeding charge.

Capt. James Bobo, night superintendent of police, who arrested the men at the Second Precinct Wednesday night, said the officers stopped King near his home Monday, and after talking to him agreed to accept $10.

King informed his father of the policeman's demands and then notified police officials, who gave the boy two marked $5 bills to give the officers. The two bills were found in LeFoe's gauntlet when he was placed under arrest. No statement was made by the officers.

Federal Union Heads Will Go to Baltimore

John W. Ginder, president of the District Federation of Federal Employes' Unions, will head a delegation of the Washington Federal unions to the convention of the Maryland State Federation of Federal Employes' Unions in Baltimore tomorrow.

Others to go are William S. Kinney, vice president of the District Federation; Alfred Harmon, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Rebekah K. Pedigo, chairman of the entertainment committee. Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and National Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally also will be present.

Girl Will Direct Home of New Yorker Instead of Office.

A wedding ceremony tomorrow will terminate Miss Dorothea Whitehead's term in office as secretary to Representative Joseph A. Gavagan, of New York City.

When Gavagan was elected November 5, 1929, to fill an unexpired term, Miss Whitehead became his secretary, and she has had a pleasant position, she admits. But after marriage Miss Whitehead will keep house at 4707 Connecticut avenue and Mr. Gavagan will have a new secretary.

The ceremony will take place at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the chapel of Catholic University. The Right Rev. Mgr. Eugene Connelly will celebrate the mass. The Rev. Patrick J. Healy will officiate at the ceremony.

Prices Stand Here Under Dyers Code

Supplementary D. C. Rates Now Being Compiled.

Cleaning and pressing prices in Washington will not be affected by the new cleaners and dyers code of the National Recovery Administration, which became effective yesterday in about 200 cities.

Washington is among the cities for which supplementary lists of prices now are being compiled. The National Association of Cleaners and Dyers, which is compiling the prices, stated yesterday that it probably would be some time before the list would be finished, and in the meantime there should be no price changes here.

Admiral Butler Ill, Honor Lunch Put Off

Rear Admiral Henry V. Butler, who soon is to be relieved as commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, had influenza yesterday, and a farewell luncheon planned in his honor by the President's Cup Regatta committee was postponed. John A. Remon, chairman of the regatta committee, said the luncheon probably would be held next Friday.

Admiral Butler will take command of Battleship Division 3 of the Battle Fleet, and will leave for the West Coast December 7. He will be succeeded here by Rear Admiral Joseph R. DeFrees.

Bolling Field Job Will Give 1,000 Work

$750,000 Improvement Project Is Approved by District CWA.

Work Relief Program Speeds Ahead; First Pay Day Tomorrow.

Improvement of Bolling Field entailing employment of 1,000 men and expenditure of $750,000 over a year was approved yesterday by the District Civil Works Administration.

The project is one of the largest submitted for inclusion in the works program and was approved by the District administration after it had been disapproved by the Public Works Administration. Work is to be started within a few days.

Approval of the project came when officials were striving to get new projects launched to keep abreast of the steadily rising number of men and women assigned to the civil works rolls. Capt. Howard F. Clark, assistant engineer commissioner and executive officer of the works administration, estimated that less than half of the 11,000 persons assigned to jobs were actually engaged on approved projects.

William C. Cleary, in charge of the job assignment division, estimated that approximately 35 per cent of those on works pay rolls were still at work on jobs assigned by the emergency relief. Several of the emergency relief projects will be continued as within the scope of the civil works program. Persons engaged on other jobs will be transferred to those of more permanent character as fast as these can be organized.

Although most Federal agencies in the District are drawing on the local works administration workers needed for various jobs, the office of the National parks, buildings and reservations, which has assumed more and more authority in the District during the last several years, has remained independent.

Mr. Cleary and his office force worked late into the night preparing the pay roll for the first week of civil works employment. It was roughly estimated the amount would exceed $100,000. First checks are to be distributed tomorrow.

Firemen to Hold Turkey Shoot.

King Promises New Municipal Center Appeal

Senator to Ask P. W. A. Funds; Insists Project Is Needed Now.

Armed with new facts and figures on Washington's Municipal Center project, Chairman William H. King of the Senate District Committee is preparing a renewed appeal to the Public Works Administration for enough money to build the first unit of the center.

"The more I study the matter, the more I become convinced the Government owes it to the District to advance this money now, when the unit is most needed," Senator King told The Post.

He pointed out that the District government originally was able to construct the modest new court structures it needed out of its own funds.

"Congress wasn't satisfied," said Senator King. "It insisted on enlarging the plans into a grandiose scheme, forcing the District to pay $6,500,000 for four city blocks.

"Congress wanted an elaborate $20,000,000 Municipal Center, befitting the Capital of the Nation. Then after they started it, they wouldn't go through with it. The result is that many District facilities are miserably housed."

Happy Navy Gridmen, Quietly Confident, Leave for Army Game

Miller Plans Frequent Shifts

Will Use Same Strategy as That Which Beat Notre Dame.

Fans Brave Drizzle to Cheer Squad of 44 at Station.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 23 (Spl.). Navy gridiron gladiators shook the gooey terrain of Thompson Stadium from their cleated shoes late this afternoon, boarded a special train at 6:30 o'clock and were whisked off for Philadelphia, fit and ready to do battle with the rival Army Cadets in the thirty-fourth game of the interservice series to be staged on Franklin Field Saturday afternoon. The players were in happy spirits, and quiet confidence pervaded the Navy camp in general as to the outcome of the impending encounter.

An extensive workout, including a brisk signal drill in a run-down of the whole crop of plays, principally the "specials" designed to befuddle the Cadets, together with some scrimmaging, to put the last touches to offensive and defensive formations, marked the final drill on the home field, and a large group of fans braved intermittent drizzles of rain to cheer on the players.

Coaches Are Confident.

There was nothing of the boastful, but Rip Miller, completing his third year as head coach of the Tars, and all of his staff of assistants, spoke in terms of confidence that their proteges will turn the trick on their rivals, despite the edge conceded the Cadets by a majority of experts.

The squad of 44 players making the trip was given a rip roaring send-off by their comrades of the regiment. Cheering and singing as the warriors gathered in the rotunda of Bancroft Hall for the trek to the railway station, the 1,700 youths followed them to the main gate of the Government inclosure, where there was a veritable bedlam of noise, and the jubilation continued until the train pulled out of the West Street Station.

That the Middies will make a determined effort to get the jump on the enemy was indicated by the starting line-up announced by Head Coach Miller, just before departure. It includes Buzz Borries, back field star, who is expected to scintillate with Jack Buckler, Army's ace, although the strategy of holding the Buzzer in reserve until an opportune time was first considered. The selections show that Miller gave way to experience and heft as the best combination to combat the enemy.

Frequent Shifts Planned.

Coach Miller announced definitely that Gordon Chung-Hoon was not in shape to play.

Miller is expected to employ the same strategy as that which brought about the victory over Notre Dame, namely, frequent shifts both among line men and back field.

An eleventh hour surprise change in the Navy line-up was that of giving the call to Jimmie Fulp, of Greenwood, S. C., over Bob Dornin, of San Francisco, to hold down right end in place of Dave Miller, regular, who has an injured tear duct and is definitely out of it. The change was made largely because of the strong showing by Fulp in recent efforts, and, moreover, to meet the mentor's desire to increase the weight in the line. Fulp weighs 174, to Dornin's 159. Fulp will play opposite Pete Kopchak, the Cadet star in pass snaring. Also to give the line greater weight, Johnston was assigned to right guard in place of Dick Burns. The latter also is nursing a slight injury, but will be available for service in an emergency.

Experience Decides Issue.

Miller was somewhat dubious as to his tackle selections, because of the close race between Brooks, Clarke, Lambert and Cutter, but indicated that greater experience was the determining factor in favor of Brooks and Huff Clarke, both of whom are seniors, although Lambert and Cutter did a good job in the Princeton game and have been coming along strong ever since.

Perhaps not in the long history of Army and Navy games have the service teams taken the field more evenly matched in point of weight, as well as playing experience, as they will this year and for the first time Navy will have a slight advantage in poundage. The Middies starting group averages 178 10-11, compared to 178 4-11 for the Cadets. In its forward wall, Navy also holds the edge, averaging 186 3-7 to Army's 183 1-7. Army's back field quartet holds nearly a 5-pound advantage, the figures being: Army, 170; Navy, 165¾.

Experience of the contending players is reflected by the fact that eight of the Navy starters are members of next year's graduating class, while nine of the Army eleven are seniors. In addition, both teams will lose several first string substitutes by graduation. The two Army players the Middies will have to contend with for another year are Jack Buckler and Stancock, both backs. By the same token, Navy's two aces, Buzz Borries and Bill Clarke, together with Zabriskie, guard, will be available for next year.

Army Departs Amid Cheers Of Cadets

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP).—Cheered on by the entire cadet corps, Army's football team today held its last home practice session before the annual "climax" battle with Navy and started off toward the scene of Saturday's game. The Cadets left on a special train at 5:30 this afternoon for the Pine Valley Golf Club at Clementon, N. J., not far from Philadelphia.

The last practice was a very brief affair, necessarily so in order to get an early start. Lieut. Gar Davidson, head coach, had the team run through the plays it will use Saturday. He held a stop watch to make a final check on the timing, which appeared to be good. Trainer Wayne Hauck reported the squad in fine physical condition.

Short Drill Slated.

The Army squad will remain at the golf club until late Saturday morning, going into Philadelphia just in time for the game. A short practice is scheduled to be held at Franklin field, the big University of Pennsylvania athletic plant, which Navy chose as the site of this year's game, tomorrow.

The entire corps of cadets and the Military Academy Band accompanied the squad down the hill to the station, cheering the department warriors and waving "sink the navy" banners as the train pulled out. The corps does not leave here until Saturday morning. It will go directly to Philadelphia, where the parade into the field is due to start at noon. The game time is 1:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Army's probable starting line-up is Kopcsak and Burlingame, ends; Hutchison and Beall, tackles; Jablowsky and Gooch, guards; Bucknam, center; Johnson, quarter back; Buckler and Sebastian, half backs; Stancook, full back.

Reds Buy Slade From Cardinals

Straight Cash Deal for St. Louis Infielder.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—The Cincinnati Reds today announced the purchase of Shortstop Gordon Slade from the St. Louis Cardinals. It was a straight cash deal.

Slade came to the Cards from Brooklyn on February 8, 1933, along with Pitcher Dazzy Vance, in exchange for Owen Carroll and Jake Flowers. The Cards used him as a utility man. He relieved Leo Durocher now and then, playing in 39 games and hitting the low average of .115 in 61 times at bat.

This was lower than his .240 for the 1932 season with Brooklyn. Brooklyn obtained Slade and the late Mickey Finn from the Mission Club, of the Pacific Coast League, for $54,000 in 1930. Slade did not fulfill expectations. He proved a good understudy to Glenn Wright at shortstop, but was weak in hitting. He is 29.

215-Pound Minneapolis Youth Brought Brains and Brawn to C. U.

Gross came to the Brookland school from North High School, Minneapolis, where he gained his first small measure of gridiron fame by some spectacular work at guard. His brother, Lou, All-Western guard, and mentioned for the All-American at Minnesota, was assisting "Dutch" Bergman at Catholic U. when Phil got out of high school, so Phil followed his big brother's footsteps as far as Washington.

Lou Gross it was who stopped "Red" Grange and the hitherto undefeated Illinois eleven in 1926 when the "Galloping Ghost" and his Urbana team mates were about to clinch the Big Ten honors. He won the conference medal for scholarship and athletics that year, and was acclaimed one of the greatest athletes ever developed at the school.

Placed at Tackle.

When Phil arrived at C. U. his older brother was trying to fill the tackle berths with something more substantial than the 170-pounders available. Phil, with his six-foot frame that scaled 215-pounds on the hoof, was elected to one of the positions, and he's been there ever since.

How well he has succeeded is reflected in Bergman's own song of praise for him.

"Gross probably is the finest lineman I ever had the pleasure of coaching. He not only has the fundamental ability to grasp all that he has been taught, but is a player at heart and he knows the game from A to Z. He has all the essentials of a good football player. speed, brains, and brawn!"

Best Against Duquesne.

Bergman thinks Gross played his greatest game of football against Duquesne two years ago at Pittsburg when C. U. upset the Dukes, 20 to 12. He was all over the field, making most of the tackles, opening up holes for his own ball carriers and following the ball with hawk-like precision. Last year against Holy Cross he came through with a smashing performance. But it is difficult to single out any particular instances where Gross has

Yale, Harvard Pin Hopes on Upstarts

Keesling and Litman Only Recently Gained Call on First Teams.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—When Yale and Harvard keep their rendezvous with tradition at Cambridge, Saturday, the hopes of both elevens will be chiefly bound up in two upstarts who only recently earned first-team ranking.

The Yale youngster is Freddie Keesling, of San Francisco, and Harvard's hope is Chester Litman, of Brookline, Mass. When the season started Freddie and Chet were pretty well lost in the shuffle. At New Haven the back-field coaches concentrated their attention on Capt. Bob Lassiter, Tommy Curtin, Andy Callan and Stan Fuller. Up Cambridge way the ball-carriers who drew the attention were Dean, Wells, Nevin and Barrett.

Starred Against Georgia.

Keesling got his chance to show what he had in the game with Georgia. With Yale licked to a frazzle in the first half, Coach Root sent the Frisco southpaw in to start the third period and things began to happen. With Keesling carrying the ball three out of four times Yale marched more than 50 yards before being halted. Georgia couldn't stop Keesling's off-tackle drives, and had the Yale quarter back not switched from Keesling to passes on the 14-yard line, the Blue might well have gained a tie.

Keesling, strong and fast, can run, kick and pass. His kicking is particularly effective, for he not only gets distance, but what is more important, direction.

Decided on Litman.

The Lehigh game afforded Litman his big opportunity. A bit weary of his ponderous senior back field, Coach Eddie Casey cast about for a back who could go places in a hurry. He decided on Litman. It was a very profitable gamble, for the Massachusetts unknown literally tore the Lehigh line to shreds. Casey started his find against Army, expecting him, as he admitted later, to be stopped cold. But he wasn't. He was the only Crimson back who could gain against the Soldiers' formidable forward wall, and he ran with a ferocity strange to Harvard ball-carriers this season.

C. U. Is Rated Even Choice Tonight

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S football team writes finis to the 1933 campaign tonight at Griffith Stadium, where it meets South Dakota State's hardy troupe of performers. The kick-off will be at 8 o'clock.

Though the Cardinals boast a winning percentage for the year's work, it has been a disappointing season. They lost the two major games, against Holy Cross and Detroit, and suffered themselves to be beaten by Manhattan in an upset, while defeating the remaining opponents handily.

Tonight they encounter an eleven that is in an upsetting mood and C. U. will have to display its best football of the season to garner the laurels. South Dakota is rated on even terms with its host, and there are enough reasons to fill a book why both should win.

Swan Song for Thirteen.

Thirteen members of C. U.'s squad will make their farewell appearance in the red and black livery. They will play superhuman football in an effort to conclude their careers in a blaze of glory. The most prominent of the group are Phil Gross and Tom Nally, the tackles; Capt. Johnny Jankowski, half back; Jim Lyons, guard; Eddie White, center, and the McVean brothers, Charley and Bob.

In Coach "Dutch" Bergman's opinion, C. U. has not shown its true form this season. The team has played good football at times, but never has managed to reach its peak. It was this infinitesimal difference in form that was responsible for the blotches on its record.

As against Detroit, the Cards will resort to wide open football with an assortment of laterals and forward passes augmenting the running game. Both teams want a dry field. Dakota more than C. U. needs firm footing to make its attack function smoothly. C. U. looked all right in the mud last week; in fact, even outplayed the Jaspers, but a dry field will not hurt its chances any.

One Loss for Dakotans.

South Dakota, which is scheduled to arrive this morning, has a record of six victories and one defeat for the season. Minnesota is the only team to down the Westerners, but the Gophers didn't gain their margin of victory until all but seven minutes of play had expired.

The announcement that Coach "Cy" Kasper will quit his position at the end of the season has only served to put his team on edge for the fray. Kasper is one of the most popular coaches west of the Mississippi and capable of exhorting his men to almost unbelievable deeds.

A back field of jackrabbits is the best description for Dakota's ball carriers. Kramer, a 200-pound quarter back, is the slowest of the quartet, and he is no slouch afoot despite his bulk. The team operates from wingback formations and is plentifully supplied with tricks to spring on the Brooklanders.

Trojans, on Way East, Stage Drill in Kansas

Hutchinson, Kans., Nov. 23 (AP). En route to South Bend for a clash with Notre Dame Saturday, the University of Southern California Trojans stopped in Hutchinson for a two-hour workout this afternoon. Coach Howard Jones lined up the varsity in scrimmage against a reserve team using Notre Dame plays.

Irvine Warburton, little star quarter back, will be withheld from play against the Ramblers, Jones announced, until Quarter Back Homer Griffith has run off a few formations.

The Trojans will stop in Chicago for another work-out Friday.

Excitement in the Bronx

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (Spl.).—In the warm, fetid air of the Bronx Coliseum, the big exhibition hall that they lugged up from the sesquicentennial celebration in Philadelphia many years ago and planted in upper New York, some strong, sweaty fight drama took place the other evening. Blood was spilled, spectators raised their voices in anger and soon the individual voices melted into the mob note, the edges faintly laced with terror. The bluecoats swarmed around the platform and in the ring, Tommy Loughran leaped straight up and down like a man on the end of a gibbet.

By that time, his face looked more than ever like a death's head and he held out palms wrapped in red leather mittens with a curious supplicating gesture toward a gray-haired, red-faced man who was waving his arms and trying to shout above the uproar. In the far corner of the roped inclosure sat an enormous fellow with matted black fur on his chest and the puzzled, ingenuous face of a Princeton freshman who has been asked a classroom question that he can not answer. Next to this big chap stood a smaller one with a naked head who gibbered into his ear. The flash bulbs of the ringside photographers flared like lightning through a storm scene.

Loughran Wounded by Giant.

All of this scene and others that followed were attendant upon an impasse reached in the sixth round of a scheduled ten-round bout between Tom Loughran, the Philadelphia heavyweight, and Ray Impellittiere, the newest of the gargantuan crop, who expect to challenge the reign of old King Snaggle-tooth Carnera. Impellittiere, who weighs 255 pounds and stands 6 foot 7, hit Loughran a right upper cut and split open the skin on the left side of his mouth, just below the lip. The blood ran down Tom's face and chest in forked rivulets and Referee Pete Hartley stepped between the two men after a few seconds and awarded the fight to Impellittiere on a technical knockout after 2 minutes and 10 seconds of the sixth round.

Here it was that Loughran began his protest, pushing Hartley out of the way, and flying at the giant, throwing his arms high in an attempt to hit his head. Again Hartley stepped between them and Loughran punched at his neck and shoulders until he was out of the way, and then again attacked Impel, who stood looking more than ever like a puzzled student.

The crowd was screaming by this time and extraneous matter and articles began to drop into the ring from the balconies. Impel sat down. The managers crawled into the ring. Loughran bowed over double with grief and then by some instinct found the side of the ring where the boxing commission was located and spread his hands apart wide in appeal and jumped up and down to show how fresh and strong he was.

The Fight Must Go On.

Then Gen. Phelan began to shout, but above the noise of the gathering riot the referee could not hear what he was saying. Loughran was again trying to get at his opponent. There were policemen about the ring and all order or reason or rhythm had fled. At that point Hartley discovered that the commission wished the bout to continue and waved to Impel to arise and return to the wars. Ray smiled his sweet schoolboy smile, but the smaller man, Harry Lenny, his manager, held him to his seat. After all, the fight had been given him once. It is not the nature of a manager to fight two fights for one fee.

This was the danger point. The crowd needed something to fire it. The sight of the big man passive in his corner, the dark-visaged jowled manager holding him, and the little pink Loughran with the bleeding face jigging up and down before him, bidding him to battle was it. But, miraculously, an inspired gendarme swept Lenny from the platform. The lumbering giant answered Hartley's gesture to resume action, arose and stepped forward, a few passes were exchanged and the bell rang, ending the round.

Clients See Loughran Win.

Thereafter the cut was stanched and did not bleed again and Loughran neatly outpointed El Impel to the joy and satisfaction of the majority of the clients to whom the spectacle of a little man befuddling a big man is pleasing. The fact remains, however, that Impellittiere won the prize fight in the sixth round by a technical knockout and is now, if that is any satisfaction to him, champion of Tommy Loughran by virtue of one right upper cut and a referee's blunder.

It was evident by the way the cut was stanched that Hartley never should have stopped it, but the fact is that he did, and anything that happened from the time he waved the big man to his corner and declared him the winner was another prize fight, no matter who did it or what was done. It is probably the first fight on record where a man who had just knocked out another in six rounds lost a three-round decision to him in an immediate return bout. The customers saw two fights for the price of one.

Baer Quits Movies To Go After Title

Fresno, Nov. 23 (AP).—As much as Max Baer loves the life of a motion picture actor, the challenger for the world's heavyweight boxing championship said here today he is going to turn a deaf ear to Hollywood temporarily.

"I am ready to go into action right away," said Baer. "Jack Dempsey is angling for a fight for me February 22 in Los Angeles or San Francisco, probably with Steve Hamas. That will be a warm-up scrap for my proposed title fight with Primo Carnera next year.

Max said he will forget the movie stuff "until I win the title." He said he has just rejected a two-year movie contract because "I love to fight, and after I whip Carnera I will go back to Hollywood."

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 23 (AP). Coach Harry Kipke today was called to Lansing by the illness of a brother, and for the the first time in years, Fielding H. Yost took active charge of the practice session. Thirty players will entrain for Evanston tomorrow morning.

The Wolverines will present their full strength with Savage and Tessmer back in fighting trim after weeks on the bench as the result of injuries.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

PICTURES from the West Virginia woods show Bucky Harris in hunting uniform with a string of quail . . . but Bucky is after a couple of other birds . . . Lefty Grove and Rube Walberg by name . . . it will be announced any day now . . . Navy is keeping a stiff upper lip in spite of injuries to Chung-Hoon and Miller, a couple of players Coach Rip Miller can't very well spare for the Army game . . . Georgetown University officials blundered in issuing a long statement today on last week's Carnegie Tech scrimmage . . . when they should have been beating the publicity tom toms in the name of the West Virginia game here tomorrow . . . Phil Gross, C. U. tackle, is the only Washington collegian with a chance of making good in pro football ranks . . . Mrs. John Bosley's Chase Me, the new sensation of the race tracks, was a winner in the show ring before making his debut on the tracks at the age of 4 . . . the horse is Mrs. Bosley's particular pet and her instructions to Jockey Belizzi specifically forbid him to whip Chase Me . . . "If necessary, tap him lightly," she tells the rider . . . Washington still lacks a promoter with courage enough to build a hockey rink . . . Nick Altrock, a great left-hand pitcher in his day, is a right-hand golfer . . . there are no southpaw golfers among the top-ranking 100 because golf courses are laid out with an eye to penalizing hooks . . . which correspond to a southpaw's slice . . . and the slice is far more frequent than the hook.

Coach Jack Hagerty will sign a new contract at Georgetown within a week . . . but Coach Jim Pixlee at G. W. has the status of a faculty member and can not be fired without cause . . . Saturday's best bet: Navy to win the pregame maneuvers at Franklin Field . . . the press box habitues' private show at Georgetown games is Assistant Coach Mush Dubfosky's long-distance telephone instructions to the coaches on the G. U. bench . . . the phone burst an eardrum under the weight of Dubofsky's shouting last week . . . Notre Dame and Southern California meet tomorrow in the Western edition of the Battle of Fallen Idols . . . all rights in the East are reserved for Harvard-Yale.

Officials at G. U.-Carnegie Game Refute Harpster's Charge Contest Was Rough

Bus Company Denies Egg Incident

Referee Avers Players Appeared to Be on Friendly Terms.

Umpire Is Surprised at Claim; Says Fracas Was Quiet One.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY officials last night refuted charges brought by Howard Harpster, Carnegie Tech coach, who asserted that his players were the victims of unnecessary roughness in the game between the two schools last Saturday. Georgetown's rebuttal came in the form of a voluminous quantity of affidavits, signed by the game's officials.

"As referee of the game I wish to state that it can not possibly be classed as an unnecessarily rough game. I can not recall a single complaint during the game, by any Carnegie man, of roughness on the part of Georgetown players. One Georgetown player complained on three consecutive plays of illegal use of knees on the part of a Carnegie man, but I failed to detect the slightest unnecessarily rough use of the knees or unsportsmanlike conduct on the part of the Carnegie men.

Fierce and Aggressive.

"I must say that the line play was fierce and aggressive, and I am not surprised that an injury or two resulted therefrom. The nature of the game is rough, but illegitimate roughness was not a part of this game.

"As a matter of fact, there appeared to be an excellent feeling between the opposing players during most of the game, and there were numerous instances of opposing players helping their opponents to their feet after plays."

"I was not only greatly surprised when I learned that Carnegie Tech had accused Georgetown of rough tactics in the game, and after the game. It is hard for me to believe there is not some mistake. It was one of the quietest games I have worked in this fall. I have been in any number of contests where the tackling was harder, the charging harder, the feeling more intense, and the play more spirited."

Nothing Out of the Way.

Jack Hagerty, head coach at Georgetown, said: "Concerning last week's game between Georgetown and Carnegie Tech, I saw nothing out of the way in regard to unnecessary roughness, and, if there had been such tactics used, the officials would have surely taken the necessary measures to prevent it. I asked our cheer leaders to have the students refrain from cheering while signals were being called. If they refused to comply with my request there was nothing further I could do."

A statement from the bus company which transported the Carnegie team to and from the ball park and its hotel repudiated Harpster's statement that the bus had been bombarded with eggs on the return trip.

Phil Gross Praised By Coach Bergman

Quiet and good natured, the big fellow has a keen sense of humor, never seems to mind a joke at his expense, and gets a big kick out of his teammates' pranks. He thinks the most humorous incident that has occurred to him while at Catholic U. happened at Raleigh, N. C., last year, when the team played North Carolina State.

"Pardon me, but are you with the Catholic University football team," he asked. Phil nodded his assent.

"Well, I certainly am glad to meet a good Irish-Catholic," confided the stranger, "there are so few of them down here."

Gross will receive his bachelor of science degree in June. He has no plans for the future, but will not play pro football—unless the stipulated stipend is satisfactory. He turned thumbs down on the suggestion that he hang out the shingle in wrestling, and probably will end up selling insurance with his brother out in Minnesota.

Moralist Disqualified Day After Bowie Victory

W. H. Gallagher's Moralist was disqualified of the purse he won here Wednesday, for carrying incorrect weight. Four pounds more allowance than he was entitled to deprived him of the victory. He carried 108 pounds. This action made the placing vote, Octaroro, Lone Hand and Black Target as named. The betting is not affected by the ruling because Moralist carried the weight announced on the program.

High School Highlights

JACK COLLINS, of Eastern, is hereby nominated as the ace toastmaster in local scholastic athletic circles. Last night in the school cafeteria the Eastern football team was banqueted and the letters awarded. After partaking of a fine turkey dinner and winding up with pumpkin pie, all present made themselves as comfortable as possible in anticipation of the usual long-winded orations. Imagine everyone's surprise when Jack simply remarked that Coach Guyan will now present the awards, "after which we will adjourn until the curtain goes up for the fall show."

The following Eastern gridders received letter awards after competing in the required number of quarters: Joe Mills, John Carvalas, Robert Campbell, Morris Wolfe, Jerome Thompson, Joe Keegin, Joe Richardson, Glenn Shaw, Harry Lewis, Jack Kiatta, Tom Davis, Richard Absher and Cecil Baxter. The last named is the varsity manager.

Three former Gonzaga stars are now members of local college freshmen teams. Dick Hall is the regular quarter back on the Georgetown frosh eleven, while Ed Quigley and Jack Carr, tackle and end, respectively, are regulars on the University of Maryland Terpette team.

Harley Sanborn, athletic director of Emerson Institute, desires to have practice scrimmage with some local independent basket ball clubs prior to the opening of his schedule with Roosevelt next week. He also states that there are plenty of open dates for games either home or abroad early in January and February. Interested parties may reach him by calling Emerson 7124.

Dave Harris Hunter.

Tech - Swavely Top 5-Game List Today

Seven District Elevens to End Season; Others on Thanksgiving.

SCHOLASTIC football bows out of the local picture today. Five schoolboy attractions are slated for this afternoon, with five of the seven District clubs completing their slates. The other two elevens will fold up on Turkey Day in New York State. These are Central and Georgetown Prep.

McKinley Tech will dedicate its stadium and close its season with Swavely Prep of Manassas in the feature game of today.

Central will tune up its fine grid machine against Washington-Lee High School. The game today is set for the Central Stadium.

Western and Gonzaga.

Western will be host to Gonzaga Prep on the Western gridiron this afternoon. Gonzaga has played three of the local public high elevens and has succeeded in winning only from Roosevelt. Western has been coming along nicely the last few weeks, and should it perform in the same style as in its past couple of games, should win.

Friends and Georgetown Prep play on the Garrett Park field. The licking suffered at the hands of Central High Tuesday has whetted the appetites of the Hoyette eleven and it will be out to capture the game at all costs, as this is its last game at home. On Thanksgiving Day the Garrett Parkers close their season against Iona Prep at New Rochelle, N. Y.

St. Alban's Favorite.

St. Alban's will bring its season to a close by stacking up against St. James, of Hagerstown, on the Cathedral Grounds. The fortunes of the game, the dope and the comparative scores figure the local Saints as the ultimate victor.

Woodward Prep journeys to Charlotte Hall, Baltimore, fors it short season's farewell. The game measures as a toss-up.

The Postilion Football Contest

The Post herewith presents the fifth of its weekly football contests in conjunction with The Postilion, this newspaper's radio program broadcast over Station WMAL by Harris B. Hull.

The coupon below is for your convenience, although it is not necessary to use The Post chart. In the left-hand column, headed "Your Selection," fans are invited to submit their scores. On Saturday night The Postilion announcer will broacast the results in the same order. The "Result" column provides you with a convenient form on which to record the final scores as they are broadcast.

This week the contest is based on 32 of next Saturday's outstanding games, selected from the schedule by Shirley L. Povich, Sports Editor of The Post, as the feature games of the week. Each fan is invited to test his own powers as a prophet or football expert by predicting the result.

To the fan selecting the greatest number of winning teams, The Post will award free four choice seats to the George Washington-Kansas game at Griffith Stadium one week from Friday night.

To the fan placing second in the contest three choice seats for the game will be given. To the fans placing third, fourth, fifth and sixth will go two choice seats each.

Each fan is limited to one entry. Priority of receipt will govern in case of ties.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

HOKIE SMITH and his mighty little band of King Pinners are out in front of the District League today by virtue of a two-game win last night over Northeast Temple while Occidental Restaurant slid into a tie for second place with Beacon Neon Signs by dropping the odd decision to its opponents.

Bill Miller lead a spirited attack out on the Temple drives for King Pin with 150 and 375 set, while it was the heavy pinspilling of Maxie Rosenberg with a 397 set that gave the Beacons the edge over the erstwhile leaders.

Once again Lucky Strike came through with the big counts of the night's play, only to drop two games to Arcadia. Ed Blankeney's 151 game and 425 set were the hefty individual totals that helped soar the team counts to a game of 675 and 1,875 set. Georgetown, with Russell Spillman hitting for 376, grabbed two tilts from Convention Hall, while Columbia trounced Hyattsville twice, winning the opening encounter on a roll-off. Preston Ellis' 367 and Johnny Shaeffer's 157 were the winner's top shooters.

Evelyn Ream, hailed as the newest sensation in National duckpin circles and a leading candidate for the No. 1 ranking this season, is scheduled to appear at the Patterson alleys in Baltimore Sunday night. She will be paired with Hokie Smith to roll a mixed doubles match against Anna Miller and Walter Miller, Baltimore stars.

Mrs. Ream is credited with being the only girl duckpinnist in the country who has rolled two 400 sets in league competition this season, and a 396 set pounded out this week in the District Ladies League, which she leads with a 112 average.

In another mixed doubles match Merceda Isemann and Tony Santini will compete against Mabel Sohn and Frank Taylor, of the Monumental City.

Capt. Irene Mischou (Veterans Administration), pounding out a 136 game, aided her team in eapturing the honors in the Ladies Federal League on the Arcadia drives last night with a 538 game and 1,470 set. Catherine Federline, Treasury star, took a 331 for high individual set.

Schwier (G. P. O.) pulled an unusual stunt in the Daylight League at Convention Hall, rolling a 156 and 375, to tie the individual game and set mark rolled by Skinny Morris (Washington Herald), last week. G. P. O. took high team game with 565 and Washington Post, No. 1 took team set laurels with a total pinfall of 1,582.

Engineering, with Bill Krauss showing the way with a 363 set, banged out a 557 game and 1,604 set, to carry away the team honors in the Kilowatt League at the Convention Hall alleys. Kidwell (Meter) shared individual glory with a 136 game, which was high for the night.

C. C. C. gained a one-game lead in the War Department League at Arcadia last night by sweeping all three games of its match with the Barbettes. The Engineers went into second place, taking the odd game from Finance, No. 2. Schuyler (Statistics), was the individual star, mauling the maples for a high game of 160 and a 376 set. Statistics' 600 game and 1,603 set were the best team efforts.

Herbie Kaschub again takes his Patent Office Team to Hanover, Pa., to compete against the Hanover Bowling Center five at the Moose alleys, tomorrow night. The match will be the first block of team and doubles games, the second block to be rolled in Washington later in the season. The members of the team making the trip are Al Woods, Patrick, Bill Miller, Ernie Norwig and Herbie Kaschub.

The bowling team of the U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post, No. 2, will meet at the Recreation alleys, tonight at 8 o'clock.

National Capital Teams In 4 Games Sunday

Four games are scheduled in the National Capital Football League Sunday. Seaman Gunners' tussle with the Marions, to be played on the Seaman Gunners' field, features the card. A preliminary game between Northeast Boys Club and Brookland Coal Co., 135-pound title contenders, will be played at 12:30 o'clock.

Palace Preps will tackle the Centennials at 1 o'clock on the Monument Grounds, while Maryland A. C. and Mercury will tangle at Seat Pleasant at 2:30 o'clock.

Turkey Golf Scheduled At Anacostia Course

Anacostia Golf Club members will participate in a turkey golf tournament Saturday and Sunday. Thirty-six holes medal play handicap are scheduled.

Mel Shorey Shoots Par.

Skeet Layout Is Opened at Kenwood

Mrs. Chamberlain, Wife of Head of New Club, Fires First Shot.

THE new skeet field at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club was opened yesterday, with Mrs. Frank Chamberlain, wife of Maj. Chamberlain, firing the first shot. A clean hit, "a dead bird," was announced by the scorer, Don Chamberlain, her brother-in-law.

Maj. Chamberlain is president of the new club and was one of those instrumental in its organization. He is an old hand at skeets. Monty Ferry, of Kenwood, Md., is vice president, and Archie Haycock, well-known local sportsman, is secretary-treasurer.

According to Maj. Chamberlain, the idea of a skeet club at Kenwood was in line with the example set by golf and country clubs all over the country. Skeet shooting is growing in National popularity and already has a large following here. The Kenwood club is the fourth to be organized locally.

Young Williams Present.

Yesterday rain in the early afternoon prevented the program getting under way according to schedule. However, a representative gathering turned out. Among them was young Larry Williams, jr., whose father is treasurer of the Montgomery Skeet Club, the first organization of skeet shooters in Washington.

Young Larry, although only 11 years old, is nationally known for his marksmanship. He is an authority on skeet, and before giving his approval yesterday to the new layout made a thorough inspection of trap houses and field.

Canzoneri 6-5 Choice Over Chocolate

Nontitle Bout Tonight at New York Finds Champion Underdog.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (U.P.). — Tony Canzoneri is a 6-to-5 favorite to halt Kid Chocolate's campaign for the lightweight title when they meet in a 10-round bout tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden.

Chocolate, who is recognized as world featherweight champion in New York and affiliated States, has grown so large that it weakens him to pare down to the 126-pound feather limit. His title will not be at stake.

The Cuban flash made an excellent showing recently against Joe Ghnouly, St. Louis lightweight, and if he can beat Canzoneri, the former 135-pound king, he will be right in line for a shot at Barney Ross' lightweight crown.

If Canzoneri beats Chocolate, Tony will try for a third bout with Ross, who won the title from him last summer in Chicago and whipped him again in New York.

23 Community Teams Attend Court Meeting

Representatives of 23 teams, including many newly organized, attended the first meeting of the Community Center Basket Ball League held at Central High School last night. Officials report this a record turnout for an initial meeting of the league and are confident that at least ten more teams will join the organization before the season opens.

One of the main subjects under discussion last night was a proposal to divide the league into two sections, comprised of major and minor teams. The major teams would be those of acknowledged strength and minor teams the balance. Winfree Johnson, director of the league, who presided over the meeting, announced that another meeting would be called within the next week to work out definite plans.

15 Basket Ball Contests for American

Eagles List 7 Games With Conference Foes; Open Season Dec. 18.

FIFTEEN games, seven of them with Chesapeake Conference foes, were announced for American University's basket ball team yesterday by Coach Walter H. Young. Eight of the games will be played at home, including the curtain raiser with Maryland State Normal, scheduled December 18. Virginia Medical College will visit Washington March 2 for the final game of the year.

American compiled an enviable record on the hardwood last season, winning 13 of its 15 games, amassing a total of 494 points in the campaign. Navy and Randolph-Macon were the only teams to down the Eagles, and Randolph-Macon was beaten in a return engagement.

A squad of 16 men is training for the inaugural, including Crampton and Sampson, veterans of the 1932 machine. Lanky Oscar Sells, ace of last season's quintet, is among the missing this year, but Coach Young has a wealth of promising material and is optimistic over his prospects. The schedule follows:

December 18, Maryland State Normal, at home.

January 4, Hampden-Sydney, Farmville, Va.; 5, Elon, at Elon, N. C.; 6, Guilford, at Guilford, N. C.; 9, Hampden-Sydney, at home; 11, Randolph-Macon, Ashland, Va.; 12, Virginia Medical, Richmond, Va.; 29, Lynchburg, at home.

March 2, Virginia Medical, at home.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—Episcopal High School will close its football season Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock against Woodberry Forest. This is the banner game of the year for the Cherry and Black, and with today's news that Billy Gooch, captain and star half back, is in shape to play, the prospects of winning are very bright.

Milligan, Teachers Renew Grid Rivalry

Bristol, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—For the first time in 11 years, the football teams of Milligan College and Teachers College, of Johnson City, Tenn., stand ready to face each other on the gridiron, with the State institution favored.

Yale's Non-Scouting Pact With Tigers Ends This Year

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 23 (AP).—The Yale Athletic Association announced tonight that its agreement with Princeton that they should not scout each other's football teams will end at the close of the current season.

Tad Jones, who was head coach at Yale when the agreement was drawn up some ten years ago, said he was "sorry to see the agreement go by the boards."

"I think scouting has always been carried entirely too far," he said. "I think it's perfectly all right, if opponents want to scout each other, to do so. There's nothing unethical about it.

"But I don't believe they improve their own play by scouting their opponents. I don't think the good they get warrants the amount of money spent.

"A nonscouting agreement develops initiative on the field, it puts the players on their toes against a team they know nothing about—and a better game of football results."

Maryland Ends Drills Today For W. & L.

Game Tomorrow Will Be Rubber in Series of 9 Between Foes.

DRESS REHEARSAL is scheduled this afternoon at College Park, where Maryland is putting the finishing touches to its preparations for tomorrow's homecoming game with Washington and Lee. Every phase of the attack and defense will be thoroughly tested for a weakness which might mar the big day.

The game is the rubber in a series of nine between the schools. The Generals won the first four and Maryland took the last four. Washington and Lee is favored to begin a new streak tomorrow, but Maryland can not be regarded too lightly, for the Terps are in a fighting mood.

Good on Defense.

Defensively, the Virginians appear to have an excellent machine. Only 45 points have been scored on them in nine games of a schedule that included Kentucky, Princeton, West Virginia, William and Mary and Yale. Princeton's undefeated sophomores were extended to the limit in shoving their lone touchdown across the line, and Yale and Centre College are the only teams to score two touchdowns against the Generals.

Maryland's defense has been nothing to boast about, but the Terps do have a scoring punch, although it was missing in several important games. Maryland's opponents have amassed 115 points on it this year. On the other hand, the Old Liners have rolled up 74 to their own credit. W. and L. managed to gather 41 points in its nine games.

Upper Hand for Terps.

So tomorrow it would seem that it will be a defense against an attack. In the last four games with the Generals it has been Maryland that has had the defense. W. and L. scored two touchdowns in the last four games, one in 1931 and the other last season, and one of them came on an intercepted pass. Maryland need be only that good tomorrow to cop the verdict.

Maryland's line-up for the fray definitely is settled with the exception of left half, where George Sachs and Joe Crecca are still battling for the call. If Crecca wins the assignment, it will be the first time this year that no sophs have started in the back field.

Dunaj W. & L. Hope In Race Tomorrow

Coach Takes Seven Men to Cross-Country Meet.

Lexington, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.). Capt. Richard Dunaj, ace of college harriers in the State of Virginia, is Washington and Lee's hope for honors in the Southern Conference cross-country meet at Chapel Hill, N. C., Saturday.

With little or no chance of winning the team championship, Coach Forest Fletcher nevertheless is taking a team of seven men with him to run on the North Carolina course. He believes that Dunaj, star distance runner and winner of the State cross-country meet at V. M. I., has as good a chance to come in first as any one.

At least three men who defeated Dunaj in the conference run over a 5-mile course last year will compete, but one of these, Burrows, of V. M. I., Dunaj defeated in the State 3-mile run, and the other two, Bird and Byrd, both of Duke, finished behind him in dual and conference meets on the track last spring. On the basis of this competition over shorter distances, Dunaj himself, as well as Coach Fletcher, feels that he stands a great chance of winning this year on the 3-mile route, to which Southern Conference cross-country courses have been reduced.

Fredericksburg High Faces Alexandrians

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—When Fredericksburg High plays host to Alexandria High School tomorrow afternoon the Class B football championship for northern Virginia will be the bone of contention.

Playing its final game of the season, Fredericksburg carries to the gridiron a record of having been defeated only once but tied three times. The Yellow Jackets have won from every high school in the Northern Virginia Class B loop except Alexandria—Culpeper, Warrenton and Washington-Lee having fallen before the local eleven.

Cohort Miss Comes Back After Recent Disqualification to Win Bowie Feature

Moran Filly Is Victor by a Length

Returns $3.80 Mutuel; Chance Flight Second, Time Clock 3d.

IF Washington had a mayor, Bob Boyle and Tom Lynch, who make a good job of managing the Bowie race track, would have a race in his honor. Baltimore has a mayor, and yesterday's feature race was the Mayor Jackson Trophy. The good mayor is allowed to visit the judges' stand on this occasion to kabitz the judges. But officially, the mayor's participation in the contest came "after the ball was over."

He presented the trophy to J. J. Moran, the winning owner, shook hands with H. Fitzsimmons, the winning trainer, and nodded to Jimmie Hunter, the winning rider.

It was a big day for the mayor who figured in everything but the running of the race and the winner's rubdown.

However, while the human beings were congratulating each other, a mighty game little filly was being led back to the vicinity of the barn, where she was to be walked around a circle to cool out from the strenuous contest.

Cohort Miss Is Name.

Cohort Miss, that's the appropriate name they chose for this daughter of Cohort and Misleading. Of course she would run as well under any other name, for she has a heart as big as a watermelon. She needed no persuading in her swift stretch run. Jockey Hunter just guided and bounced along while the filly ate up the ground, to finish almost a length ahead of Chance Flight, and almost three lengths in front of Time Clock.

The first part of the mile-and-70-yard race, we will skip because the contest started only when Cohort Miss decided to run. She was seventh at the far turn when Hunter gave her the wraps he had been holding. Up she went with a rush. One by one she accounted for the field. In front at the sixteenth pole, she kept digging her hoofs into the track until Hunter eased her up.

Backers Collect $3.80.

Cohort Miss was disqualified earlier in the week after she had beaten such as Monel. But everything was on the up and up yesterday, for the official board was soon turned and the long lines formed to collect that $3.80 mutuel.

Erebus broke from his outside post position and, under a hustling ride by young Earl Porter, led from flag fall to finish to take the first race from a limit field of 2-year-olds over the 6-furlong course. Chrysmute came up in the closing strides to take the place from Peedeeque. The winner was one of the several well-played horses and supplied an $11.80 mutuel.

West Main finally won a race for the Aske-Hogan owner and trainer combination by lasting to defeat a field of fair sprinters. The margin was a nose over Westy Junior, which in turn gained the place money by half a length from Irene's Bob. The last-named was the early leader, but Westy Junior rushed her off her feet. West Main, always close to the front pair, headed Westy Junior in the stretch to win. West Main was coupled with Royal Guard and paid a $30 mutuel.

Captain Argo Easy Winner.

The day's third sprint was a romp for Captain Argo. The Kershaw Stable gelding, which burned much of the good people's money the last time out, yesterday shook off the opposition. Legionary tried to run with him on the back stretch, but folded. Then Pova moved up but faded. Robertson made a strong bid in the last sixteenth with Sainted; but Captain Argo matched the speed. So they finished, Captain Argo, Sainted and Pova. The winner was second choice, at a $6 mutuel.

Guy M. Rice, who has neither arms nor legs, follows his calling as a farmer with amazing ability. He has overcome the physical handicap which would render the ordinary man useless and helpless. Mr. Rice operates a farm and stock ranch, and does almost everything the unhandicapped farmer does. Using his artificial legs he drives his automobile and truck, operates any kind of riding farm implement—such as the gang plow, harvester, cultivator, &c. He can even harness a team of horses. Needless to say, Mr. Rice also shaves and dresses himself.

Strange as it seems, there is an area of 194,000 square miles now open to homestead in the United States—more land than all Germany. All this land has been surveyed and is open, but an even greater area of 395,529,612 acres, or three times as much, which has not been surveyed and which is not at present open, brings the public lands total in the United States to more than half a billion acres.

* * * *

Long before modern man conceived and built the popular co-operative apartment house of today—the plan by which the various tenants own their part of the building in which all reside—ancient man did the same in America.

In Pueblo Bonito, in what is today part of New Mexico, archeologists have found that such cooperative buildings were erected by prehistoric people. The Bonitians dwelled together in a single great apartment house which covered about 3 acres of ground space, stood four stories high and contained at least 800 rooms.

Charles Town Folk Stirring Selves as Race Meet Nears

(By Staff Correspondent.)

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Nov. 23.—This quiet little village that will be awakened by the staccato click-click of the mutuel machines of the new race track opening here December 2 has already begun to emerge from its quietude in anticipation. Charles Town is preparing to extend open arms to an unprecedented hustle and bustle, not to mention prosperity, that is expected to amble around the corner with the opening of the track.

Leading business men report that the salvaging of the old fair grounds course, which was heavily mortgaged, by the corporation which is building the modern track, was in the nature of a boom in itself. Many skilled and unskilled laborers who might otherwise have idled are earning hard, round dollars building the new equine merry-go-round.

Turn to Dope Sheets.

Down at the village pool hall, the local sharpshooters have practically racked up their cues to devote their idle moments, or hours, or days, to doping out ways and means of outguessing the most uncertain game in the world. Somewhere in this crowd there may be an embryonic Pittsburgh Phil who will show the horde of "city slickers," that is bound to descend upon a track like this, a thing or two.

The two local hotels expect to hang out SRO signs once the races get under way and arrangements have been made to quarter overflow boarders or guests, as they are termed below the Mason-Dixon line, in private homes. Many of the town's spare rooms have been reserved this far in advance and a few parlors in which no human foot has stepped since Aunt Minnie or Uncle Gameliel from New York was entertained 20 years ago, have been opened to "guests."

The nattily uniformed Charles Town police force will be reinforced during the meet by a detachment of State troopers and possibly minions from adjoining towns. They don't ordinarily make many arrests here, except when some of the boys get one whiff too many of apple jack and start raising old ned on the street. Then the law descends in all its majesty and sweeps them into an up-to-date jail which seems to have anticipated the race track by being built several sizes too large for ordinary usage.

Changes Foreseen.

This horse racing business is not exactly a new thing to the locality, although it has never before been brought right to the collective Charles Town doorstep. Within a radius of 30 miles are two smaller tracks, Hagerstown and Frederick and Middleburg, Va., a horse-raising center. The Whitney Farms are at Upperville, just 20 miles away.

It is a 20-to-1 shot that when racing is brought right into its own backyard, this peaceful, serene little town named after the brother of George Washington, in which everyone seems to know everyone else—will spring into an electric tenseness. Ordinarily workaday and confiding farmers and business men may adopt the side of the mouth whispering common to the race track.

Not since John Brown was hung here have there been such goings on, but everyone seems to like it. Only one person was found who did not enthuse over the entrancing vista held out by the rejuvenation. Asked what he thought of the new track, the official village half-wit shifted his eatin' tobacco, shuffled his feet and guffawed a most disconcerting answer. "Haw, haw," he haw-hawed, "what difference does it make to me—I ain't crazy enough to play them nags."

Howard Cancels Game With Miner Teachers

The Bisons of Howard University yesterday canceled their scheduled game with Miner Teachers College set for tomorrow, having taken on an additional game with Tallahassee, for which they will depart from Atlantic City, N. J., directly after the annual classic with the Lincoln Lions in the city auditorium.

The Bisons have defeated Virginia State and North Carolina this year, and have lost to St. Paul, Hampton, Morgan and West Virginia Institute. The Miner Teachers are undefeated, but have not met adversaries in the same conference as Howard.

Hint of Newark Job for Ruth Is Denied

Babe Mum, But Ruppert Spokesman Says Idea Too Far-Fetched.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP).—The suggestion that Babe Ruth next year may manage the Newark Bears, International League farm of the New York Yankees, possibly as a stepping stone to eventual leadership of the Yankees, met with authoritative denial today. Nevertheless, it revived speculation on the famous slugger's baseball future.

Although the Babe himself, off hunting pheasants on the Goelet estate near Middletown, N. Y., was noncommittal, George Weiss turned thumbs down on the idea as official spokesman for Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankee Baseball System.

"I only wish it was true from a Newark standpoint, but it's too far-fetched to consider and there is nothing to it," Weiss said when reached at French Lick, Ind., where he and Col. Ruppert are visiting.

Too Many Obstacles.

"In the first place, there are too many obstacles," explained Weiss. "The Babe would have to be waived out of both the big leagues, and that is hardly conceivable. Ruth has not even been approached on the matter."

The Newark News, which first published the story, meanwhile declared on reliable authority that the Babe had the refusal of the position. While not predicting the slugger would accept, the News insisted the proposal already had been placed before him and added: "Until he turns it down nothing will be done about offering a contract to any of the others who have been given consideration, chief of whom is Bill Meyer, of Binghamton."

Has Manager Ambitions.

Ruth is ambitious to wind up his career as a baseball manager, but he has always insisted he would never go back to the minors, in any capacity.

The Babe himself has been extremely reluctant to go into much detail about his future, except to deny that he planned to retire as a player. On his return from Honolulu recently he reiterated his intention to keep in shape hunting and playing golf, go South with the Yankees in the spring and then determine whether he could still hold down a regular job. The majority of baseball observers think Ruth's playing days are over except for part-time activity as an outfielder or pinch-hitter.

Loughran Is Signed To Face Schmeling

Bout to Be Staged Jan. 24 in N. Y. Coliseum.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Tommy Loughran will box Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, in the Coliseum January 24, it was announced today. The distance was scheduled for 15 rounds.

Although the German heavyweight is still in Europe, and is not scheduled to sail for the United States until the day after Christmas, the managers of the two heavyweights agreed to terms following Loughran's defeat of Ray Impellittiere in ten rounds at the Coliseum last night.

Tom McArdle, former matchmaker at Madison Square Garden, will promote the show. He also has scheduled a nontitle match between Barney Ross, lightweight champion, and Billy Petrolle for December 6 at the Coliseum. Both bouts will share the profits with the Christmas fund.

At the Post . . .

Dear Mike:

Bowie Race Track, Nov. 23.

I heard a story yesterday, told by a former jockey. A city slicker once gave him $25 for getting him an invitation to a party the jockeys were throwing. The slicker made friends with the riders and it was agreed that next day the boy who was trying to win would wink his eye as the horses came out of the paddock. The slicker got his bank roll ready for the first race and repaired to the gate. As the jockeys passed him each one of them winked. Anything to keep from mentioning my picks of yesterday.

BILL.

First race—Rock X., in two trips to the races, has run two good races and seems the logical choice here. Round Table, after being in over his head, should go well. Unchanging is far down the list, but will be dangerous if scratched into the action.

Second race—Taunton gets in a cheaper field today and will draw Humphries as the rider. Said to be at tops and ran well last out. See no reason for a miss. The Labrot entry of Toytime and Leonie may complete the money picture.

Third race—Some Knight won his last from better than these. Seems best suited of the group. He will have Barcelona Pete, a mighty fit racer in New York, to beat. Lough Port may be the surprise—drops down a little here.

Fourth race — Kanal showed a world of speed last out before bowing to older horses. That might have been the needed tightener. Likes the track, according to the clockers. Blue Foam and Tullihoo for the other places.

Fifth race — Gloritone probably was the best-meant horse to go to the post here the last time, and it is doubtful if a horse during this meeting has had a rougher trip. Crowded going to the first turn, Lowry was almost knocked over the outside fence. At the last turn Gloritone was forced to the outer rail. She finished fastest of the field. My best bet. Carbon and One Chance for the rest. A chance for Golden Princess.

Sixth race—Rock Point appears best of this group. Kindacorn and Politen for the other places.

D. C. Women Booters Will Vie in Tourney

Members of the all-Washington Women's Hockey Team will compete in the Southeastern tournament in Philadelphia, opening today and continuing through Sunday. This afternoon the Washington team will meet the second Philadelphia outfit and tomorrow will play the New Jersey first team.

On Sunday the newly chosen Southeastern tournament team—selected by a committee from the groups competing—will face the all-American touring team, which returned last Tuesday from its successful foreign invasion. This will be an exhibition game climaxing the tournament series.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EREBUS, $11.80, $5.80, $4.00; CHRYSMUTE, $5.00, $3.00; PEEDEEQUE, $3.60.

EREBUS, quickest to get going and showing smart speed, drew clear after the opening furlongs and held sway thereafter. CHRYSMUTE improved her position on the inside and came courageously under strong urging. PEEDEEQUE, kept forwardly placed, made a determined effort entering the home stretch and held on with good courage. LODORUS forced a steady early pace and then continued gamely. She should improve off this test. CANTROUD was gaining slowly nearing the finish. TOYTIME was unable to menace the leaders at any stage. INTERRUPTION tired fast after a half mile.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good (from gate). Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 1:36. Off at 1:40. Winner, A. L. Aste's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—†WEST MAIN (entry), $30.00, $19.60, $5.80; WESTY JUNIOR, $15.80, $6.60; IRENE'S BOB, $3.40.

WEST MAIN, in the thick of contention from the start, took a slight lead when reaching the final furlong pole and, under severe urging, just lasted long enough. WESTY JUNIOR wore IRENE'S BOB down midway of the turn and continued strongly until the finish. IRENE'S BOB, going in his best form, displayed good speed and then held on willingly when the real issue came. MOUNTAIN ELK suffered interference when reaching the home stretch. He closed stoutly when clear. ROYAL GUARD finished full of run. STAR PORTER had a rough trip. HERNANDO stopped. FEUDAL LORD was shuffled back directly after the start.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; the Glen Echo. For 2-year-olds. Start good (from gate). Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:04. Off at 2:05½. Winner, Kershaw Stables' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAPTAIN ARGO, $6.00, $3.40, $2.20; SAINTED, $5.80, $2.80; POVA (entry), $2.20.

CAPTAIN ARGO began quickly, showed good speed while resisting stiff contention from LEGIONARY, responded to strong pressure and outstayed SAINTED. Latter, taken wide until straightened into the home stretch, closed full of run on the inside during the final sixteenth. POVA, prominent throughout, was best of the others. LEGIONARY forced a steady pace and raced strongly for the first five furlongs. BOY VALET was gaining stoutly at the end. FLAG BOY was done early.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; allowances; the Mayor Jackson Trophy. For 2-year-olds. Start good (from gate). Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:32. Winner, J. †Entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COHORT MISS, $3.80, $3.20, $2.40; CHANCE FLIGHT, $6.00, $3.60; TIME CLOCK (entry), $3.20.

COHORT MISS, allowed to settle in her best stride, circled her field willingly when placed to a drive, wore the pacemakers down when straightened into the home stretch and had enough left to withstand CHANCE FLIGHT. Latter, a keen factor throughout, closed in tenacious fashion. TIME CLOCK, strongly restrained for six furlongs, finished with a belated rush. FORTIFICATION took a slight lead approaching the home stretch between calls, but faltered in the closing drive. SLEUTH raced evenly. BROWN JACK stopped after six furlongs. PATCHPOCKET had no excuses.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good (from gate). Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:57. Off at 2:58½. Winner, A. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EVEN UP, $9.80, $4.40, $2.40; MISS CAREFUL, $4.00, $2.60; WISE ADVOCATE, $2.40.

EVEN UP, steadied off the early pace, swung to the outside when moving to the leaders and, finishing strongly, was drawing clear under severe urging. MISS CAREFUL, tiptoed to outrun INTEGRITY and setting a fast pace, came again to regain command, but was made too much use of in the early stages. WISE ADVOCATE, rated off the early pace, made repeated efforts in the last half mile, but was not good enough. LIVE ONE raced well placed and had no excuses. DEEDIE was held safe.

SIXTH RACE—One and three-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good (from gate). Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:30. Winner, B. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLEET FLAG, $9.80, $4.80, $3.60; SOUTHARD, $5.00, $4.00; FORT DEARBORN, $3.20.

FLEET FLAG, kept on the outside of the leaders, gained command when midway of the final turn and, nicely handled thereafter, outstayed SOUTHARD. Latter, favored by improved handling, followed within striking distance of the leaders and came with good energy for the final drive. FORT DEARBORN lost ground after reaching the back stretch, but closed willingly. BUB McFARLAND finished stoutly. LIGHT BREEZE closed a good gap. TUFFY G made up ground steadily. JUST FUN, IMPISH and ATHOL were used up setting the pace.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POLO BAR, $7.60, $4.00, $3.20; FAIRLY WILD, $3.60, $2.80; PENCADER, $5.40.

POLO BAR gained rapidly when reaching the back stretch, finished on the inside of FAIRLY WILD when straightened into the home stretch and was up in the last few strides. FAIRLY WILD moved into a brief lead in the last six furlongs, but could not withstand the winner. PENCADER, prominent the entire trip, weakened after a bold effort at the stretch turn. XANDRA began tiring in the last five sixteenths. FAUX PAS closed gamely. SPANISH raced in spots. HELEN'S ALIBI tired badly.

Micker Gains Rock Creek Finals

Beats Darling, 3 and 2, and Will Oppose Altrock for Title Monday.

JOE MICKER, 21-year-old municipal golfer, who eliminated the medalist, Pat Axtell, and later put out the favorite, John Connelly, added another victim to his list yesterday in the semifinals of the Rock Creek turkey golf tournament by defeating Arthur (Babe) Darling, 3 and 2.

Micker will meet Nick Altrock next Monday in the championship flight finals over the 18-hole route.

After a shaky start, Micker settled down and fought his opponent on even terms for the first nine holes. Over on the stretch Micker began to show uncanny ability in handling his irons, stroked into a 3-up lead and ended the match on the sixteenth green.

Berky Berkheimer entered the finals of the second flight with a 4 and 3 victory over C. Ficco. Berkheimer will meet Earl (Lefty) Jameson in the finals. George Marlowe trimmed A. B. Campbell, 6 and 5, in the third flight, to earn a crack at J. L. (Squirrel) Charles in the finals. G. J. Kupka and W. J. Quinn are yet to play their semifinals match, the winner of which will meet N. J. Murray in the finals of the fourth flight.

Duseks to Feature Friday Mat Card

Rough Rudy Signs to Meet Manich in Semifinal.

After a lapse of many moons, Dusek Bros., Inc., are again to storm the Washington Auditorium, this time against a new set of foes. Lisping Ernie Dusek was booked several days ago to exchange leers against Jim Browning in a title tie-up for the championship of the Jack Curley circuit. Last night, Promoter Turner closed with Rough Rudy Dusek for a semifinal bout on next Friday night's card. The oldest member of the Dusek rassle clan clashes with George Manich.

Manich, who upset Sandor Szabo here and who is credited with a great stand against Jimmy Londos, who is the boss man of his own stable of agony boys, makes no secret of the fact that he is out for one of the several rassle titles scattered over the country.

Rudy is not the man he once was in this peculiar profession, but he is still rough, tough and clever, and, if Manich wins this bout, bigger and better matches have been promised him. He is the same type rassler as is Rudy, which means that the fans will get a run for their money while the two scrambled-ear gentlemen are doing their stuff.

Stocks Droop In Confusion Over Dollar

Steel Issues Stage Gains as Sales Drop to 1,373,265 Shares.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Financial markets were dominated almost wholly today by the National currency controversy and prices generally reflected hopes or fears of a stabilized dollar.

With the "sound" money forces rallying to do battle with the advocates of gold manipulation, and victories being claimed by both sides, traders in all categories indicated much confused thought regarding the outcome and stocks and staples drooped.

Apparently of influence on the speculative trend in shares and commodities was the fact that the R. F. C. again held the domestic gold price unchanged at $33.76 an ounce and the dollar rallied sharply in terms of leading foreign exchanges.

British Pound Loses.

The British pound lost more than 12 cents at one time, while the French franc yielded nearly 0.13 of a cent. While the exchange market was thin, dealers reported that there was considerable European covering of short commitments on the fear that the dollar might be returned soon to the gold base at a valuation of around 60 cents.

Equities mulled about indifferently, but slightly lower, during the early hours. There was a selling flurry in the early afternoon when grains sagged noticeably and other commodities turned heavy.

Losses of 1 to 4 or more points were suffered by the alcohols, metals and a number of specialties. Declines were shaded, however, by last-minute recoveries.

Steel Stocks Gain.

Steel stocks actually showed net gains of fractions to around 2 points, with the resistance being led by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and National. Consolidated Gas and some other utilities managed to emerge with small gains and American Telephone was only slightly lower on the day. On the other hand, such issues as U. S. Industrial Alcohol, National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol, McIntyre, Dome, American Smelting, Case, American Can and Allied Chemical dropped 1 to 3 points net. The average for 90 selected stocks was off 1½ points. Transfers totaled only 1,373,265 shares.

Trade and industrial news was rather scarce, although speculative markets had little thought for this phase in view of the currency embroglio.

Mr. Woodin and Mr. Rogers

Answers to Statement of Sprague Are Inadequate and Unconvincing

By Ralph West Robey.

Secretary Woodin's challenge to the statement of Prof. Sprague is not surprising. Likewise the defense of the present monetary policy by Prof. James Harvey Rogers should cause no astonishment. Both Mr. Woodin and Mr. Rogers are committed to the present monetary program of the Administration. Prof. Sprague's letter of resignation was a charge of such seriousness against this program that it could not be ignored.

The answers of Mr. Woodin and Mr. Rogers, however, are quite inadequate to remove the doubts raised by the retiring financial advisor of the Government. The reason for this is that on the one hand, their statements in themselves are unconvincing and superficial and, on the other hand, that the public well knows that of the three, Prof. Sprague is immensely better qualified to pass judgment upon the questions at issue.

Mr. Woodin unfortunately shows, in addition to superficiality, bad taste and poor judgment. He says that the letter of resignation of Mr. Sprague "impeaches Dr. Sprague's own common sense and competency as a student of finance." Further, that "Dr. Sprague is permitting what he considers to be a personal embarrassment to becloud his judgment and to ruffle his ordinary good temperament."

As Mr. Woodin sees it, anyone who questions that United States Government bonds "are or can be or will be in any sense bad security" simply does not know what he is talking about. Such a questioning is "a reflection on the wealth and integrity of this country and people." It simply is unthinkable to Mr. Woodin that the United States Treasury should be placed in a position where it must borrow "from the people on bad security."

These statements, it seems to me, can be answered by just recalling two facts. The first is that the United States Government day by day deliberately is undermining the value of our currency. Second, a program of expenditures is being carried out which, if persisted in, will result in the Federal Government having the largest deficit that any Nation ever experienced except in connection with war.

Rogers Views Developments As Natural and Expected.

Mr. Rogers takes a rather different attitude in his criticism of Prof. Sprague. He wants to know "why the great commotion?" Apparently, to him there is nothing to get excited about when a country adopts a policy of depreciating its currency and endangering the credit of its Government. All of this is something which should be accepted with the greatest calm. To him "in the final analysis, the policy is very similar to that recently pursued in several of the most enlightened nations of the world." Further, "the weakness in Government bonds is entirely natural and was anticipated." Then, as a parting shot at Prof. Sprague and other "tories," if this program does "not prove effective, the danger is that Congress will make mandatory more drastic and even uncontrollable measures. In this event it will be upon those who sabotage the present policies that the onus of such a frightful disaster must rest."

These statements do not need extended comment. There never has been a country to adopt a policy comparable to that being followed by the United States Government today. What Mr. Rogers has in mind is the experience of France in 1925 and 1926, and the experience of England since 1931. In neither of these instances was the motivation the same or the method of carrying out the policy anything like that being pursued by the present Administration.

The argument that if this policy fails, the responsibility for what may occur hereafter rests upon those who have opposed the current program, is beneath contempt. This is the kind of threat that is used only by those unable to deal with problems on an intellectual basis.

Federal Bonds Lead Rallies; Prices Stand

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Resistance to the selling movement in U. S. Government bonds, which manifested itself near the close of the market on Wednesday, budded into a rally of moderate proportions today.

The market appeared to give some weight to certain of the overnight developments in the heated controversy on the Administration's monetary policy, such as Secretary Morgenthau's statement that the Government was investing the surplus funds of some of its agencies in the Federal issues, and the announcement that the New York Federal Reserve Bank had taken steps to scrutinize the sources and character of recent selling.

U. S. Loans Improve.

At any rate, the Treasury and Liberty loans showed improved action from the start. The volume of dealings fell off sharply from that of the previous day of weakness, but the securities moved ahead in an orderly way until recoveries ranged up to ¾ of a point through the list.

About the only exception to the trend was the called fourth 4¼ per cent Liberty loan, whose quotation eased off slightly.

The halting of the decline in the Government list invited a somewhat more active investment interest in other parts of the list, and, while the price movement was irregular, the market achieved a larger number of gains than in recent sessions.

On List of Gains.

Rail, utility and mixed industrial groups had a considerable number of advances of fractions to a point. Companies whose loans improved to this extent included Baltimore & Ohio, Milwaukee, New Haven, Illinois Central, Norfolk & Western, Pennsylvania, Union Pacific, International Paper, National Steel, New York Edison, Gulf States Steel, Standard Oil of New York, Wheeling Steel and others.

Corporation loans of prime rating were steadier, but generally inactive.

Recovery of the dollar against foreign currencies caused a slacking of speculative interest in European categories, and some of the leaders sold off rather sharply. French 7s and 7½s fell 2 and 4 points, respectively. British and Canadian issues also felt some selling, but Belgian issues were steady. Other categories were mixed.

Volume of trading declined to about $11,025,000 against $15,906,000 on Wednesday. The average price of 60 domestic corporation issues was unchanged.

Curb Is Driven Lower Under Quiet Selling

Downward Trend Is Led by Alcohols; Trading, 186,000 Shares.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Quiet but persistent selling in alcohols and a number of other specialties led the curb market to a lower close today.

Losses which ranged 1 to around 3 points also embraced oils and metals. Utilities resisted, however, Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric, finishing but a shade lower.

Canadian Industrial Alcohol "A", Hiram Walker, Lake Shore Mines, Safety Car Heating and Buckeye Pipe lost 2 to 3 points. Issues finishing a point or more lower included Atlas Corporation, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Newmont Gulf Oil and A. O. Smith. Swift & Co. and Standard Oil of Indiana were rather steady spots while Singer Manufacturing showed a 3-point advance in a small turnover.

The downward drift was halted somewhat by mild buying in the final trading but the indifference of traders was indicated in the small total of transactions which approximated only 186,000 shares compared with 198,000 Wednesday.

Curb—Quiet but persistent selling in alcohols and other specialties drove the curb to lower levels. Sales volume decreased to 186,000 shares.

(Associated Press.)

Rayon—Leading viscose producers are said to be receiving a considerable number of requests for deferred deliveries, but for the most part current shipments are running close to output.

Industrial chemicals — Manufacturers continue cautious about accepting 1934 contracts even at the higher levels named for certain products, according to gossip in the trade. Manufacturers of copper sulphate report a fairly good demand for this season of the year.

Blankets—It is reported in textile circles that many New York City jobbers are seeking to rid themselves of surplus stocks of cotton and part-wool blankets by offering them at substantial concessions from recent list quotations.

Zinc—The market reflects a firmer tone, due to reported unwillingness of a few producers to accept business at the currently quoted levels of 4.50 cents a pound, East St. Louis, and 4.35 cents, New York.

Paint—The trade hears that a leading Eastern manufacturer has increased prices to an average of 5 per cent, due to increased raw material costs.

Hides—Conditions in the spot market have shown no important change during the past week. Prices show general firmness, although tanners have been buying on a more limited scale.

Cotton Prices Decline Under Liquidation

December Closes at 9.81 as General Markets Drops 16 to 17 Points.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Cotton prices declined today under Southern selling and liquidation which was evidently influenced by the firmer ruling of the dollar and the action of grain and stock markets.

March contracts sold down to 10.05 in the late trading and closed at 10.07 with the general market ending barely steady at net declines of 16 to 17 points.

Early price movements were narrow. There was a little buying at the start on the relatively steady Liverpool cables and overnight reports of an increased demand for cotton goods, but this was quickly supplied by further December liquidation and scattered selling.

Southern Hedge Selling.

Hedge selling from the South was said to be a little more active than recently, while scattering liquidation partly through houses with Wall street connections became more active in the late trading.

Trade interests continued to buy on scale-down orders, and there was considerable covering, but the lowest prices of the day were reached in the late trading with December selling at 9.80 and May at 10.19, or 17 to 18 points net lower.

Closing quotations were within a point or two of the lowest.

Sterling Declines.

The decline in sterling and the fact that the domestic gold price remained unchanged again today were believed to have been influences on the decline.

Exports today, 28,594, making 3,109,066 so far this season. Port receipts, 56,844; U. S. port stocks, 4,089,225.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was weak today under December liquidation and selling by commission houses, promoted by future weakness in lard and lower grain and cotton markets. Final prices were 11 to 15 points net lower. Sales were 71 lots, of which 41 were in the way of switches, including December to March and May at 35 to 55 points difference. Bleachable spot, nominal; December closed, 4.31; January, 4.43; March, 4.65; May, 4.86.

Rubber Goods Trade of Japan Is Expanding

That the Japanese have been making notable progress in the manufacture of rubber goods is revealed in a report from Consul L. D. Sturgeon, Tokyo, made public by the Commerce Department.

At the present time, the report shows, the domestic rubber industry satisfies practically the entire home demand for all types of rubber goods, and at the same time exports a large volume of rubber products to all parts of the world.

There are about 600 establishments in Japan which manufacture rubber products, about 80 per cent of these being small plants. Total production in recent years has had a value of around 71,000,000 yen, the most important products being tires, footwear, hose, belting and toys.

During the first half of the current year Japanese exports of rubber goods amounted to 14,500,000 yen, a figure nearly three times higher than shipments in the corresponding period of 1932. Automobile tires, boots and shoes, and toys constitute the chief Japanese rubber products entering export trade, with Great Britain, the United States, British India and China the chief foreign markets.

While exports of rubber products have been steadily rising, imports of such items have progressively declined. In the first half of 1933 they amounted to less than 500,000 yen, which is about one-third the figure for the corresponding period of 1931. Automobile tires from Great Britain and the United States have been the most important import item, but the growth of the domestic tire industry has brought about a drastic curtailment in such imports.

The volume of raw rubber imported into Japan, the report points out, may be taken as a barometer of the expansion of the Japanese rubber manufacturing industry. Last year total raw rubber receipts amounted to 57,000 metric tons, compared with 44,000 tons in 1931, and 33,000 tons in 1930.

(Mint par value of yen equals 49.85 cents).

Tobacco Commodity Exchange Nears Start

New York, Nov. 23.—With the applications for memberships thus far received from a broad cross section of the tobacco trade as well as commission houses, the newly incorporated New York Tobacco & Commodities Exchange will be able to start operations shortly after the first of the year, according to a statement made today by Harry B. Brockhurst, of the organizing group.

Memberships will go in at $1,000 each and it is the present plan to limit the membership to 650. An entirely new exchange, it will not only be primarily devoted to trading in tobacco futures, but preparations are under way to also include other farm commodities which are not at present traded in on any other exchange. The membership limitation of 650 is therefore based in part upon the addition of these other commodities.

Credit Men Exchange Data To Aid Trade

Capital Unit Explains Need of Curbing Bad Debts to Protect Business.

A comparatively unknown channel for the exchange of credit information by manufacturers and wholesalers was revealed yesterday in an interview with Lister T. Watts, local credit executive of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and vice president of the adjustment bureau, Washington Credit Men's Association.

Mr. Watts described how the Washington association, local unit of the National Association of Credit Men, clears confidential ledger experience to the mutual advantage of all its members in various lines of trade.

"It is a commercial axiom that no business can prosper if the bad-debt losses are disproportionately large," said Mr. Watts.

Checking Is Safeguard.

"Checking credits with discrimination will safeguard profits, but every credit grantor needs information that will be helpful in eliminating the undesirable buyer and that will strengthen confidence in the well-meaning debtor. To get this information, the up-to-date credit man avails himself of the exchange of ledger information obtainable through a cooperative organization such as the Washington Association of Credit Men, because its reports give facts and not gossip, hearsay, rumors of the debtor's own estimation of himself.

"During the past five years an increasing number of business men have learned to solve their credit problems through the association and its affiliated branches, which throughout the country serve more than 130 different industries and have on file records of more than 2,200,000 debtors. The clearance of debtors' names through this source results in an interlocking of information between different trades and produces the most effective reports possible, because they approach a true cross-section of credit experience."

Unit of System.

Mr. Watts explained that the Washington Association, of which he is a director, is an affiliated unit of the National system, comprising more than 20,000 manufacturing, wholesale and financial interests of the country.

With the announcement of appointment of Richard A. Norris, an assistant cashier of Lincoln National Bank, as chairman of the finance committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, Robert H. Lacey, cashier of Columbia National Bank and chapter president, stated the financial program for the year 1933-34 has been tentatively approved and only minor changes will be adopted by the board of governors as prepared.

Mr. Lacey said the chapter's budget will assure the carrying out of the program of the educational committee, which includes all of the courses required for graduation, and in addition several graduate and special subjects.

The institute, according to Mr. Lacey, is sustained through nominal membership dues and tuition charges and is operated solely for the benefit of local bankers and persons connected with financial institutions, and is not conducted for commercial profit. Its annual budget, in excess of $15,000, provides for rent and operating expenses incident to conducting classes in banking, banking law, economics and allied subjects.

Mr. Norris is a past president of Washington Chapter and treasurer for the 1934 institute convention to be held here next June. Born in Washington, D. C., and educated in local schools, he was graduated from the American Institute of Banking in 1928 and has filled many assignments on its official board, being elected president of the local branch in 1932.

He is now a member of the board of governors and several committees of Washington Chapter. He is also a member of the national forum committee of the American Institute of Banking. Mr. Norris represented the local organization at annual conventions of the institute held in Philadelphia, Tulsa, Pittsburgh and Los Angeles.

Associated with Mr. Norris as members of this committee are Aubrey O. Dooley, assistant trust officer, Hamilton National Bank; James C. Dulin, jr., treasurer, American Security & Trust Co.; T. Hunton Leith, assistant cashier, Security Savings & Commercial Bank; J. Earle McGeary, W. B. Hibbs & Co.; Frank M. Perley, trust investment officer, American Security & Trust Co.; I. J. Roberts, assistant cashier, Riggs National Bank; Paul J. Seltzer, American Security & Trust Co., and James A. Soper, vice president Lincoln National Bank.

This committee has also been selected to handle the finances of the forthcoming national convention of the American Institute of Banking.

Loans to Brokers Decline $9,000,000

(Associated Press.)

Loans to brokers and dealers by New York reporting member banks amounted to $698,000,000 during the week ended November 22, representing a decrease of $9,000,000 for the week.

The loans for the week ended November 23, 1932, were $350,000,000.

The detailed distribution of the loans over the three weeks dealt with was given by the Federal Reserve Board as follows (figures in millions):

	Nov. 22	Nov. 15	Nov. 23, 1932

Wholesalers Get Record High Prices

Index Rises to 71.7 for Week; 20 Per Cent Up Over Lowest.

(Associated Press.)

Wholesale commodity prices reached the highest level in more than two years during the week of November 18, the weekly study of the Federal Bureau of Labor statistics said yesterday, making an increase of approximately 20 per cent since March 4, last.

The index number was 71.7, as compared with 71.5 for the week ended November 11, and compared with 72.1 in August, 1931, and 64.2 for the corresponding week in 1932.

"Wholesale prices," said Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics of the Department of Labor, "reached the highest level since August, 1931, when the index figure was 72.1

"They are more than 20 per cent above the low for this year, which was reached during the week of March 4, when the index figure was 59.6 Compared with the corresponding week of a year ago, when the index figure stood at 64.2, the present index shows an increase of nearly 12 per cent during the 12 months.

Canadians Buy More Mining Machinery

The demand for mining machinery of all types has increased to a marked degree in British Columbia, according to Vice Consul N. P. Meeks, Vancouver, in a report made public by the Commerce Department.

Until the spring of the current year, it is pointed out, mining companies restricted their purchases to used machinery and at the present time all available stocks of used compressors, drills, mill machinery, diesels, hydroelectric plants and similar equipment have been exhausted.

Buyers of mining machinery, the report states, must now purchase from machinery houses handling new equipment and such firms report a phenomenal growth in the demand for such items as rock drills, mine hoists, diesel engines, power plant equipment, ore-crushing and sifting machinery, water tanks, air receivers, air pipe fittings, power blowers, ore cars, rails and compressors.

While numerous gold lode properties have announced their intention of installing power plants and constructing mills, the project of the British Columbia Nickel Mines to establish a smelter, mill, refining and hydroelectric plant on their chromium-nickel properties, is the most pretentious undertaking announced to date.

Russell County Ships 17 Carloads of Cattle

Lebanon, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—A total of 17 carloads of cattle have been shipped out of Russell County this week.

It is generally considered that all cattle to be marketed from the lower end of the county, with the exception of a few steers to be shipped later, have already been sent to Eastern markets.

Wheat Values Slump Under Active Selling

Stop-Loss TransactionsAlso Cause All Other Grains to Tumble.

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP).—Jolted by active selling to stop losses, wheat underwent a maximum fall of 3¾ cents a bushel today and rye 4½ cents. Other grains also suffered a steep tumble.

Lack of confidence owing to uncertainties of the monetary outlook was the chief motive ascribed for selling of grains and for curtailment of buying interest.

Downswings carried the wheat market to below the prices which prevailed when the United States Government started its gold-buying program on October 25.

Wheat Closes Nervous.

Wheat closed nervous at almost the day's bottom, 3⅛ to 3½ cents under yesterday's finish; corn, 2¾ to 3⅜ down; oats, 1⅝ to 2 cents off, and provisions varying from 40 cents decline to a rise of 25 cents.

From the outset, various untoward aspects of monetary conditions overshadowed wheat trading, and through wheat influence put prices of all cereals on the downgrade. Severest breaks in values came in the final hour. Intermittent rallies took place earlier, but at no stage was buying aggressive, and each rally met with a persistent stream of liquidation that forced prices lower than before.

Houses with Eastern connections were prominent on the selling side of the wheat market. A special late element of weakness which influenced wheat was opposition shown in Washington to an increase in the duty on rye. Enlarged offerings of rye took place, and had a noticeable sympathetic effect, first on wheat and then the entire list of grains.

Another Disturbing Factor.

Another disturbing factor was apparent certainty that 5,000,000 acres would be added to United States bread wheat production owing to Italy's announcement banning wheat imports hereafter.

This was generally taken to mean the stoppage of the chief outlet for durum wheat from the United States, the kind of wheat used for macaroni, thus leaving virtually no alternative but to transfer domestic durum acreage to bread wheat production.

Silk Industry Of Italy Seen Losing Ground

The progressive decline in the past few years of Italy's silk-producing industry is revealed in a report from Vice Consul Paul D. Thompson, Milan, made public by the Commerce Department.

In 1930, the report shows, silk exports, amounting to 1,377,900,000 lire, accounted for 11.36 per cent of Italy's total export trade. In 1932 silk shipments had fallen to 401,000,000 lire, representing only 5.87 per cent of the country's export trade. During the first six months of the current year, Italian silk shipments abroad were valued at 181,278,000 lire and represented 5.83 per cent of aggregate exports.

Curtailed consumption of silk in Italy's chief foreign markets, combined with steadily increasing competition from the Orient, is the basis for the present unfavorable position of the country's silk industry, the report states. Any substantial improvement, it points out must await the resumption of normal conditions in the American market.

Silk consumption in the United States, the report shows, has drastically declined in 1933 compared with other years. During the month of September total silk deliveries to American mills amounted to only 31,000 bales, approximately half the figure for the same month of last year.

Because of the low exchange value of the yen, Japanese silk producers are able to offer silk at prices far below those asked for the Italian product which are quoted in lire. Notwithstanding the low costs of their last cocoon crop, it is believed in the Italian silk trade that present Japanese quotations are below the level of production costs.

Record Milk Yield Set By Virginia Guernsey

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—A Guernsey cow from the herd of George Benoit, of Fredericksburg, has furnished a new official record for milk production which entitles her to entry in the Advanced Register of the American Guernsey Cattle Club.

The animal is 6 years old, Windsor Hill Rose, with a production of 11,908.5 pounds of milk and 569.6 pounds of butter fat in Class AA.

Germans Plan To Reorganize Steel Industry

Billion-Dollar Company May Merge Allied Lines; Berlin to Control.

Berlin, Nov. 23 (AP).—A plan to reorganize the German billion dollar steel and coal trust and give the government indirect control over it through bank holdings in the mother firm will be submitted at a stockholders' meeting in Essen November 29.

To be known as the Steel Union, the new grouping proposes a setup with a capitalization of between 500 and 600 million marks (now about $195,000,000 and $234,000,000), mostly accounted for by exchanges of stock in four major companies against stock in the new trust.

Industries in Plan.

Besides steel mills, iron foundries, coal and coke plants, there are to be included in the suggested structure—which is to be formed from the Gelsenkirchen—United Steel Works, Phoenix Steel & Mining and the Zypen companies.

With the Gelsenkirchen properties forming the keystone of the projected merger, the government would become one of the principal factors in the steel and coal industry.

Flick was said in financial circles to have built the giant organization too rapdly and on weak financial underpinning which necessitted action by banks.

View of Press.

Government communiques at the time dismissed the transaction as any other commercial action, but Berlin newspapers attributed the purchase to the government's desire to forestall "foreign groups" from obtaining control of the steel and coal group.

At the time it was said that French and Dutch syndicates were seeking to get control of the Flick interests.

The Taegliche Rundschau said bluntly, "the transaction was completed to keep the Flick interests from falling into the hands of the well-known French cannon factory, Schneider-Creuzot."

Under the terms of the proposed merger each company would retain its own identity, but would have well-defined fields, based on its manufacturing possibilities, thus eliminating overlapping and unprofitable business by confining the companies to the markets best suited to their equipment.

German Patent On Tungsten Filament Ends

The expiration last month of the patent held by German interests on the tungsten filament arrangement used in electric light bulbs is causing considerable concern in Germany's electrical industry, according to advices from the American consulate, Frankfort-on-Main, made public by the Commerce Department.

The loss at this particular time of patent protection on such an important feature of bulb manufacture, it is pointed out, is deemed to be especially unfortunate in view of the intense international competition in this product.

It is pointed out that the Japanese recently have developed an enormous production of low-price bulbs, large quantities of which are being sold throughout the world. These Japanese bulbs are being offered at such extremely low prices that no other country has yet been able to compete with them. The Chinese market, in which Germany had a considerable electric bulb trade in the past, is regarded as lost.

German exports of electric light bulbs in the first seven months of 1933, the report shows, amounted to 19,000,000 pieces, the chief markets being France, Denmark, Italy, England and Austria.

In order to afford the German electric bulb industry greater protection at this critical time, it is believed that a substantial increase of import duty will be shortly enacted.

Prices declined from 8 cents a pound to 2.9. Prune production has past its peak in the State due to many orchards being grubbed up or abandoned and few new ones set out.

October Sales Of Autos Gain 103 Per Cent

Rise Over Same Month of '32 Occurs First Time in Five Years.

Preliminary estimates of the value of retail sales of new automobiles, computed from number of cars sold, as reported by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, show an increase of 103 per cent for the past October over October, 1932, and a decrease of 16.1 per cent as compared with September this year, according to Dr. Willard L. Thorp, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Prices during October of this year remained approximately the same as in September.

This is the first time in five years that sales in October have been greater than in October of the previous year. The September-October change, is less than the usual seasonal decline.

All percentages presented are based on daily average sales figures, giving equal weight to all the days of the calendar months involved. The original sales data were obtained in terms of the total number of cars sold. In order to convert this figure to dollar values, an index of price changes was prepared, based upon the selling price for the most popular body model, and the registrations for typical makes. Comparisons of the daily average dollar sales for October with September and with the previous October during the last five years are given below:

October, 1932	—26.7	— 40.7
October, 1931	—19.6	— 36.2
October, 1930	—21.2	— 51.2
October, 1929	— 8.4	— 3.6

This estimate of automobile sales is one of the group of monthly retail sales value indexes by means of which the Department of Commerce seeks to aid in tracing the movement of goods into the hands of the consumer. Indexes have already been published for October for variety stores (selling goods at 5 and 10 cents to $1) and for groceries.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute announced today that the time for delivery of steel rails under the recently reduced price has been extended to July 1, 1934. The time limit previously set was four months from the time of making contracts. Delivery time on other steel products for the public works program or concerned in capital expenditures also has been extended.

In connection with a request for additional deposits of the first mortgage bonds of the Long Bell Lumber Co., the bondholders protective committee announced that negotiations are in progress for the cancellation or modification of certain contracts, including timber purchase obligations, which the declining markets have made burdensome to the company. Approximately 75 per cent of the bonds already have been deposited, according to the committee.

Carl D. Berry, president of National Bellas Hess, Inc., reports that the company's export business "is materially benefiting from present conditions surrounding the dollar in foreign exchange markets." The company's foreign business is transacted in 22 countries.

Devoe & Raynolds Co. is notifying the paint trade that early next month it will advance prices on an average of 7½ per cent. Prices were raised 5 per cent in June. The second increase, the company said, reflects extra costs incident to NRA compliance and the higher levels of raw materials.

Favorable dividend changes this week numbered 15 compared with 18 last week. There were nine unfavorable changes against five the week before. Six extra dividends were voted, payments on four stocks were resumed, four initial dividends appeared and one rate was increased.

Cecil R. Berry, president of the Citizens National Bank of Waverly, N. Y., and Robert T. Stevens of New York City have been elected directors of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, succeeding, respectively, David C. Warner, president of the Endicott Trust Co., Endicott, N. Y., and Samuel W. Reyburn, president of Associated Dry Goods Corporation. Their terms will run three years beginning January 1.

Russia Looms as Large Buyer Of Cotton if Living Improves

Consumption Now Stands at 2,000,000 Bales Per Year; Americans See Potential Market for 400,000 Units in Near Future.

New York, Nov. 23.—Soviet Russia constitutes a large potential market for American cotton, provided the Soviets succeed in their plan of raising the standard of living of the Russian people to compare with that in other western countries, according to data compiled by the New York Cotton Exchange.

Before the World War, per capita cotton consumption in Russia was about 4.0 pounds, as against 12.0 in Switzerland, the highest per capita European consumption, and 19.0 pounds in the United States.

During the past five years the Russian per capita cotton consumption was about 5.6 pounds, as against approximately 25.0 pounds in the United States. The population of the Soviet Union is approximately 160,000,000, as against about 125,000,000 in the United States.

If the per capita consumption of the Russians were equal to that of the Americans, Russia would consume annually about 8,000,000 bales of all kinds of cotton as against a consumption of about 6,500,000 by the United States.

At the present time, Russian annual consumption of all growths of cotton is about 2,000,000 bales and is slowly increasing. Russia is now using very little American cotton whereas, before the World War, her mills consumed 400,000 to 500,000 bales annually. Owing to the difficulty of arranging purchases of cotton abroad, Russia has been forced to expand her own cotton acreage into areas where cotton growing is uneconomic.

This past year has seen Russian cotton acreage reduced for the first time in several years, and, while efforts are being made to increase the yield per acre on the smaller acreage, it is open to question whether cotton production this year, or for some years to come, will exceed last year's growth of 1,950,000 bales.

If Russian per capita cotton consumption should increase 100 per cent during the next few years to 11.2 pounds, that is, to approximately half the per capita consumption in the United States, Russian annual cotton consumption would be about 3,600,000 bales as against an average of 1,800,000 in the past five years.

Since experts on Russia are of the opinion that Russian cotton production possibilities are limited to approxifately 2,000,000 bales for the next few years at least, it would be necessary under such conditions for the Soviets to import about 1,500,000 bales of cotton for the remainder of their consumption requirements.

American cotton would in all likelihood constitute the bulk of such imports, with the result that Russia would import and consume annually about as much American cotton as Great Britain is now using each year. While it will undoubtedly be a number of years before Russia is equipped to spin substantial imports of cotton over and above her own production of the staple, it is very probable that Russia will use more American cotton this year than for several years past, when her takings were almost negligible.

Czechs Plan Manufacture Of Midget Car

A midget automobile to retail at a price under $100 will be placed on the market next spring by a Czechoslovak company, according to a report from the American consulate, Prague, made public by the Commerce Department.

The license to manufacture the car, the report states, was acquired from a German company. The Czechoslovak model, under the trade name of Jawa, will be an exact copy of the German machine, with the exception that the body will be somewhat changed to suit local requirements.

The motor is of the front-driven, two-cylinder, two-cycle type, of 700 cubic centimeters displacement, developing 18 horsepower, and will be placed across the frame of the chassis. Thermo-syphon water cooling system, Solex carburetor, independently sprung rear axle, the dynamo and starter forming one aggregate fixed directly to the crank-shaft, are some of the features of this car.

The cars will be sold as two or four-seater cabriolets, with a wheel base of 2.6 meters, and will not weigh more than 1,400 pounds. The factory intends to start production with a series of 500 units, the report states.

West Virginia Halts Cattle Tuberculosis

State Is 13th to Complete Eradication of Disease in Herds.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—The cattle tuberculosis eradication campaign, which was completed in this State on November 18, places West Virginia as the thirteenth State in the Union to achieve the distinction of being "a modified accredited area." "This means that the entire State is now practically free from bovine tuberculosis," states Dr. H. M. Newton, of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry.

The present campaign was begun in a limited way in 1918 and up to the present date has been a cooperative plan between State department of agriculture and United States Bureau of Animal Industry.

During the first two years the Federal Government placed, first, Dr. W. R. Van Es, and later Dr. G. W. Neff in active charge of the work.

Following Dr. Neff's death in 1920, Dr. H. M. Newton was transferred by the Federal Government from his station at Lansing, Mich., to supervise the activities of the bureau in West Virginia.

The cooperating State force has been under the direction of the following commissioners of agriculture: J. A. Stewart, John W. Smith, Howard M. Gore and the present commissioner, J. B. McLaughlin.

This campaign to eradicate bovine tuberculosis conducted 802,083 tuberculin tests, which resulted in the destruction of 5,944 tuberculosis animals, removed from herds and slaughtered.

The Government will maintain enough inspectors to retest herds from time to time so that the disease may be prevented from again becoming established.

Strict regulations will be enforced to prevent the importation of infected cattle and certain areas of the State where the original infection was heavy, retesting will be conducted more frequently.

As a result of the completion of this work, Dr. A. A. Johnson, associated with the work and stationed here for 10 years, has been transferred, effective immediately, and sent to Vermont for similar work. He will reside in Rutland, Vt., where his family will join him shortly.

7 Roads Net $10,089,000 During October

Kelvinator to Pay Dividend First Time Since February, 1927.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—The first seven railroads to report for October had net operating income of $10,089,000, against $11,774,000 in October, 1932, a decrease of 14.3 per cent. In September their total was $9,135,000, a decrease of 2.9 per cent from the previous year.

Gross revenues of the seven last month aggregated $37,811,000, compared with $39,125,000 a year ago, a decrease of 3.3 per cent. Their September gross was $35,842,000, or a gain of 3.2 per cent over 1932.

The increase in freight traffic over last year narrowed during October. Freight surcharges were also lifted in that month, helping to make comparisons less favorable.

Directors of the former declared a dividend of 12½ cents a share, the first payment since February, 1927, when 50 cents was disbursed, while Devoe & Raynolds voted extras of 25 cents and regular quarterly dividends of the same amount on its Class "A" and "B" common stocks. These are the first payments on the shares since April 1, 1932, when the stocks received 15 cents.

Devoe & Raynolds estimated its earnings for the year ending November 30 at $3.80 a common share and said its directors believed the stockholders, many of whom are employes, should receive part of the profits now "so that their purchasing power will be increased." The dividends are payable January 2 to stock of record December 20. Kelvinator's is payable January 15 to holdings of record December 22.

Ohio Oil Co. and subsidiaries in the nine months ended September 30 had net loss of $1,933,831, contrasting with net profit of $6,275,546 in the corresponding period of 1932. For the quarter ended September 30 net profit amounted to $1,206,849, equal, after preferred dividends, to 5 cents a common share, against loss of $1,722,435 in the preceding quarter and net profit of $2,177,348 in the September quarter of last year. Current assets on September 30 were $27,831,364, against current liabilities of $3,500,070.

The General Railway Signal Co. today declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, payable January 2 to stock of record December 11.

The company reported net profit for the nine months ended September 30 amounted to $97,725, contrasted with $459,336 in the first nine months last year.

The board of directors of the Virginia Public Service Co., at a meeting held November 21, 1933, at 117 South Washington street, Alexandria, Va., declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock and $1.50 per share on the 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock, both payable January 1, 1934, to stockholders of the company of record December 11, 1933, according to an announcement by L. W. Van Bibber, secretary-treasurer of the company.

The Chesapeake Corporation, a holding concern for railroad investments of the Van Sweringen interests of Cleveland today increased the dividend on the capital stock to 63 cents a share. The dividend is payable January 1 to stock of record December 8.

The company had paid dividends of 50 cents quarterly since July, 1932, when the disbursement was reduced from a $3 annual basis.

Increase in the dividend rate is believed to have been prompted by a rise in the corporation's income from its large holdings of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway common stock, following an increase in the latter's dividend rate last month to 70 cents quarterly from 62½ cents.

Weston Electrical Instrument Corporation reports net loss of $70,065 for the first nine months of 1933 against loss of $129,239 a year ago. In the third quarter the company had net profit of $9,121 against losses of $31,888 in the preceding quarter and $29,785 in the third period of 1932.

Cheap Dollar Aid Claimed In Mail Orders

New York, Nov. 23.—Export business of National Hess, Inc., Kansas City and New York mail order house, which does business in 22 foreign countries, is materially benefiting from present conditions surrounding the dollar in foreign exchange markets, according to a statement made today by Carl D. Berry, president.

"Our sales volume in the British Indies and South American countries, where the pound sterling is the basis of exchange, especially has shown a sharp increase since the value of the dollar began to fall in the exchange markets," Mr. Berry said. "Our average foreign order is now almost three times as large as our average domestic order. On November 15, National had the largest foreign sales of any day in the last year."

The recent cold spell which prevailed throughout the Middle West gave an impetus to the company's domestic business. Sales for the week ended November 18 were 60 per cent larger than for the comparable week in 1932, even though the company was enjoying improved business at that time as a result of a special circular which is not being used this year.

Auto Sales Total 138,475.

(Associated Press.)

Factory sales of automobiles in the United States during October were 138,475 units contrasted with 48,702 a year ago and 196,062 in September of this year, the Census Bureau reported. For the first 10 months of 1933 unit sales were 1,811,242 against 1,203,768 in 1932.

NRA Complaints Ordered Sent to Him.

First steps in a new NRA procedure for Washington were taken yesterday when Maj. Raymond J. Walter, executive officer of the local compliance board, was authorized to receive complaints and petitions on codes already adopted.

In the past, Maj. Walter has had supervision only over cases involving the President's reemployment agreements. When concerns were placed under a signed code, complaints and petitions were sent to a district compliance officer in Norfolk, Va.

Criticism of this roundabout method resulted in the decision to have the code cases taken up here. The development is seen as foreshadowing appointment of Maj. Walter as District compliance officer.

Maj. Walter's new duties will involve supervision of the hotel code, which goes into effect next Monday.

Restaurant Code Rules Explained

The Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance met last night at 1412 I street northwest, to acquaint nonunion workers with the provisions of the Restaurant Code, hearings on which start Monday in the Commerce Building.

Harry W. Fox, assistant to Edward McGrady, labor advisor to Gen. Johnson, explained to more than 100 restaurant workers who attended, their right to collective bargaining.

Announcement was made that Edward Flore, labor advisor on the restaurant code; Harry Paulenson, of Atlantic City, and Charles E. Sands, secretary-treasurer of the Restaurant Employes Alliance, have been appointed to speak at the public hearings on the code.

Four clubs will meet in the conference which is being held in honor of Mrs. Harry C. Grove and the State officers. Members of the Mount Vernon, Nathan Hale, Betsy Ross and Georgetown clubs will report to Mrs. Grove. A program will be offered by 196 children. Miss Elisabeth M. Barnes is chairman.

Radio Waves and Ripples

INFLATION note:

WRC is in the market for a couple of comedians for use once a week in a local sustaining program that will run a year.

Deflation note:

An N. B. C. mind, once proud of his behind-the-scene knowledge of Washington news, called an NRA official close to Gen. Johnson to learn if the general would take the broadcasting code to the President for signature.

He was informed one of his stations put an announcement to that effect on the air last night.

Whitecaps.

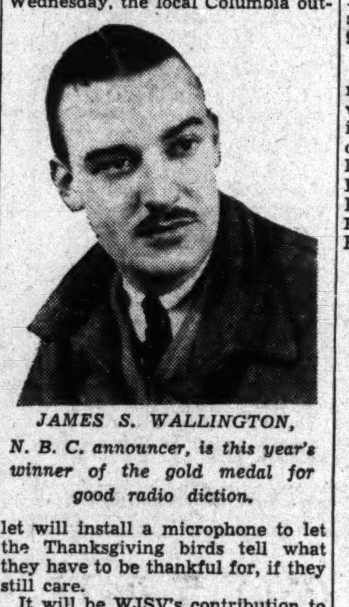
In one of the Capital's markets Wednesday, the local Columbia outlet will install a microphone to let the Thanksgiving birds tell what they have to be thankful for, if they still care.



JAMES S. WALLINGTON, N. B. C. announcer, is this year's winner of the gold medal for good radio diction.

It will be WJSV's contribution to an otherwise dignified, if routine, man-in-the-street broadcast which will constitute Columbia's Thanksgiving eve program.

Having both pianos in one studio for Guy Lombardo and lacking a piano mover, WJSV had to send the hillbilly McCravy brothers, Frank and Jim, over to the Kitt organ studios for their last broadcast.

Columbia's vice president, Sam Pickard, and lady-appeal broadcaster, Tony Wons, are partners in business. But no one, including the best C. B. S. minds, appears to know whether the enterprise is women's knit wear or radio program peddling.

President Roosevelt's next radio address following the one from Warm Springs at 10:30 tonight, which both networks will carry, is to be for the anniversary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ, Wednesday, December 6.

LORETTA POYNTON, 19 years old, has returned to radio play acting after leads in Chicago legitimates.

Georgia Hall, which the President will dedicate, was erected largely through his efforts. He will be introduced by C. J. Callaway, chairman of the Georgia Hall committee.

Col. Stoopnagle and Budd return to broadcasting on C. B. S. next month in a series of quarter-hour Wednesday and Saturday programs. They go to work for their last year's sponsor Saturday, September, 16, at 9:15 p. m.

Variety's list of most popular radio shows is just about what you would expect it to be. Rudy Vallee is No. 1, Amos 'n' Andy No. 2. The others, in order of supposed popularity, are Burns and Allen, Show Boat, Whiteman and Jolson, Jack Benny, Will Rogers, Ben Bernie, Fred (Salad Bowl) Allen, Jack Pearl, Phil Baker and Bing Crosby.

Four games are on the network football schedule tomorrow, both chains taking Army-Navy, C. B. S. at noon, National at 1:15. Columbia will air U. S. C.-Notre Dame following the service game at 3:30, and Stanford-California at 5 p. m. N. B. C. is putting Yale-Harvard over a WEAF chain at 1:45 p. m.

"Ike" Tilley, Cliff Edwards imitator, called on Announcer Jim McGrath in the WRC studios yesterday; stayed for an audition.

Community Chest broadcasts this week include "The Other Side," a play produced by Wilma Wright Flood and directed by Shannon Allen for WJSV tomorrow night at 9:30. Frank J. Hogan speaks for the Chest on the Radio Joe program, WMAL, 7:45 p. m., and Edward F. Colladay, Republican National committeeman for the District, plugs for charity at WJSV, 5:45.

A Chilean tenor named Dell Campo makes a debut with Columbia this evening at 5:15, recalling a story that concerned the young man's going to jail for serenading a Park Avenue young lady he met on the train from Hollywood.

Though he made no editorial comment, he received the next day a letter branding him, among other things, as a "blankety-blank Hooverite!"

Verdict in Reifschneider Case Holds Colored Man Guilty.

La Plata, Md., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—Page Jupiter, colored, was convicted of first-degree murder by a jury here today in the death of Mrs. Evelyn Reifschneider, near Waldorf, last July.

Jupiter's confession that he had hacked Mrs. Reifschneider, his employer, to death with an ax and left her body in a thicket was presented to the jury. He was brought from the jail at Baltimore this morning and examination of the jury was started immediately. The State challenged 10 prospective jurors and the defense 20, the limit allowed by the law.

Only seven witnesses were heard, five for the State and two for the defense. The jury retired at 3:16 p. m., and returned its verdict at 3:50. The prisoner, given into the custody of Sheriff Vernon Cooksey by Judge Mitchell Diggs, was to be taken tonight to the Maryland State Prison at Baltimore to await setting the date of execution.

State's Attorney Edward Edelen called as witnesses Earl Hamilton, who found the body; Ned Huntt, who saw the body shortly after it was discovered; Deputy Sheriff Russell Howard, Dr. G. O. Monroe, who examined the body, and Sheriff Cooksey. Their testimony bore out details of the confession.

The defense called two witnesses, one of whom was Charles Lancaster, postmaster at Rock Point, and the other a Negro, who testified that they believed Jupiter was insane. They told of his crawling about on hands and knees and explaining he was a dog, and of his attempting to chase rabbits on hands and knees.

Defense Attorneys John S. Mudd and Joseph Wilmer told the jury they believed the defense case mitigated, but did not justify the crime. They urged the jury to take into consideration the mental condition of the defendant.

Only the sheriff and deputies guarded the prisoner and there was no indication of a demonstration.

Burden Is Seen If Dry Agents Watch Taxes

Shift of Liquor Revenue Work to Treasury Suggested.

What is to become of prohibition agents after December 5 depends largely on what steps the Treasury Department wants to take to safeguard liquor tax revenues, it was indicated at the Department of Justice yesterday.

Attorney General Homer Cummings said there is a "prevailing belief" the Treasury's revenue agents should watch for violation of liquor revenue laws. If they assume this responsibility, he stated, it will mean a "considerable load" lifted from the Justice Department's prohibition agents.

Only about 1,000 agents remain in the once-populous prohibition agent division. The Attorney General said he expects considerbale shifting of agents after December 5, to give required Federal protection to dry States.

However, it is pointed out, should it be decided it is the job of prohibition agents to watch for liquor revenue act violations, the prohibition unit faces a difficult task. Since March, funds for this work have been cut to $4,000,000, with prospect of further cuts, and it will be physically impossible for the prohibition unit to engage in large-scale work on present allotments.

Likewise, if it is left up to the Treasury's Bureau of Industrial Alcohol to watch all liquor revenue leaks and assume work of the prohibition unit, there are difficulties ahead. Dr. James M. Doran's staff already is heavily burdened checking brewery revenues, and with the additional task of checking liquors at distilleries, it will have all it can do without watching retail outlets.

Miners Lean To U. M. W. A.

Vote in First Elections for Steel Negotiator Announced.

Indications that the steel industry soon will be bargaining with the United Mine Workers of America relative to wages and working conditions in its Pennsylvania bituminous mines came yesterday when the National Labor Board revealed the union carried first elections by 94 per cent.

The elections, conducted by the board to allow the miners to select their representatives who will bargain with the industry, are part of the plan worked out by President Roosevelt at White House conferences with leaders of the industry.

Wednesday's elections were for northwestern Pennsylvania mines. Elections for the southwestern part of the State were conducted yesterday, with union officials predicting a 2-to-1 victory over the open shop and company union factions.

The working representation of approximately 25,000 miners will be determined by the voting.

How's Breath?

Best Friend Won't Tell, but Police Tester May.

"How's your breath today?"

This is not a halitosis advertisement; it's a question police may be asking automobile drivers after an accident if a new scheme of Traffic Director Van Duzer materializes.

The policeman will not have to depend on his own sense of smell, but will usher the autoist before a scientific breath tester which will register "drinking," "drunk," or maybe even "sober."

Forestalled by legal obstacles in his proposal to make blood tests, Van Duzer is reported to have consulted physicians and scientists regarding his new idea. Details are being closely guarded.

Hopkins Bars Politics in New Civil Jobs Plan

Orders Immediate Probe of Youngstown, O., Charges.

Reports that politics had crept into the distribution of jobs on civil works projects at Youngstown, Ohio, yesterday resulted in an order by Administrator Harry L. Hopkins for an investigation which would cause the withholding of funds from that city if the charges are found true.

Hopkins received information, allegedly based on a newspaper story, to the effect that John J. Farrell, Democratic chairman of Mahoning County, had advised Democratic job seekers wanting employment on civil works to register at the city employment bureau and then report to Frank Kearney, Democratic deputy of the board of elections.

Hopkins telegraphed to Gen. F. D. Henderson, of Columbus, chairman of the Ohio civil works administration and himself a prominent Democrat, to carry out an immediate investigation of the charges.

Hopkins' telegram to Henderson said that no civil works funds would be expended in Youngstown if the conditions reported are found true. Later, officials at civil works headquarters here said Hopkins does not wish to penalize Youngstown unemployed for political interference. His statement, it was said, was to be taken literally only if it were found impossible to keep politics out of relief.

With more than 2,000,000 Federal Government checks distributed to all parts of the country with which employes hired on civil works will be paid tomorrow, the Federal Reserve Banks were urged yesterday by President Roosevelt to offer full cooperation in expediting payments.

Administrator Hopkins wired the President at Warm Springs, Ga., requesting the assistance of Reserve member banks be directed by Roosevelt. An Executive order followed.

Administrator Hopkins also acted swiftly yesterday to safeguard against injury to workers on civil works projects. He announced they would be covered by workmen's compensation under the Federal compensation law.

Although more than 1,000,000 persons have been removed from relief rolls since last week, there has been no let-up in relief activities. Distribution of funds with which to provide winter clothing and warm bedding for the destitute continued. Pennsylvania received an allotment of $1,000,000, Ohio, $753,000, and Georgia, $600,000.

Walt Mason, Himself

GREAT BLESSING.

My friend and roommate, Abner Queer, is sorry that I can not hear. "You miss so much," he often cries, "the poet's voice, the statesman's lies, you miss the music of the breeze, as it goes crooning through the trees, and all the sound of youthful mirth which is resounding from the earth. I'll gladly stake you with the price if you will buy some good device that will enable you to hear the music of this good old sphere." "Your ears are good," I make reply, "you hear whatever sound goes by. I've often known you leave your bed and cuss for two hours straight ahead, because some dog began to bark away out yonder in the dark. It robbed you of your night's repose, you hungered to impart some blows to that poor bow-wow's aching spine, and urge him to take in his sign. I've heard you rant at break of day because some rooster, far away, saluted Sol, the orb of light, which just was looming into sight. The way you roared and carried on, because that rooster hailed the dawn seemed vain and foolish to a gent who can not hear things worth a cent. And I have known you raise the roof when midnight singers, on the hoof, would pause before our tree and vine to render up 'Sweet Adeline'."

G. O. P. Plans Inflation Fight In Congress

Seeks Democratic Help for "Sound Money," Against "Wasteful" Spending.

Rallying on the issues of "sound money" and alleged "wasteful" spending of public funds, the Republican minority in Congress is planning its first concerted stand against Administration policies when Congress reconvenes in January.

Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, who keynoted Republican sentiment at the party's last National convention, yesterday predicted a "constructive" Republican assault on many phases of President Roosevelt's program.

Dickinson announced recently he would sponsor a resolution for repeal of title 1 of the recovery act creating the National Recovery Administration. He expects to get the support of some Democrats for his measure.

Would Check Inflation.

Together with some Republican colleagues, he thinks Congress should go further, prohibit expenditure of Public Works money not already allocated, curtail many of the powers granted the President at the last session, and check the drive toward inflation.

"The time has passed when devaluing the dollar by gold purchases will increase farm prices," he said. "Other nations were ahead of us, and we have suffered accordingly on the exchanges of the world.

"What we can do is adjust tariff rates to stop this continual influx of cheap farm products from countries whose currencies are much more depreciated than our own. This could be done by a simple resolution without throwing open tariff schedules."

He contends the Administration's gold purchasing program is having a diametrically opposite effect from what was intended.

Attacks P. W. A.

According to the Iowa Senator, sound money advocates will find their strength in congressional Republicans who seek to check the tide of expansion.

As a first step against inflation, Congress should repeal the authority under which Mr. Roosevelt can print new paper money, he said.

He charged the Public Works Administration with "approving almost every project that comes before them, regardless of cost or waste." He said the effect of expenditures made to date on the employment situation has been "infinitesimal."

Payment of Kelly Reward Refused

Nobody Merits $15,000 Offered, Is Ruling.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 23 (AP).—The $15,000 reward raised by a group of citizens for the capture of George ("Machine Gun") Kelly, convicted in the Charles F. Urschel kidnaping, will not be paid, Charles F. Colcord, chairman of the reward committee, announced today.

"After careful investigation I have found that Department of Justice officials are responsible for the capture and they acted upon information which they had prior to the date the reward was offered," Colcord said.

New England Council Demands Stable Money

Boston, Nov. 23 (AP).—The New England Council today called upon President Roosevelt to end "continuing uncertainty as to our National measure of monetary value," by "stabilizing our currency and foreign exchange at the earliest practicable moment."

The resolution was proposed by the council's president, Henry D. Sharpe, of Providence, R. I. Tomorrow it will be placed before the ninth New England Conference, to which belongs the council, a semiofficial body originally sponsored by the governors of the six New England States.

Boy Shares Christmas Gift Savings With Post Toy Fund

The honor contribution to The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund yesterday was only $1, but it represented a loving thought on the part of a little child that made it magnificent.

A little boy who has been planning his Christmas gifts to his family for some time sat looking at the contents of his overflowing bank last night.

It held only $2.20 and there were many in his family for whom gifts were bought with the year's savings, accumulated dime by dime. Johnny was only 7, but he could read and he read every day the stories about The Post Toy and Doll Fund.

He came to the conclusion that it was better to cut down just a little on some of the home folk and make sure that at least 10 needy children in Washington would have a toy if no more in their stockings on Christmas Day.

A Treasure in Pennies.

Carefully he counted out a dollar in nickels, dimes and pennies, nice shiny pennies, each one bearing the head of Abraham Lincoln, that lover of childhood, on it. Then he told his mother bravely:

"May I give this to The Post Toy and Doll Fund so that 10 toys may be bought for the other children for Christmas?"

Down to The Post the mother came.

Now, good people of Washington, again "a little child shall lead them." Follow Johnny's example and send in your mite. The managers of The Post Toy and Doll Fund know all about the depression, how hard it has been to make ends meet this year and all the rest of the real reasons that makes one hesitate to do even such a good deed as this. But if Johnny can sacrifice so can you. All together now to put the Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund over the mark for the first $100 by Saturday night.

Some Gifts Already Repaired.

Many of the toys and dolls already contributed have been sent to the hospitals for repairs. Customers and members of the National Association of Dyers and Cleaners who have toys that need be renovated need only to turn them in to The Post.

Some of the youthful contributors of toys to The Post Toy and Doll Fund have done their part already by refurbishing their gifts.

A grandmother whose own children have grown up beyond the age of dolls, yesterday brought in quite a collection of their discarded dolls she had found and redressed.

Address all gifts to The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund. Each and every gift will be acknowledged in the columns of The Washington Post.

Pay Cut Unjust, Says Dickinson

Iowa Senator Changes Mind on Federal Salaries.

Advocates of restoring the 15 per cent Government pay cut yesterday won another Congressional convert in Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, one of the strongest exponents of the cut at the last session of Congress.

Senator Dickison, who was a member of the Special Senate Economy Committee which drafted the original economy act, yesterday branded as unjust keeping Government wages at low levels in the face of the program to increase prices and wage levels generally.

"Washington has caught its share of the depression, and Government employes have got to live," he said.

Georgetown 'U.' Honors Early Marylanders

Colonists Are Praised at Tercentenary Exercises.

Honoring the Maryland colonists as the first to establish a 'land of sanctuary" in the New World, Georgetown University last night proclaimed the beginning of tercentenary exercises commemorative of its early founders.

The celebration was made the occasion for instituting an Academy of Welcome to the Apostolic delegate, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, D. D., in the presence of a distinguished audience in Gaston Hall. In recognition of the world-wide Catholic Church, the delegate was greeted by professors and students in the 10 foreign languages taught at the university.

Before the exercises began, the Apostolic delegate officiated at the blessing of the new White-Gravenor Science Hall on the college campus This is the last of the new college buildings erected in memory of the founders.

Ambassadors Present.

Representing their respective governments at the exercises were the Assistant Secretary of State, Jefferson Caffery, and the Ambassadors of Japan, Italy, Germany and France. Other diplomatic representatives taking part in the program were the Ministers of Greece, Venezuela, China and Portugal.

Dr. Coleman Nevils, S. J., president of the university, proclaimed the opening of the tercentenary year in commemoration of Father Andrew White, the spiritual leader of the colonists, who set sail from the Isle of Wight November 22 and 23, 1634, arriving in Maryland March 25, 1635, which is Founders' Day at Georgetown.

On behalf of the board of regents, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of the university, extended the welcome in English and took occasion to pay tribute to the Maryland toleration act. Referring to the "untrammeled liberty of conscience first proclaimed by the toleration act of the Maryland colony in 1649," Dr. Walsh added:

Took Permanent Form.

"That precious contribution to the American tradition, that historic act which made Maryland the land of sanctuary, took permanent form and force thereafter in the Constitution of the United States, into which it was incorporated as fundamental law of the land in the very year that Georgetown College took definite shape and found habitation on the banks of the Potomac."

During the Academy of Welcome, greetings in the Spanish language were extended by F. Sacasa, '34, son of the President of Nicaragua. Other greetings followed: Italian, from the Dental School, by Eligio Petrelli, jr., '34; French, from the Graduate School, was a song by Prof. Joseph M. Barbecot; German from the Law School, by Prof. Walter H. Jaeger; Japanese from the Foreign Service School, by F. Irving Burnham, '34; Greek from the College of Arts and Sciences, a chorus by the Glee Club; Chinese from the faculties, by Prof. William Boyd-Carpenter, and Russian from the faculties, by Prof. Leonid Strakhovsky.

Dr. Nevils concluded with an address of welcome in Latin and the apostolic delegate made a brief reply in English. He contrasted the unity of the United States with the desire, he explained, of the Holy Pontiff that all nations be of one family in the teachings of Christ.

Takoma Begins Rites Marking Town Birthday

Takoma Park today will begin a three-day celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of its founding.

The fete marks the anniversary of the filing by Benjamin F. Gilbert on November 24, 1883, of deeds for the town of Takoma Park in Rockville and in Washington. The deed marked transfer of 90 acres of the Gottlieb G. Grammer farm lying on both sides of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Part of the town was in the District and the remainder in Maryland. The section of the form which was subdivided was known as "Rebecca's Choice."

The festivities today, known as Homecoming Day, will be in the form of a tour from 1 to 5 p. m. of eight of the first houses built in Takoma Park and in which the original families live. A style show at the home of Mrs. Le Blond Burdett, 6902 Piney Branch road, will be included in the pilgrimage. The hostesses at each of the houses will wear costumes of 1883, and much of the furniture will be pieces that were used by early settlers.

An admission of 25 cents will be made at each of the houses. Any surplus above expenses will go to charity. The houses will include the home of Mrs. Fred E. Dudley, mother of the first child born in Takoma Park, 204 Carroll street. Other houses are: Cory house, 107 Chestnut avenue; Heaton house, 205 Cedar street; Cady house, corner Eastern avenue and Chestnut street; Dorsey house, 115 Chestnut avenue; Bien house, 60 Elm avenue; Coon house, 48 Sycamore avenue; King house, 7421 Blair road.

A parade will be held at 5:30 p. m. tomorrow and an old settlers banquet will be held at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department house. A union church service will be held Sunday at 8 p. m. at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church. A 50-page booklet describing the celebration and containing historical data is being sold.

Racket Revealed; "Broker" Escapes

Grocery Store Purchased With Worthless Check.

Montgomery County merchants were warned to beware of an alleged new racket last night by H. Albert Buehler, president of the Independent Retail Grocers of Montgomery County, Md.

A well-dressed man approached a Takoma Park grocer and told him he could sell his store if everything was in good shape. Later he returned and told the merchant that he had completed the sale and that a check for $250 was being sent from New York by the buyer to bind the transaction.

When the New York check arrived, he called to collect his $50 commission. The merchant gave him a $50 check on his own bank and then sent the $250 check to the bank for collection. In the meantime, he became suspicious and went to the bank for information. A long-distance call revealed no such account existed at the New York bank and payment on the $50 check was stopped. The salesman escaped, however.

Shaw on "Night Out" Praises Dictators and Roosevelt

Dramatist Says Hitler Has "Couple of Bees in His Bonnet."

London, Nov. 23 (AP). — Bernard Shaw on his annual oratorical "night out" with the Fabian Society eulogized Chancellor Hitler, Premier Mussolini, and Joseph Stalin, and made a passing reference to President Roosevelt as men who are trying to get things done.

Showering Shavianisms on the heads of governments all over the world, the famous dramatist said, the German chancellor is a remarkable and able man, but has "a couple of bees in his bonnet."

"He is attractive and pleasant and has the beauty of a Borzoi dog, but a Borzoi dog has no brains."

Ritchie Favors 10-Mile Bridge

Chestertown, Md., Nov. 23 (Spl.). In a letter this week to local backers of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge project Gov. Albert C. Ritchie stated he has had a recent conference with Baltimore supporters of the project and members of the Public Works Administration.

He said it is not impossible that some compromise may be reached whereby the bridge may be built with the aid of Federal funds.

The governor has taken the stand that the State of Maryland should not be made morally responsible for bonds issued by the Federal Government to the public or for failure of tolls and bonds to pay upkeep and cost of the proposed 10-mile span from Baltimore County to Kent County.
